

Timmy Sees A Way

who never, never dare a chance will poorly fare. Old Mother Nature. Timmy the Flying Squirrel was a prisoner in a tree out in the middle of the pond of Paddy the Beaver. She was a prisoner because she couldn't swim and she couldn't fly and the long jump to shore was too long for her. She had jumped out of the tree from the top of a very tall tree, but she couldn't jump back again because the tree she was in was not tall enough. In all the Green Forest there was no one quite so unhappy as the pretty little Squirrel who was a prisoner in Paddy's pond. It wasn't so with Timmy. He was bigger and stronger and he could jump harder and farther. So he didn't need to have quite so tall a tree as Mrs. Timmy to jump from and did. There he hunted for food and this brought out to Mrs. Timmy. He did this best to comfort her, but she wasn't to be comforted. She blamed Timmy for getting her into this trouble in the first place. And now she demanded that he get her out of it. For two or three nights he did his best to get food for her and to try to think of some way of getting her ashore. Then one evening he saw a way, or thought he did. He saw Paddy the Beaver swimming across the pond toward his dam. Paddy was towing a big branch. Part of it was well above water. It was big enough for anyone as small as Little Mrs. Timmy to cling to and ride safely. The trouble was Paddy was too far away. Paddy swam right along until he reached his dam. There he cut that branch into pieces.

After that Timmy kept watch. Later that night the same thing happened again. After that Timmy kept watch. Perhaps sooner or later Paddy would tow a branch close to that tree. Then if Mrs. Timmy was brave enough to jump on it, she might get a free ride to shore. He told Mrs. Timmy about it and the two kept watch. Sure enough, the very next night Paddy came swimming past with an even bigger limb, than he had towed before. He swam so close to the tree that Little Mrs. Timmy didn't have to jump. She only had to step out to a small branch that was standing high above the water. She clung to it with all four feet. She was frightened. Of course. She was dreadfully frightened. That very night she was clinging all the harder with all four feet. Paddy didn't even know he had a passenger. His big, thick, flat tail was churning the water like a propeller. It was surprising how fast he could swim towing that big branch.

Timmy ran up the tree the better to watch. In the moonlight he could see the silver wake that Paddy made when swimming, and he could see the part of the branch that was above the water. Paddy was almost over to his dam. Timmy ran up to the very top of the tree and jumped. He glided above the water and landed safely on the base of the tall tree on shore. Then jumping and gliding he reached the end of Paddy's dam just in time to greet Little Mrs. Timmy, who

Study French-Canadian Hopes

By GUY RONDEAU Canadian Press Staff Writer. LEVIS, Que. (CP)—At the suggestion of the province's credit unions, Laval University will make a detailed survey of the financial standing and prospects of the French-Canadian.

Yves Martin, professor in the social science faculty of the Quebec City university, said Thursday the study likely will take about three years to complete. He spoke at the final meeting of the convention of Caisses Populaires Desjardins (Desjardins credit unions) at this city across the St. Lawrence River from Quebec.

The survey is to concentrate on the standard of living, the needs and the hopes of the French-Canadian family, Prof. Martin said. Particular attention will be given to the effect of saving and credit on each family's life.

A cross section of the province's population will be selected for study. The 1,500 delegates Thursday adopted resolutions arising from four days of discussion. RUSH INFLATION CURBS They asked government authorities to use all means at their disposal to fight inflation. They asked for control of installment buying as one step.

Approval was given for a drive by the unions to attract more small borrowers and to encourage all members to place more of their savings with the unions. Delegates also adopted a resolution that the unions extend their student saving program, now largely centred in the Montreal area, to encourage planned saving by students.

Delegates to the convention represented the 1,200 credit union branches in the province.

The July 31 total was $815,600,000, against $795,800,000 at June 30 and $733,800,000 at July 31, 1956, the bureau of statistics said Thursday.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

spades was the four of hearts. Of course, by doing so, he gave up all chance of making thirteen tricks, but he could well afford to squander 30 points, an insignificant investment, if it would lead to making the vulnerable slam. West took the heart with the eight and returned the nine of spades. The purpose of the heart play became clear as South cashed his high cards in both spades and hearts. West didn't follow to the third round of either spades and hearts. West therefore learned West had started with a doubleton in each major. The low heart play was made to force the defenders to reveal their distribution so that declarer would be in better position to know how to play his clubs and diamonds. There was a possible club squeeze if it could be proved either defender originally held J-x-x of clubs, and a diamond squeeze was possible if West had been dealt J-x or 10-x of diamonds. An interesting development occurred early, however, as declarer cashed his spades and hearts. West had to make two discards and became squeezed. He could spare a diamond on the third spade lead, but had to part with either a club or another diamond on the third heart lead. Most squeezes are planned in advance, but there's no law that says you can't collect on a squeeze if you stumble into one.

Opinions Of Teachers Should Count In Training Teachers

By GEORGE McNEVIN Canadian Press Staff Writer. FREDERICTON (CP)—Teachers are not given sufficient voice in the planning and conducting of "in-service" training courses designed to increase the classroom teacher's proficiency, school inspector C. I. Taylor of Courtenay, B.C. said Thursday. Speaking during a panel discussion at the closing session of a Canadian Education Association convention here, Mr. Taylor said teachers are the people doing the work and they are the people whose opinions should be sought. He mentioned two kinds of in-service training activity: credit types sponsored by universities and leading to further educational qualification, and non credit types, such as local workshop, study and institute groups. "But the most successful are those planned, organized and conducted by the teachers themselves. LACK OF LEADERS Another panelist, Dr. G. E. Flower, associate professor of education at Toronto University said schools are not only suffering from a lack of

Model Home Development On Inspection In Toronto

TORONTO (CP)—The "avenue of homes," believed to be unique in Canada, has been opened for inspection with 15 model houses, 12 of which are furnished by Canadian manufacturers.

Located in Guildwood Village, the houses are part of a $50,000,000 residential project in the eastern section of Metropolitan Toronto. It is estimated that by 1969 the development will accommodate 7,500 people in 1,400 houses and 800 apartment units. The community has been planned around more than a mile of lakefront with the houses set in the middle of an almost untouched forest.

There will be everything for adults and children from a private community beach to a recreation centre. The development will include schools, both public and separate, churches and parks. Houses vary in price from $22,000 to $100,000—the latter are luxury houses situated on a bluff overlooking Lake Ontario. Decor in six of the furnished model houses was under the supervision of Barbara Reynolds, director of the Color Co-Ordination Service of Canada, with the co-operation of home furnishings, appliance and textile industries. Mrs. Reynolds has used French, Italian, provincial, colonial and modern furniture in the homes. The color scheme is blue, green, coral, pink, brown, gold and white. MODERN DESIGN "The houses all feature the latest in Canadian design," said Mrs. Reynolds. She has decorated one of the houses with a contemporary theme. She uses warm autumn tones of gold, terra cotta, pumpkin, lemon and olive drab. "Because of the open planning in this house, it was important to have one color scheme and highlight a different color in each room," she said. The living room features a tangerine and charcoal tuxedo suite which blends in with a pair of oyster-shade armchairs. One room with glass walls has a ceramic fishpond. In decorating the six houses, Mrs. Reynolds said she had tried to appeal to a variety of tastes by displaying the widest range of available article with the accent on color.
