THE MISSION

The effect of The Mission cannot be counted or measured. No preacher or teacher can tell, as a merchant or farmer dealing with material things, what he has gained or accomplished by his labor. His work is with the immaterial and intangible. The results of it cannot be grasped or seen. There may be evidences, such as the number of those who go forward to the penitent bench and make profession of religion. But these are, in many cases, illusory. Those who are most easily impressed and aptest to cry out are not unfrequently those upon whom the impression has been but slight. The deepest natures, capable of receiving the good seed of the Word and of bringing forth fruit unto salvation, are not those which cry out in fear or joy. We shall not, therefore, be able to estimate the value of the work done here by Messrs. Hunter and Crossley until the effects are seen in the fruits of good living. If it should appear that there is less gluttony and drunkenness, less selfishness, impurity and scandal, more honesty in dealing, more punctual payment of debts, more readiness to help one another, greater courtesy and kindness in the community—then we may conclude that the Evangelists have done a good work here. In the meantime, it is certain that there will be a better appreciation of the less sensational and equally faithful work that is continually being done among us by the resident pastors of Charlottetown.

"ONTARIO! ONTARIO!"

On the evening of the 12th the Patriot had a good hope that North Ontario would be carried by the Liberal Party, so-called. Grit victory seemed then to be in the air. Major McGillivray had been "losing his temper, very much." He was evidently also losing his grip of the riding. "Signs of discontent" were abundant. "The news of Clarke Wallace's resignation as Comptroller of Customs . . . . must have had a depressing effect upon the Tories and will likely have some influence upon the contest. . . . . May the good news of the gallant Major's defeat be to-night flashed over the wires from one end to the other of the Dominion." Thus the pious Patriot spoke and prayed on the evening of the hopeful 12th. But on the evening of the 13th the scene was changed. There was nothing for it then but to announce, telegraphically, that "North Ontario goes Tory by an increased majority," and to make a sickly attempt, telegraphically, to impress its readers with the idea, diametrically opposed to its editorial opinion of the evening before, that "Wallace's resignation assisted the Government in North Ontario." No word of editorial regret or apology for the false hopes that had previously been inspired in its partisans, no editorial explanation of the ominous fact that the Liberal candidate in North Ontario was away behind at the foot of the poll! We wonder not that the Patriot was, for the nonce, struck dumb. The defeat of the Liberal candidate of whom so much was hoped is decisive. It is moreover, full of significance to all who are able to read the signs of the times. Viewed in connection with the result in Haldimand, not long ago, it betokens complete demoralization on the part of the Opposition Party in Ontario. Both Haldimand and North Ontario were, erstwhile, good fighting ground for the Grits. In both, candidates for the Opposition Party were frequently triumphant. North Ontario, if we mistake not, returned a Liberal in the election of 1882. This was after the redistribution of seats of which so much complaint was made, showing that the redistribution had not broken or divided the strength of the party in North Ontario, and that the collapse exhibited in the contest of the 12th inst., was not due to the so-called "gerrymander." In respect to Haldimand, everyone remembers the strong battles not many years ago waged between the Government and the Opposition candidates, and everyone knows that less than a year ago the Grits could not get a straight candidate to hazard a contest there, and were compelled to fall back upon a McCarthyite, who was beaten by a majority of 673. If, then Haldimand and North Ontario are in any sense typical of other constituences in the Province we may reasonably conclude that grit power in Ontario is now practically gone. A large majority of the people of Ontario seem to be disgusted with the short sighted, time-serving, changeable, shuffling, unprincipled and unstatesman-like conduct of the Opposition leaders and their right hand men—the Tartes, Pacauds, and McShanes.

TRICKS THAT ARE VAIN.

In vain is the net spread in front of any bird, and in vain do unscrupulous dealers offer a high price label with a poor wine inside the bottle. The Bordeaux Claret Company are not concerned about a label. They have put before the public a generous, old, robust wine at a price which has absolutely paralyzed the high-priced people. Even those who like it well enough to get wine at half-price have almost been afraid to believe the good news. The new prices for Clarets and Burgundies are $3 and $4 per dozen quarts. Bottled from the wood imported direct from the vineyards of France. Address Bordeaux Claret Co., 30 Hospital St., Montreal. 246

Saturday Night Ticklers — Everybody should visit Haszard & Moore's big show of Christmas goods, to-night. Their store is beautifully decorated for the holiday season; their counters, shelves and tables are loaded with pretty things, and the low prices they ask are ticklers. Follow with the crowd, and be convinced that they lead in Xmas goods.

Report from Clyde River.—A farmer's talk on our knee boots; like them fine; water tight; wore them all last winter; good for this winter; look as good as new. Moral, buy your boots at Goff Bros.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

—Mail and Empire: Mr. Laurier's policy on the trade question is a sort of accident policy.

—It is believed in Conservative circles in Montreal that the election of Sir William Hingston, for the Centre district, is a foregone conclusion.

—Dinuzulu, son and heir of Cetewayo, the Zulu King, who, after the Zulu war, was transported to St. Helena, now writes the Bishop of Zululand that he has accepted the Gospel. He expresses an earnest desire to have teachers sent to his people —It is announced that there are to be some changes in respect to the personel of the Charlottetown Club. It is even whispered that the President's chair is soon to be vacant. But this is said to be due not so much to the denunciations of the evangelists as to the representation of certain political partizan missionaries.

—Montreal Gazette: The United States people are very anxious that Great Britain should submit her differances with Venezuela to arbitration; but they do not seem at all eager to give effect to the decision of the arbitrators in the Behring Sea business, which went against the contentions of the United States. It is so much easier to advise other people to be generous than to be honest yourself.

—The tea and fancy sale in St. Paul's Schoolroom netted about $400, the Salvation Army collected $325 during self-denial week, the Black Knight received $72 on the eve of his departure from the city, and during the Hunter and Crossley meetings the collections and thank offering amounted to $507. It looks as if there was some money in the country after all.

—If our correspondent "Independent" had but looked at the bottom of the second column of the third page of the Guardian of this morning he would there have seen a little telegraphic report showing that the Patron candidate had been elected in North Ontario by a majority of upwards of four thousand! The Guardian does not usually treat thus its most interesting and important news items. An explanation and apology are due its "independent" readers.

—The Mail and Empire remarks that although Mr. Beaugrand declines to swallow Tarte, our contemporary the Globe has managed to give that celebrity its valuable assistance in his march towards the Federal treasury. Now for McShane. The Globe is surely not going to permit that great Liberal leader to struggle in Montreal Centre without extending to him a helping hand. Twice reported to Parliament for corruption, once disqualified, a master hand in the manipulation of contractors, why should not this clean man be duly commended to the people of Ontario.

—The Halifax Herald points to the fact that Tarte is now the Liberal "boss" in Quebec and that such men as Pacaud and McShane are the Liberal candidates and workers and says: "These are Mr. Laurier's "managers" to-day; these are the grit leaders to-day; these are the men, steeped in corruption, whom the Chronicle has the shamelessness to offer to the people as warriors for "clean government" "Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Men would be fully as likely to do so as to get "clean government" from Tarte, Pacaud, Jimmy McShane, and the rest of the "voracious appetites" who now lead and control Mr. Laurier and the grit party."

WHERE IS THE GUARDIAN?

SIR,—What is the matter with the Guardian? Has the editor of that independent (?) paper heard of the grit snow storm in North Ontario? If he has, why did he not give his readers the news of the burial of gritism in that constituency? The grit correspondent of the Guardian in St. John may have neglected to send the result of the elections, but the evening papers here had the returns and the Guardian could have copied them. Less important items are often appropriated by that paper.

INDEPENDENT.

THE WINTER TIME-TABLE.

SIR,—Thank you for your remarks upon the winter railway arrangement. We know it is not at all adequate to the requirements of the times, nor equal to the services given on the meanest of the branches of the other Maritime Provinces. We must not be afraid of "asking for more" either. I believe a shaky arrangement in any part of the service ought to be hit off at once. The Government cannot be expected to give what the people are satisfied to do without. Although we're a small and isolated province we have equal rights with the biggest, and I fear it's our own fault if they are not recognized. With your correspondent, I think we have nothing to be thankful for in this slow and slack winter system, and also that we ought to agitate for two trains and decent cars.

CANADIAN POETS.

This is the interesting and courteous way in which the Ontario poet, Dr. Thomas O'Hagan, replies to the correcting of Father Burke and Mr. W. C. DesBrisay anent Archbishop O'Brien's birth, in the last issue of the London (Ont.) Record:

SIR—Absence from home prevented my noticing earlier two short communications which appeared in your last issue from Father Burke, of Prince Edward Island, and Mr. DesBrisay of Ottawa. I am thankful to both these loyal Maritimists for having corrected through your columns an impression unwittingly conveyed in my letter to the Record—that Charles G. D. Roberts and His Grace Archbishop O'Brien are Nova Scotians by birth. I was quite aware when I wrote that Mr. Roberts is by birth a New Brunswicker and Dr. O'Brien a Prince Edward Islander, but I put them down as Nova Scotia writers because the one has been for nearly twelve years domiciled in Nova Scotia filling the chair of English in its oldest University, King's College, Windsor; and the other has resided in Halifax as the Metropolitan of that Province for a longer period and has been justly recognized for years as one of the leading literary factors of Nova Scotia.

Indeed, it was a matter of supreme indifference to me where any of the poets whom I dealt with in my paper were born. It was enough that they were Canadians either by birth or by adoption, and had made substantial contributions in verse to Canadian letters. On looking over my article, I find that I noticed in some measure the gifts of some forty-five writers, and of these nine belong to the provinces down by the sea. Here they are: Charles G. D. Roberts, Bliss Carmen; Archbishop O'Brien, John Hunter Duvar, Matthew Richey Knight, Arthur J. Lockhart, Alexander Rae Garvie, A. W. Eaton and McPherson, the early Nova Scotia singer. It must be remembered, too, that in the preparation of my paper contributed to the Catholic World magazine. I was not ploughing the field of general Canadian authorship—not dealing even with all our Canadian singers, of every note and plume and hue, for I reserved the sopranos in our academic groves for a separate paper.

Notwithstanding the fact that my study of Canadian poets and poetry met with the warm commendation of the Toronto Catholic Register, the Montreal True Witness, the Boston Pilot, the Toronto Week and I believe the Halifax Herald, I felt how very inadequately I had dealt with such a comprehensive subject. Indeed it would be quite useless to attempt to please every one in the preparation of such a paper. I did not nor would not make the essay. Were I to try to do so perhaps some cowboy poet undergoing poetic incubation around the region of Rainy Lake would come down upon me with a club in one hand and a bunch of poems in the other and asking for an explanation of the omission of his name, make me take the consequences.

Father Burke's local and patriotic pride in the worth of his "right little, tight little island" is natural and commendable, but it is only a segment in the greater and full circle of Canadian patriotism which burns as a sacred altar fire upon every hearth of our great Dominion.

There is very little localizing among our neighbors to the South in the world of letters. Mark Twain, Bret Harte, and Joaquin Miller wrote from the Pacific Coast and charmed the descendants of the Mayflower in their New England home. Maurice, Thompson, Eugene Field and Whitcomb Riley have places on the shelves of the best libraries of Baltimore, Philadelphia, Boston and New York. Sydney Lanier and Paul Hamilton Hayne are quite at home in the land of Emerson Holmes; while the sweet, sad story of Evangeline, the product of a New England poet, is read in the mines of Colorado and Nevada, among the ranches of Montana and down in the cotton plantations of the South.

If in my article I have done any injustice to the poets of the Maritime Provinces I regret it, and trust that some day a writer dwelling down by the sea who knows the prodigal literary gifts of his countrymen better than the present writer will do them full and ample justice.

Prince Edward Island, the home of Father Burke, is not the least in point of genius, literary or otherwise, in the great family of Canadian Provinces. Father Burke will have, however, to keep a close eye on the family register, for I notice that a great many gifted Islanders within the past few years have taken up their abode under the stars and stripes. A recent writer credits James Jeffrey Roche to Boston, and yet the versatile editor of the Pilot has been residing in the Athens of America only a portion of his years, being born in Queen's County, Ireland, and educated in Prince Edward Island. The little island across the strait has been the birthplace of so many gifted men who have gone abroad that I am afraid it will hold Father Burke and his compatriots pretty busy keeping green the memory of the swaddling clothes of Prince Edward Island genius.

Let me, however, assure Father Burke and Mr. DeBrisay that I am pleased with their notes of correction, and trust that articles and strictures alike may prove of some service to Canadian literature.

THOMAS O'HAGAN.

Common Sense of the People Sound.

OTTAWA, Dec. 14.

It is expected that the Hon. John F. Wood will be appointed Acting Comptroller of Customs at the meeting held to-day.

Yesterday Sir McKenzie Bowell had scores of callers to extend their congratulations pour in upon him in such volume as almost to lead one to believe that victory was one personal to himself. Your correspondent had a friendly chat with the first Minister. On being asked his conclusions with regard to yesterday's vote, Sir Mackenzie said: "The result of the election in North Ontario shows that the common sense of the people in dealing with all questions vitally affecting the welfare of the state is sound. It is an evidence to me that a majority of the people of Ontario are desirous of seeing the constitution under which we live maintained in its entirety. The victory was all the greater when we consider the aggregation of elements which were brought into play in order to secure the election of an opponent of the Government.
