A Graceful Thing.

Earl Dufferin has sent a personal acknowledgment to the "Barlow Greys" of St. Alban's, Vt., for their attendance at the review in Montreal on the 24th May. This is one of the numerous pleasing and graceful actions of His Excellency, and will still further aid in establishing a firm friendship between Canada and the United States. The letter, as published in a St. Alban's paper, is as follows:—

GOVERNMENT HOUSE,
OTTAWA, May 30, 1878.

SIR, I hope you will not consider I am taking a liberty if I venture to ask your acceptance of the accompanying little volume as a souvenir of your visit at the head of your company to Montreal on the occasion of the Queen's Birthday. I trust you and your comrades will not have to complain of the reception you met with. I have written in my own hand to Her Majesty to acquaint her with the pleasing incident, and the friendly spirit with which a United States corps joined with our own troops in saluting her birthday. I regret very much not having had the pleasure of a private conversation with you, as you are aware the multitude of my engagements did not leave a moment's leisure.

I have the honor to be, sir,
Your obedient, humble servant,
DUFFERIN.

To Capt. J. N. Culver,
Commanding "Barlow Greys," Co. B.,
Vermont, N. G.,
St. Alban's, Vt.

American and Canadian agricultural implements at the Paris Exposition are pronounced by the French journals unrivalled in Europe. Oregon and California wheat attracts great attention, also the mineral exhibit from the Pacific coast. The number of articles sent for exhibition from this continent is double that sent to Paris in 1867, or to Vienna in 1873.

General News.

Garibaldi and Victor Hugo both wrote characteristic letters to the committee of the Workingmen's Congress, lately held at Milan, to protest against a warlike solution of the Eastern question. Garibaldi wrote thus:—"Caperna, May 13.—My dear friends—You have echoed that portion of the English nation, which desires peace, and your voice is worthy of the great Lombard metropolis which drove the oppressors from its midst and made such signal contributions to Italy's resurrection. We have rights still to vindicate and brothers still to redeem, and, be it said without vainglorious vaunting, we never feared war when we were but a few, and certainly we fear it less to-day, although we acquiesce in international arbitration when it is adopted by the rulers of nations. Therefore let us exclaim with your Secolo, and invite every well constituted mind to join in the cry, 'War against every warfare.' Ever yours, G. Garibaldi." The following was received from M. Victor Hugo:—"Paris, May 16.—My dear compatriots of Italy, my brethren—You are right in your reliance on me. I will never weary till my last breath in counselling peace to men and in enjoying it on kings. There are no longer enemies among people. Why then should there be wars among kings? Do you tell it to Milan, and I will repeat it to Paris. The appeal for peace which you make on the 19th of May I will renew on the 29th of the same month, on the occasion of the centenary of Voltaire. Your friend, Victor Hugo."

A Parisian correspondent says that at the ball given by Mme. Alphonse de Rothschild to the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Crown Princess of Denmark got separated from her royal sister. When she tried to make her way alone into the salon reserved for royalty, she was stopped by a lady of the house, who waved her back, not knowing her. Her Royal Highness, who had been considerably jostled by the crowd in her endeavors to join her party, with gentle dignity asked permission to speak to the Princess of Wales. A stare of surprise greeted this request, when the "situation was relieved by the arrival of one of the suite," who had come in search of his royal mistress. Explanations and excuses were showered from all sides; but the Princess, after gracefully acknowledging them, pleaded fatigue and her delicate health, asked for her carriage, and retired from the scene.

The impostor who victimized several persons in Canada recently, by representing himself as the Hon. Richard Westra, brother of Lord Rossmore, has been committed for trial at Gloucester, England. He was confronted by the real Hon. Richard Westra, who testified that the impostor enlisted as a private in his regiment (the 4th Royal Irish Dragoon Guards) under the name of Walter Ashe, about a year ago, remaining only a few weeks. Ashe, who had also been known as Captain Reed, was committed on two charges—one made by a tailor whom he had defrauded, and the other by the keeper of the hotel at which he put up.

Miss Anderson, a nurse in the Montreal Smallpox Hospital, has made a series of charges against the matron. She says the servant girls do not keep the place in the clean and orderly shape it should be kept in, and it is rumored that vermin and rats were at one time free occupants of the wards along with the patients. The dead house, a detached shed near the hospital, was formerly so infested by rats that it was found necessary to provide a metallic box in which to encase the bodies. Sometimes the corpses are allowed to lie on the nutcrasses in the wards where they died for hours after death, to the great annoyance of the living patients.

Poisoning from a very singular cause occurred in Westminster last week, the victim being a little girl, daughter of a man living over Clarke's Bridge. She had gone out into the garden, and noticing a quantity of potatoe bugs began to eat them, afterwards giving as a reason that she thought they were peanuts, "because they cracked in her mouth." Serious illness resulted, but by medical assistance the little child escaped death. It is not positively known whether she was poisoned by the bugs or by the Paris green which had been sprinkled on the plants.

REPORTS from the interior of Georgia, received at Augusta, show in a storm on Sunday, the hailstones were as large as hen's eggs. They killed poultry, hogs and young cattle, and beat through the roofs of houses. Trees, fences and houses were blown down. The crops in the track of the storm were utterly destroyed, and four persons were killed. In some places the fall of hail was so great that it remained on the ground several hours. A schoolhouse near Harlem was blown down, two children were killed, a young man fatally and a young woman badly hurt. Several others were bruised.

On Saturday 2,000 people assembled at Boston to witness the departure of William and Walter Andrews for Havre in the "Nautilus," the smallest vessel that ever attempted to cross the ocean. The craft is nineteen feet two inches long and six feet four inches beam.

It is stated that the teacher in Petersburg, who is to be dismissed for cruelly beating children with a leather cat-o-nine-tails, added to the torture by fastening the victims to the floor during such castigations.
