The Launch of the Bark "Effendi" at Summerside Oct. 14th, 1882.

The gallant ship lay on the blocks The sturdy men with blows and knocks, Are working by the keel, A hundred boys are on the decks
The rails just reaching to their necks, Their hearts as true as steel.

From fore and aft the Esaign blows That flag of liberty Now flowing over Egypt's land From Pyramids and mounds of sand Setting the people free.

At the ships prow a maiden fair, With sunny eyes and flaxen hair, One you would like to wed, Dashes a bowl of sparkling wine That came from Dutchland or the Rhine, Right on the gilded head.

And so entrancing to the ear
The maiden spoke both loud and clear, And musical and slow,
"Sail on"—"Effendi"—evermore, From sea to sea, and shore to shore, May favoring breezes blow.

And from your hatches and your hold Come many piles of shining gold Your owner's heart to cheer, May He who ruleth o'er all lands, And holds the tempests in his hands, Your crew keep safe and near.

"Down dog-shores"—the master builder cries,
"Down dog-shores"—each hardy man replies,
And crashing go the blocks.
She moves—and glides along the ways, Whilst round her rudder heave the sprays, The ship has cleared the stocks.

"There!" "There!"—she goes—"she goes"—cry they.
Three British cheers are sent on high And ring on everywhere.
A list—a crash—a plunge and dip.
"Good luck"—"good luck you gallant ship!" She's safe upon the tide.

The French in Africa.

The short cable dispatch which stated the French had begun the construction of a railroad between the Niger and Senegal rivers, in Africa, has a significance largely out of proportion to its brevity. The proposed railroad would run from a point on the Senegal river near the head of navigation, about 350 miles in a southeast direction, coming upon the Niger river near the point in that stream where navigation ends.
The work will be a costly one, but it will provide an easy means of extending trade throughout the whole of western Soudan.
From the point tapped by the railroad to the falls of the Niger river is a distance of more than 1200 miles. The country is said, by travellers who have passed through it, to be densely inhabited by a people who have made some considerable headway in acquiring the arts of civilization. For a long time the French have desired to extend their trade to this region. The surveys made in the desert of Sahara were for the purpose of arriving at this result. It has probably been found that a railroad constructed across this sandy waste would be a highly unprofitable work; hence enterprise has turned to the more circuitous, but certain, means of communication offered by the Senegal and Niger river route. The French already possess a settlement at the mouth of the Senegal river, and will, doubtless take all the precautions necessary to secure for themselves whatever advantage may come from the trade opening of this central African district.

How to Improve the Horse's Pace.

We will take, to begin with, a horse of the slowest walking pace, say about three miles per hour. To improve this, put him alongside of a horse, either led or in harness, whose walk is about three and a half miles per hour; and when the three-mile horse has come up to this, then put him alongside of a four-mile, and so on increasing until he has reached the utmost limits of pace it is possible. The object is to keep him steadily to walk, and not permit him to break it. Trotting horses are improved in the same manner; they are kept as strictly to this pace as possible whenever exercised or used, and not allowed to gallop. If they break into a gallop any time on being urged to do their utmost on the trot, they are instantly checked and brought back to the trot. But if a horse is naturally a slow walker, it will require considerable time and no little patience to much increase his speed at this gait.
A reliable fast walker must be born so, and the best, quickest, and in fact cheapest way to get at this is to breed him. For this purpose select the fastest-walking stallion to be found, and breed him to the fastest-walking mares obtainable. As a general rule these will drop fast-walking colts. The fastest of these when grown should be selected for breeding, and so go on rearing and selecting till the breed is as well established for fast walking as those of fast trotters or racers now are.
Some may think that special breeding to obtain fast walkers is not necessary, and that any sort of a horse can be trained to it. Such doubters have only to compare the anatomy of a fast-walking horse alongside of that of a slow-walker, to be convinced of the necessity of breeding for this special purpose, for the difference between the two in various nice points will be found considerable in bone, muscle, tendon, cord, and to sum up in general structure. Place a heavy farm or cart horse alongside of a fast trotter or racer, and see how very different they are in make up; and how impossible it would be to increase the pace of the former, either in a trot or run, to that of the latter. The thing is out of the question—all the teaching and training of the world could not do it. Now, like as a general rule, begets like; and if you want fast walkers, in order to obtain them of a natural, easy, reliable gait, they must be bred from fast-walking parents.

Temperance at Long Creek.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—On Friday evening, the 13th inst., an entertainment was held under the auspices of St. Catherine Division of the Sons of Temperance, in the Orange Hall at Long Creek.

The Hall was thronged with an agreeable and enthusiastic company, and although there were so many present, the best of order prevailed. The programme contained as great a variety as could possibly have been offered in one entertainment, and all the selections were such as to make it interesting to those present.
The opening address, delivered by Walter J. McLean, was such as the occasion demanded; he briefly referred to the many benefits derived from the society, by assembling together in friendship and debating upon various subjects of interest. He also made reference to the Scott Act, and said that although it was often violated, it did not, in this respect, differ from any other law on the Statute Book. Then followed a humorous reading by Mr. C. Stretch, entitled "Mrs. Smart learns how to skate." He was listened to with marked attention and frequently applauded. There were three negro burlesques by some of the members, and during the performances they caused irrepressible peals of laughter, and the audience seemed thoroughly pleased. After the applause had subsided Mr. James McKinnon, from New Argyle Division, was called on. He made an earnest and eloquent speech in favor of the temperance cause. He was well presented to see so many of the young men present on such an occasion. He thought that at home and at school the boys should be taught the evils arising from the use of stimulants, and their depressing effect upon the process of human life. He emphatically denounced moderate drinking, and believed that all those enslaved to strong drink became drunkards by them taking their social pleasures. Messrs. John McLaughlin, J. C.
McKenzie, J. K. Ross, James McLean, J. C.
McKenzie, and several others gave some splendid recitations, which were well recited and deserved credit. The exercises of the evening were pleasantly diversified by choruses and songs from N. A. McNeill, Alex. McLean, J. St.
Ross, F. Stretch, Mrs. W. E. Stretch, W.
J. McLean, and Andrew Gallant (French songs).

The whole proceedings, from first to last, reflected the highest praise upon the members of the society.

Thanking you for taking up so much space in your widely-circulated journal, I remain,
Yours,
ONE WHO WAS PRESENT.

The Popular Woman.

The popular woman is seldom domestic, industrious, or devoted to any particular pursuit. She is therefore at liberty to enjoy the pleasures of the moment. Her zest in life is contagious. She is very easy-going and largely tolerant. Next to her animal spirits this indulgent temper is her great charm. We feel at ease in her presence; there is no necessity to put one's best foot forward; intellectually and morally we can keep on our slippers and relax the backbone of our principles. Her indulgence does not spring from the charity that "knoweth no evil," nor from the cynicism that believes in evil only, but from her knowledge of man and woman-kind. It is a knowledge not profound or subtle, but such as it is, it is varied and true. It has the advantage of being taken from nature; it is not second-hand, nor derived from books or hear-say. This knowledge of human nature, skin-deep though it may be, gives her the inestimable talent of flattery. She makes no secret of being dependent upon others for pleasure and entertainment. When in society she does not contribute any flashes of wit to the conversation, any number of facts to the store of learning; but there is the crispness of originality in her remarks, a certain richness of expression that gives piquancy to her phrases. A gift peculiar to her is a rapid appreciation of the wit of others; a power of seizing it and throwing a gleam upon it that makes it evident to duller brains. She is not sarcastic, and never on the heights. Slow-witted and commonplace folks do not fear her. She will not soar above the level of her comprehension, and she will not dart those shafts of irony which they have an uncomfortable feeling their clever sisters occasionally level at them. Intellectual folks take pleasure in a companionship that is easy and not dull.
It is an incontestable fact that people of intellect find relaxation in the society of those who do not require them to be always pumping their brains. They like gossip, and the popular woman is fond of gossip.

The United States Tariff Commission has closed its public sittings. The bulk of the evidence given has been in favor of maintaining protective duties. The recommendation will be in that direction, at the same time proposing reduced duties on raw material.

"TWO-TOUR YEARS' EXPERIENCE," says an eminent physician, convinces me that the only cure for "Nervous Exhaustion" and weakness of the generative organs is to repair the waste by giving Brain and Nerve Foods, and of all the remedies I have used, Mack's Magnetic Medicine is the best. This remedy is now sold by all our Druggists at 50 cents per box, or 6 for $2.50, and on receipt of an order for 12 boxes, accompanied with $5.00, addressed to Mack's Magnetic Medicine Co., Windsor, Ont., they will forward the goods free by mail, and send their written guarantee to refund the money, if the treatment does not effect a cure. See advt. in another column.
