
'Magnificent' Cadet Turnout Impresses Admiral Budge

"Despite the fact that the training season is young yet, I am quite impressed with the showing by the cadets" Rear Admiral Patrick D. Budge, DSC, CD, RCN, Ottawa, said here last night.

Admiral Budge told the cadets that he was impressed by their magnificent turnout, despite the severe weather, and that it reflected on their obvious interest in being a sea cadet in the corps.

These remarks were made following his inspection of the Sea Cadet Corps Kent and the Hyndman Navy League Cadet Corps last night on board HMCS Queen Charlotte.

The admiral who is on retirement leave from the Royal Canadian Navy after 42 years service, spoke of the strength of the sea cadet movement across Canada, which now has a total strength of over 15,000 boys between the ages of 11 and 18.

On his visit here, which is part of a tour of the Maritime sea cadet units, Admiral Budge is accompanied by Harry P. Gillard, Toronto, retiring general manager and national secretary of the Navy League of Canada, whose post the admiral is slated to take over.

The inspecting officer, in speaking of his recurement, said although he was looking forward to it, "like most old sea dogs, we never like to cut ourselves clear of our former life."

'This being the case with me" he said "I am looking forward to my coming connections with you sea cadets and can foresee some wonderful associations."

DRESS IS STRESSED

He warned the cadets that they should always keep in mind that he is a stickler when it comes to dress. "Always make certain that every item of your dress is spotless" he said "remember that it only takes one grubby item to mar the appearance of your entire uniform."

On his arrival at the local naval base, Admiral Budge and Mr. Gillard were met on the quarterdeck, by Captain L. E. Prowse, VRD, commanding officer of Queen Charlotte, Jack Smallwood, president of the Island Division of the Navy League; Lt. Jack Morris, commanding officer RCSCC Kent, and Lieut. Cmdr. Harry Thomsen, commanding officer Hyndman Corps.

Following his inspection of the cadets in parade formation, where he was accorded a general salute by a guard-of-honor under the command of Lieut. Reginald Shields, he then took the salute in the march-past.

SEAMANSHIP KNOTS

This was followed by the cadets breaking up into classes, and a tour of the classrooms by the admiral, who spent several minutes in each quizzing the cadets on questions of seamanship, knots and general knowledge.

The drill period concluded the two visitors were the guests of the Island division at a reception and buffet lunch in the wardroom, where Admiral Budge was given the opportunity to meet with all the Island officials of the Navy League and the officers of the local naval reserve.

About noon today the visitors depart by air for Sydney, N.S. the start of their swing through Nova Scotia.

Eleven Homeless As House Burns

Eleven persons were left homeless yesterday morning after fire of undetermined origin ripped through a three storey dwelling at 190 Elm Avenue.

Left homeless were: Gordon Carr, his wife and son, who live on the ground floor; Mr. and Mrs. Wendall MacPherson, and son, who lived on the second floor, and Mr. and Mrs. Roland Oliver and three children, who lived in the top tenement.

The fire which originated between the ceiling of the second storey and the floor of the third, caused total ruin to the top and second floor. Several appliances were removed from the second floor and water damage was extensive to the bottom floor.

The building, owned by Gordon Carr, was covered by insurance, but no estimate of the damage was available.

The fire was reported at 9.26 a.m. by Mrs. Carr and the last firefighting rig left the scene shortly after 11 o'clock.

Three trucks were called to the scene, including the ladder truck and two pumpers.

Three other drunk and incapables completed the docket, two fined $20 and costs or ten days and another given a 10-day suspended sentence.

Strong Campaign Language Is Used By Socred's Leader

REGINA (CP)—Social Credit Leader Thompson says Eric Kierans, president of the Montreal Stock Exchange, "made a fool of himself" in a recent speech.

He told a press conference Monday that Mr. Kieran's speech last week in Chicoutimi, Que., attacking Social Credit monetary policy, was based on false premises.

"I have answered him in a very positive way on funny money. The people can decide."

Mr. Thompson said reports from party workers in Quebec indicated Mr. Kierans's speech backfired and is drawing support for Social Credit.

"Even the Liberals who are fighting us alone in Quebec admit that there has been no event that has been so much in our favor as Mr. Kierans's talk.

CHALLENGE ISSUED

Mr. Thompson said later at a businessmen's luncheon that Mr. Kierans had been challenged to a debate on Social Credit economic proposals with Martin Kelln of Regina, president of the Social Credit Association of Canada. The debate would be held only if it received nation - wide television and radio coverage, Mr. Thompson said.

Mr. Thompson said during the press conference that he believes Prime Minister Diefenbaker and Liberal Leader Pearson are fighting their last political battle.

"Here we are trying to run this country with men out of World War One. The old approach is just no longer good enough.

"In this day and age we need a younger and more vigorous and dynamic approach to the problems we have."

On the party's nuclear arms policy, Mr. Thompson said he was "quietly maintaining" the official stand for a non-partisan parliamentary committee to decide the issue. Deputy Leader Real Caouette's stand against acquisition of nuclear arms would not split the party.

Mr. Thompson said Mr. Diefenbaker has tried to bribe the electorate by appointing three new cabinet ministers. He said the appointments, announced Monday, were "just sheer politics."

Ladies Hats Tell Character Story

NEW YORK (CP) — The woman who invariably buys hats with bold, uncluttered crowns has a wildly - generous, sexually - aggressive nature, according to the chapeau-analysis of some top British milliners.

This is reported by The Insider's Newsletter, a weekly news publication circulated among businessmen.

The newsletter does not identify the British millers but says they have developed a character - reading science, claiming that hat-analysis may be more revealing than fingerprints.

Here are some of the tipoffs listed by the Newsletter in a copyrighted article:

1. The woman who invariably buys hats with bold, uncluttered crowns has a wildly-generous, sexually aggressive nature. If she also likes narrow brims, she is virtually announcing her readiness to "pounce."

2. Wide - brim fanciers are frigid, calculating and narrow-minded.

3. Feather - topped females tend to be as frivolous, trivial and feather-brained as their preferred headgear.

4. Pillboxes indicate a shrewd, smooth, "very cool" customer.

5. Flower petals are the pick of the harmless, amiable but entirely negative woman — docile, pliable and not much else.

Drama Critics Face New Rule

LONDON (AP) — A newspaper and its drama critic agreed in court Monday that theatrical managements are entitled to decide which critics, if any, should watch the opening night of a play.

Beaverbrook Newspapers, which publishes The Daily Express, and drama critic Bernard Levin, were defendants in an action brought by Arnlit Ltd., controlled by impresario Emille Littler.

Helnus B. Milmo, counsel for Arnlit, told the high court Levin was invited to see the first night of the play Signpost to Murder. But after an unflattering reference to the play before it opened the invitation was withdrawn.

The paper returned the guest ticket to Arnlit, but Levin subsequently went to the play's first night on the guest ticket issued to another newspaper man. He then wrote a review headed:

"Well, I did see it. And it's absurd."

The defendants now recognize that a first night is a special and privileged occasion and that theatrical proprietors and managements are entitled to select their guests and exclude anyone without taking any steps to prevent entry, said Milmo.

The defendants apologized for trespassing at the theatre and agreed to pay substantial damages and indemnify the plaintiff's legal costs.

Rotarians Told Of Role Of Sports In Education

Easter seals will hold the spotlight on the Island for the next couple of weeks, following the opening of the sales campaign by Lieutenant Governor F. Walter Hyndman at the Rotary luncheon in the Charlottetown Hotel yesterday. He made the initial purchase from "P.E.I. Timmy 1963"—Karen Newson.

His Honor in tendering his cheque for the seals wished the crippled children represented by Timmy "Good Luck" and a speedy recovery from your own personal difficulty".

"I would like to thank you for being Timmy 1963 on behalf of more than 200 crippled children on Prince Edward Island and I ask your support on their behalf by buying Easter seals", Karen told the meeting.

She has been successfully operated on several times and the final operation several weeks ago gives promise of complete recovery and the restoration of her limbs to normal unassisted functions with her return home shortly. Karen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Newson, Charlottetown and a grade three pupil at West Kent School.

The guest speaker was Angus MacFarlane, physical education director for Mount Allison University who deplored the campaign of crash education as in Russia "which is not good enough from my point of view," the speaker stated.

"Contrary to the views of many, the students of today are as bright and brilliant as they were when we were youngsters", the speaker said.

VALUE STRESSED

He stressed the value of athletics in the education process as most such extra-curricular activities involve observing, hearing and thinking.

'Learning as much from losing as winning tends to develop the true enjoyment of participating and fits the student to more readily accept losses in life if and when they occur," Mr. MacFarlane said.

CONFIDENCE NEEDED

"Handicapped children and students should never be given the impression that they are receiving special consideration. My experience is that such young folk want confidence and not sympathy, and also some financial aid. They desire to be more successful than any of us", the speaker said.

"They want to be challenged, they want to be told, and we must believe in them. If there is any fault it is ours," he said.

Mr. MacFarlane was born in Verdun, Que., and served as a flying officer overseas. Following his discharge he entered McGill University, receiving his BA in 1950. He taught English, French, mathematics, music and science in Quebec province until 1956 when he joined the staff of Mt. Allison University, where he is also dean of residence.

Special head table seating included Lieut-Governor Hyndman, Dr. F. M. Found, medical superintendent of the sanatorium; Dr. Tudor Gencheff, Canadian Rehabilitation Council; T. D. DeBlois, president Rehabilitation Centre; Miss I. Arsenault, provincial executive director, Red Cross.

Other guests were David Boswell, P.E.I. director physical education; Dr. Cyril Sinnott, Keith Pickard.

The guests were introduced by chairman W. R. Jenkins as was also the guest speaker who was thanked by co-chairman, Claude Hunter.

Japanese Ladies Coming To Island

Miss Setsuka Sato of Tokyo, Japan expects to come to this province later this year and is desirous of talking with her a girl-friend, Miss Yoko Makano, King Lion Ian B. Webster of the Parkdale Lions club told this paper last night. The Parkdale club had earlier offered to sponsor the young lady in her one-year's trip to Canada and she has explained that after investigation, her trip which had previously been expected earlier in the year, has had to be delayed in order that she may meet the requirements. The young lady belongs to Kodaira—City in the Japanese capital.

The Parkdale Lions voted the sum of $100 to the Billy Mulligan fund and are arranging a 5-0-50 draw as soon as possible with the hope of getting an additional $100 or possibly more for the fund.

Five members of the Charlottetown Lions Club visited the Parkdale club last night and reclaimed their gong. This is something that can be taken by a visit of five or more members from a rival club, but can be reclaimed in the same manner as the City club took it last night.

Mr. Webster presided.

up before Easter, and House business will not be hurried to do so."

There have been very few comments on whether or not there will be controversial legislation introduced at this session. Most cabinet ministers have said that the major piece of legislation will deal with reform of the province's electoral system. Other than that, they say, legislation will be in the form of amendments to existing acts.

Expected to be dealt with, however, are changes in the Marketing Act, provision of funds for Centennial Year celebrations, a minimum speed law for the province, legislation regarding the dumping of garbage on provincial highways; a job classification plan for civil servants, changes in the Hospital Insurance Act and inclusion of grain as a crop to be covered by insurance.

There has been no indication of what tactics the Opposition will use at this session. Liberal Leader A.W. Matheson has refused to comment on the session.

"I'll do my talking in the House," he said, "that's the place for it."

As a result of the last election, Conservatives now have 19 seats and the Liberals have 11.
