Wall Paper Remnants To-Day

We've just been sorting up and arranging our wall paper stock.

Found a number of small lots—too small to include in our "99" samples.

Some for Parlors.
Some for Bedrooms.

*Some for hall, kitchens, dining rooms etc., etc.,

We want the room. So we've tied up each lot, paper and border together marked them at a fraction of their cost placed them on sale—second floor.

Perhaps enough for three or four days selling—(about 200 lots)—but if you're wise you'll be here to day.

MOORE & McLEOD

THE WALL PAPER MEN.

A SLIGHT UPON THE LIBERAL LEADERS.

(Montreal Star.)

The Vancouver World is a staunch Liberal paper, but it evidently has not caught the spirit of the new Liberalism. In a recent issue it refers to the late Hon. Alexander Mackenzie as "beyond dispute the grandest personage in Canadian politics for the past half century." This is rank treason, or else the World has forgotten the existence of those eminent statesmen who led the party to-day. Call Mr. Mackenzie a grand personage as you please, but Sir Wilfrid Laurier does and fulfils as few? Could he have spent as much money in a given time as Mr. Tarte and boast as loudly of his profligacy? Could he have arranged as many "deals" as Mr. Blair? Could he have unblushingly made such a bargain with the Yukon railway contractors as Mr. Sifton? Could he have so blinded himself to the general abandonment of party principles as Sir Richard Cartwright? Could he even have crossed the ocean as did Mr. Dobell in search of a fast ocean ferry? Could he have tolerated the spoils system as every member of the present Liberal leaders have done?

Mr. Mackenzie may have been "a grand personage" with his old-fashioned notions of public honesty, public purity and public morality; but the World forgets that with the coming of the new Liberalism those high-minded ideas have become obsolete. They don't count any longer. A Liberal leader pretending to hold them to-day—one who would sacrifice office for principle, who would fulfil his solemn pledges, who would insist on the economy he had preached, who would adhere to the party's long-taught principles he had advocated—would not be a grand personage in the ranks of his party, but he would be a pretty lonesome one. His splendid isolation would be as remarkable as the World's selection of Mr. Mackenzie as the grandest personage of the past half century, when the present day has given a Laurier, a Tarte, a Sifton, and a Blair.

A card on the outside of office door says: "Gone to lunch. Be back in ten minutes." And, the man will be there on time. That is, for some days, weeks or even months, he will. Then he will be at home occasionally for a day. He'll tell you he had a headache—a turn of cholera morbus, or maybe he'll say he had a lump in his stomach and felt too miserable to move. The lump was probably two or three ten-minute lunches condensed.

The man who "bolts" his lunches will find Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets the best friend he ever met.

This is no case of biliousness, constipation, indigestion, "heart burn," or any of the rest of the night-mare brood that these little "Pellets" will not cure. They cure permanently. Send 31 cents in one-cent stamps to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., and receive Dr. Pierce's 1608 page page "Common Sense Medical Adviser," profusely illustrated.

A REMINDER

DEAR SIR,—I notice on the first page of your issue of Friday last, where the Hon. Peter Mitchell very justly remarks, "It is perhaps a little too late in the day, but public men who serve their country are generally treated with neglect. The public has a short memory and easily forgets the benefits which it receives from the efforts of those who have served it, it is however pleasant to find that the man whose efforts brought about Confederation, is not entirely forgotten."

On reading the above, it brought to my recollection an important movement of over thirty years ago, in our own Island, which has been of greater benefit to the farmers of this colony than even that of confederation. I refer to what is known as the Tenant League agitation, of which Ross' Weekly was the avowed exponent. Now I would like to ask through the columns of THE EXAMINER what has ever been done to reward the man who from week to week advocates the abolition of the Leasehold System until the question was settled? I have understood that he lost his business through his advocacy of the question and that those who pretended to be his friends were the first to turn their backs upon him. This man is still living, I believe in humble circumstances. Surely those who received a pecuniary benefit from the removal of the Leasehold System should make some tangible effort to show their appreciation of his work while he is still alive, and not wait until he passes on to another world.

NEED BRITISH ANNEXATION

Only Solution of the Difficulties in Samoa

LOND N, Feb. 20.—The Melbourne correspondent of the Times says:—"The Samoan correspondent of the Melbourne Argus writes that the only solution of the difficulties there lies in an immediate annexation of the island by Great Britain. He says the natives throughout the entire group are almost unanimously favourable to such a step, and that it is also ardently desired by the British and American residents."

"Falling annexation, the complete disarming of the whole population is imperative; and in the opinion of the correspondent of the Argus, the abolition of the Kingship is absolutely necessary to prevent constant disturbances. The rival chiefs, he says, would be satisfied if appointed to rule their own districts with small salaries."

WOMEN ON THE SCHOOL BOARD

Sir,—I am sorry to see that my little letter, published in Friday's issue of THE EXAMINER has made "old maid" cross; for in it I only intended to set forth, in a good natured way, a few of the characteristics of what is called "the opposite sex"; and to show their little peculiarities might unfit them for taking part in the management of our schools.

Now, whether I am really a "School Teacher" or not is beside the question, though, in passing, I may remark that from the praise bestowed by "Old Maid" upon that class, it is pretty evident that she is one them or, at all events, closely related to one of them. Whether she is an "Old Maid" is not nearly so certain! But let me re-call the assertions implied in my first letter. The implications were that women talked all together at the same time; that "because" was very generally thought by them to be a sufficient reason; that they repeated themselves; and that it would not be modest or right that all questions, such for instance as those that affect the moral, etc. of the scholars should be discussed by a board composed of women and men. "Old Maid" has not denied the first three; as to the fourth she remains discreetly silent. The first three, then not having been denied, we must take them to be admitted; and this, being the case, can anyone believe it would be an advantage to have women on the board? Why the work would never be done. The fourth objection that I raised is, if possible, of a more serious nature, and is one that our readers must think out for themselves. I dare not engage upon it. "Old Maid's" letter, then, has not answered mine. The only paragraph in it that looks like an argumentative assertion is when she says that "many girls are as well informed in Parliamentary usage as their fathers." This is delightfully conclusive, in a feminine sense, when we remember that by far the greater majority of fathers know nothing whatever of Parliamentary usage.

A woman's letter always contains the most important part, to her, at the end, or in the postscript,—so in this one of Old Maid's. I am accused of being unmanly in bringing a lady's name into print. No, my dear Old Maid, you are wrong. Persons who aspire to or place themselves in public positions, whether ladies or gentlemen, must accept public criticism; and some of these days, when the female sex shall have thrown off all the chains of its bondage and perhaps Old Maid herself is running in the Conservative interest for a seat in Parliament, she must make up her mind to accept, without a murmur, the criticisms of the Patriot newspaper. She will, most likely, be accused of breaking most of the commandments; certainly of all sorts of bribery and corruption; and, no doubt, amongst others, of going about with half a dozen of whiskey hidden in her skirts to debauch the free and independent electors. That will be nice for a "lady"—will it not?

ESTEEMED EXCHANGES.

Mail and Empire: There is one good thing about the Washington negotiations. Our Commissioners have had a splendid time.

Montreal Gazette: The situation at Washington, judging by the despatches, is that the things the United States are to receive in connection with the Joint High Commission have been arranged. There is no trouble, however, about what the United States is to give. And the Laurier party thinks its political fate depends on its representatives getting something. The situation is ominous.

NEWS NOTES.

Hon. Mr. Dobell's visit to England is for reasons which are difficult to fully understand, arousing much anxiety in Anglo-Canadian circles lest the Canadian government should be preparing to lower the standard of the projected fast service. Van Horne's recent speech at Quebec has been much commented on, and awakens an emphatic echo. One leading Anglo-Canadian, whose position and wealth figured prominently in previous fast service negotiations declared in my presence: "I will neither lift a finger nor give a sixpence to aid in a compromise service. If Canada fancies that a seventeen or eighteen knot service will do she makes a great mistake. She can afford to provide nothing short of the very best on the Atlantic. To do anything less is childish, and would sacrifice the great advantages she should reap from her splendid geographical position."
