Let's Talk It Over

Highways, like children, are sometimes grown-up before we realize it. The eastern approach to the Town of Summerside is an example. This area has been built up very fast, but it is still not classed as a "built-up area" with the consequence that cars are allowed to travel at the open highway speed of 50 miles an hour, and make no mistake about it, they do.

The pavement on that section of the highway was laid about the year 1950, and its condition is a recommendation for cement as an ideal material for building highways, but the road is one of the narrowest, if not the narrowest, which you will find among our paved highways.

If conditions in the Prince County jail in Summerside are as attractive as reports would have us believe, this epidemic of breaking out of jail shouldn't last long. If reported conditions are true, and continue for any time, there will probably be another kind of jail-break—somebody breaking into the jail! Crashing the party, as it were.

The halcyon days are over for school children. The care-free days at the beaches are just something to remember, and regretation has reared its stern visage again. You might be surprised, however, if you knew how many school children of all age-groups look forward to the first school days with something akin to pleasure. On the credit side is the excitement and adventure of a new grade for most the fellowship of the classroom, which is sometimes broken up by vacation, and the fact that a long succession of even care-free, nothing-to-do days can become a trifle homesome after a time. We'll wager that if one day the grown-ups decreed that there should be no more school, the youngsters would be up in arms about it in a matter of months.
