Granting Of Permit Indicates RCMP To Get New Quarters

MONTAGUE — All Montague town councillors were present for the monthly meeting of the council last evening in the council chambers. Mayor B. H. Yeo presided. Mostly routine business took up the time of the meeting.

The approval of a winter works program for the extension of the sewer line on John Beer Drive and for work at the dump was received by the clerk, G. Arnold Wightman.

Fifteen personal trophies are to be purchased by the town and presented to the juvenile ball team who were Maritime champions for the 1965 season. These trophies are not to exceed $5 each.

The application for a building permit on Wood Island Hill was granted. This new structure which is to be 100 by 44 feet is reported being built for the use of the RCMP by Mat Redmond of Vernon. It is thought the building will house the officer in charge as well as any single men of the force.

The necessity of a blinker light at the intersection of Queens Road and the main street came up for considerable discussion and further investigation is to take place.

STREET HANDING
It was also pointed out that the sanding of the through streets of the town should be done by the provincial government and the street committee are to contact the minister in this connection. It was also pointed out that the provincial government had been very cooperative in the past and no doubt would once again assist in this problem.

The council on a unanimous vote declared Monday Dec. 27 as a civic holiday. A vote of thanks was extended to Chief Coffin and his department for the erection of the Christmas tree at the Garden of the Gulf Museum and to police officer Downe for the decorations to the town hall.

The town clerk advised that $1744 had been collected in current taxes, that $158 had been received in arrears, $180 in other taxes and $44 in tickets to the dump had been received during the month.

In the police report it was stated the sum of $203 had been received and nine cases had been before the court.

Men's Group Addressed By Prince MP

MONTAGUE — Rev. David MacDonald, Alberton, was guest speaker at the Trinity Men's monthly dinner held at Lower Montague Hall last evening by the Lower Montague group.

The dinner was served by the women of the Lower Montague church. Approximately 50 members of the club were present.

Mr. MacDonald in his address dealt with community problems, involving both religion and politics, recreation for youth, education, involvement of people and serving of men in the needs they have.

He pointed out that Christians must not leave out any part of life and politics and religion are part of life. He also mentioned his close working relationship with Rev. Gerald Steele of Alberton parish.

The devotional period was performed by Williamourke and the meeting was chaired by Arnold Vandenberg, president of the club.

Head table guests besides Mr. MacDonald were, Rev. Russell Burns, Richard Campbell, secretary of the association. The guest speaker was introduced by G. Arnold Wightman and thanked by Cyrus A. Shaw.

Members of both the Canadian parties.

CLOCKWISE TWIRL
Some interesting points Mr. Stewart noted about living in the Southern Hemisphere were the fact that the water goes down the drain in a clockwise direction exactly opposite to the way in the Northern Hemisphere. In the Southern Hemisphere there is an entirely different set of stars, and the fact that one travelled north to reach the warmer areas rather than south as we do.

Mr. Stewart left New Zealand last Thursday evening, travelling 17,000 miles in 48 hours and was home Friday night. Because he crossed the International Date Line he picked up an additional 24 hours, though in theory he didn't gain a day.

To travel his 45,000 miles Mr. Stewart used the facilities of 14 different airlines. He reports that he found the service on Quantas, the Australian national airline, the best. The service was so good he said in order to get some rest he found it necessary to hang a "do not disturb" sign around his neck.

Province's Conference Delegate Has Exciting New Zealand Tour

By A.C. HOLMAN

"Every Canadian has to get away to appreciate his own country," said J. David Stewart who has recently returned from the 14th annual conference of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association just concluded in New Zealand.

Mr. Stewart, a member of the legislature and former provincial secretary, attended the conference as a member of the Canadian delegation.

Mr. Stewart presented a paper to the conference on agricultural development and he reported it was well received and that after he had read the paper he received many questions concerning agricultural development, especially from delegates to the conference from the "developing nations."

While in New Zealand the delegates to the conference were taken on extensive tours of all parts of both islands which make up New Zealand and they met with many different farm groups and organizations throughout the country and they too all expressed a high degree of interest in the remarks made by Mr. Stewart.

New Zealand being mainly a grass growing country Mr. Stewart says he saw little that could be applied to Island agriculture practices, with the exception of aerial top dressing.

Aerial top dressing is a method of spreading fertilizer, mainly super phosphate, in hard to reach areas from airplanes. With one or two applications scrub country can be transformed into arable, useful land. The planes used in this work are mainly Beavers and Buffalos, manufactured by the de Havilland corporation in Toronto and a lot of the pilots who fly them are Canadians living in New Zealand.

New Zealand is mainly sheep raising country. Because of the wet climate and the heavy grass crops in New Zealand it is possible to raise eight sheep to the acre whereas in Australia, the other large sheep raising country in the Commonwealth, it is only possible to raise slightly more than one sheep per acre.

The breeds differ, too. In Australia where the climate is drier sheep are the most popular, but in the damper climate of New Zealand, sheep of the Romney variety are in greater evidence.

Mr. Stewart said the New Zealand people were very friendly and the entertainment and the efforts they made to show the delegates around their country were amazing.

New Zealand, according to Mr. Stewart, is a one-class society and has a highly socialized form of government. They have virtually no unemployment, only about 400 out of the 2,500,000 people are unemployed.

Mr. Stewart said he was very fortunate in having as a member of the group he toured the country with, Sir Walter Nash, a man, who now over 80 was a former premier of New Zealand, and who is still very spry and active.

RHODESIAN QUESTION
Mr. Stewart reported the conference began with the African delegates demanding that the Rhodesian question be placed first on the agenda and there was fear in the first days of the conference, because of the heated discussion that arose, that this might well be the last of such conferences to be held. But Mr. Stewart reports as the discussions went along the members were able to talk out their many differences they had and he feels the discussions were extremely valuable from this point of view.

The Africans were desirous of Britain taking immediate action to remove Prime Minister Ian Smith from office, but the action taken by Great Britain was vigorously defended by the leader of their delegation to the conference, the Right Honourable Emmanuel Shinwell, a senior parliamentarian in Britain.

Mr. Stewart said the Canadian delegation were highly thought of by everyone who attended the conference. He said the Canadians generally took on the role of peacemakers and he thought they carried it off very successfully. During their tour of New Zealand, Mr. Stewart said they were shown a geo-thermal development for producing power from steam created by hot springs found many feet below the surface of the earth. Wells are drilled to bring the steam to the surface where it is converted into electric energy.

In the southern island agriculture is most predominant, but in the northern island there are large amounts of timber produced. Mr. Stewart said they have a variety of white pine which was brought out from California many years ago. This pine will still grow within 25 years.

In the timber area there is one paper plant and Mr. Stewart was shown around this plant by a foreman, Maurice Higgins, formerly from the Island and brother of Dr. James Higgins, the head of the Island Civil Service Commission.
