ELLEN'S DIARY

Black Fleece Is Saved For Best Knitting Yarn

"We sha'n't have to look for work today, I'm thinking" James offered with a twinkle this morning at breakfast. "We know what's ahead." So beautiful the morning was, all blue and golden, the wind only a breath as it entered by the open door. An Oriental poppy in a lawn-bed which through the years has "by hook and by gift" gathered there some strange but attractive bedfellows, was opening its peony-like buds of scarlet. A robin in the oak above praised "de Lawd" in a bright ripple of song-for life and food and the day so fair. How matter the chilly winds of the past or those which might come again? Today was enchanting.

Above the hose on the hill, set down comfortably there amid its green meadows, great clouds floated-while islands on a wide sea of summer-blue.

"We needn't think we can finish it today," James observed, "even if all goes well, it will take us into tomorrow."

The sheep-shearing, that was the chore that was beckoning. In prospect it was no formidable task to the farmers, at the same time it lacked the fascination of the cropping, which they had self able to share the honors in workmanship with the rest. By dusk a highly pleasing report of the work accomplished was brought home to the farmwives, though as James had suspected at the outset, it is to continue on into tomorrow.

And "How many black fleeces will we save for the knitting-yarn, James asked then.

Quickly in fancy a wintry wind blew cold about the eaves. There were edges of frost on the panes. Footsteps crunched on the yard-paths.

Already winter was casting a cool shadow before. But like the robin we had had today, so summery and pleasant.

"Oh you'll have to ask Jeanie!" we said.

Until tomorrow—Diary—Good Night.

MR. MRS. JAMES MILTON GIBSON

Father Officiates At His Daughter's Marriage

A pretty June wedding of wide interest in the Maritimes took place at 2.30 p.m. Saturday June 7th at the Kensington United Church, when Helen Margaret, only daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Alexander MacKay, Kensington, was united in marriage with James Milton, son of Mrs. George E. Gibson and the late Mrs. Gibson, Moncton, N.B.

The church was decorated with baskets of white chrysanthemums and pink carnation and the guest pews were marked with white bows of ribbon and lilies of the valley.

Rev. Mr. MacKay, father of the bride officiated at the double ring ceremony assisted by Rev. Lewis M. Murray.

Rev. Mr. Murray played the wedding music and accompanied Miss Margaret Murray who sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "O Perfect Love".

The bride was given in marriage by Mr. James S. Mason, Moncton, and was attended by Mrs. Harold Randall as matron of honor. Mr. Cecil Gibson, brother of the groom, was best man and the ushers were Messrs. Harold Randall and Garry Gibson of Moncton.

The bride's gown was floor length and of white silk embroidered tulle. The fitted bodice featured a scooped neckline bordered with tulle and pseudo pearls and fastened in the back with tiny covered buttons.

The long sleeves tapered over the hands and a bustle back enhanced the bouffant skirt which was worn over bridal satin. A shoulder-length veil of bridal illusion fell from a crown of crystal pleated tulle encrusted with crystals over seed pearls. The bride's bouquet was Sweetheart roses encased in Gladioli.

The maid of honor wore a ballerina length dress of ice blue imported satin brocade fashioned on princess lines and draped at the back. She wore a matching headdress and carried a nosegay of varied colored roses.

Mrs. MacKay chose for her daughter's wedding, a two piece dress of white and blue silk with rose and navy accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

The mother of the groom was attired in a dress of Dior blue with navy and white accessories and a corsage of talisman roses.

A reception for eighty-five guests was held immediately following the ceremony in the Church Assembly Hall and was catered to by members of the Senior Women's Association.

The bride's table was served by friends of the bride, Miss Shirley Schofield, Fredericton, N. B., and Miss Rena Thomas, Moncton, and was centered with a three-tier wedding cake flanked by white candles in silver candelabra. Floral decorations were tulips and spring flowers.

Tea was poured by Mrs. Harry Saul, Toronto, aunt of the bride and Mrs. F.G. MacLellan, sister of the groom.

The toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. L.M. Murray and responded to by the groom. Congratulatory telegrams were read by Rev. A.E. Haley of Cavendish, P.E.I. Miss Dorothy MacKenzie was in charge of the guest book.

For a honeymoon trip to New York and other Canadian and American cities, the bride donned an azure blue sheath dress with three-quarter length matching coat and white accessories. Her corsage was pink roses. HOUSEHOLD HINT

The more water cut roses can get, the longer they last. They can absorb the greatest amount when the stems are cut very short and the flowers floated in a shallow bowl.

Some of the new leather dress shoes have corrugated crepe soles for added comfort. The soles should be sponged often with suds and water to retain buoyancy.

Prevent corrosion of your auto cable terminals with a coating of ordinary vaseline.
