

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

JUNE 22, 1888.

Editorial Notes.

The Halifax Chronicle speaks of the vast tide "which is flowing and bound to flow in the direction of unrestricted reciprocity," but, (the Halifax Herald remarks) it is safe to say that the tide was at a very low ebb in Pictou. Nor does the tide seem to have made its appearance in Cumberland nor in Colchester.

Now that the dark horses are whinnying softly all round about, says the New York Sun, it will do no harm to recall the origin of the phrase. It occurred for the first time in Lord Beaconsfield's "Young Duke." Here is the paragraph: "The first favorite was never heard of, the second favorite was never seen after the distance post, all the ten-to-ones were in the rear, and a dark horse which had never been thought of rushed past the grand stand in sweeping triumph."

The splendid new steamer Dartmouth which is now to be seen daily on the Halifax harbor is instanced by the Halifax Herald as a fair sample of the workmanship of the Burrell-Johnson Iron Foundry, of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia. The Herald adds: "Now that sailing vessels are being supplanted by steamers, it is gratifying to find an industrial establishment flourishing in Nova Scotia which is able in a few months to turn out a steambot that in the excellence of its construction defies competition, either domestic or foreign."

The true nobleness of the teacher's calling is seen from the character of the material upon which he operates. The architect who builds a noble cathedral, the artist who carves a breathing statue, the painter who makes the canvas glow with the semblance of living forms, all working for posterity. But canvas, marble, granite, all are perishable. The plastic material with which the teacher has to deal is imperishable, and the impress of his moulding hand must endure as long as the mind on which he works shall continue to "flourish in immortal youth." It is inconceivable that an impression once made for good or evil, upon a living mind, can ever pass away, so as to leave no trace in that mind's history.

A New York paper commences a long article with the following:

"A movement has started lately in London, under the impulse of some Bostonians, notably the Rev. Mr. Cook, to induce Englishmen to come over and settle on the numerous deserted farms of Massachusetts and other New England States, many of which are now being taken up by Irishmen and Germans, but chiefly the former. We presume the effort, in so far as it originates on this side of the water, is due to a not unnatural desire to see the abandoned farms occupied by men of the same race and faith, and, if possible, the same standards of living as their old owners, or, in other words, to revive in the nineteenth century the emigration to New from old England, which began and ended in the seventeenth. It is hardly likely to have any perceptible success, however."

The Quebec Budget is not a subject for pleasing contemplation on the part of the tax-payers of that Province. It shows that a taxation on the trade and commerce of the Province to the amount of $175,000 annually has been levied; that the tax on the lumber trade has been increased $125,000 yearly; that the expenditure for the current year has exceeded the appropriations by $650,000; that the proceeds of the loan of $3,500,000 will all have been spent before another year closes; that the expenditure on capital account for next year will be $1,200,000; that the ordinary revenue continues inadequate to meet the expenditure; that in every branch of controllable expenditure an increase has been made. Such is the result of the administration of the Liberal-national Mercier mercenary combination.

Crop Prospects in the United Kingdom.

An English correspondent writes under date June 6: Since my report of May 5 appeared we have had a long spell of generally cold and dry weather, with a few short breaks of summer heat and showers. This week after a few days of warm weather, the wind has gone back to the east, and I have a fire in my room as I write, the temperature being too chilly to sit in comfort without one. The change is bad for the crops, which need heat and moisture badly to force them on from their extremely backward condition. I have never seen them as backward at the end of the first week of June as they are to-day, taking them all round. Wheat and peas are the most promising of the crops, though early-sown barley also looks like doing fairly. The bulk of the barley and oats, however, has been very late, and there has been very little growth up to the present time. Wheat ought to be fully in ear by this time, but cannot be in that stage for at least a fortnight. As an early harvest is usually a good one, and a late one the contrary, the extreme backwardness of vegetation is unpropitious. Wheat is strong and of a good color, though thin in places, and may turn out well if we have a hot July. All other crops need rain badly. A mere sprinkling has fallen to-day, but we need twelve hours of steady rain and then warm weather, with occasional showers. Without rain soon the hay crop will be a miserably light one, and the spring crops generally must be very much below average.

HORRIBLE FIND.—The following are the particulars of the discovery made at Point Tren, forty miles from Sault Ste. Marie. In searching for a wreck, Divor Joe Anderson, of Detroit, discovered an object which was hauled up with great difficulty by the crew. It proved to be a hardwood finished box, with iron bands around, and attached to either end huge weights, with the evident purpose of sinking it. On opening the box, to the horror of the spectators, the cramped up form of a handsome woman was discovered. Her clothes denoted that she was in good circumstances, but there was no jewellery or other articles. The face showed signs that death must have followed extreme throes. The town is horrified. The wildest rumors are afloat. The inference is that some heartless captain must have aided the perpetration of the horrible deed, as it could not be done with an ordinary row-boat, and everything shows that the person came from a great distance. The spot selected was one of the most dismal in the district. There was nothing on the person to lead to discovering the identity of the woman.

Wedding Bells.

We announce to-day the marriage of the Rev. T. C. Gilmour, of New Brunswick, to Miss Lucy Pope, daughter of the late Hon. Judge Pope. Miss E. M. F. Pope (sister of the bride) and Miss Amy Desbrisay, of this city, were the bridesmaids, while the groom was assisted by the Rev. B. Chappell. The happy couple left this morning by steamer for a short trip before settling into their New Brunswick home.

The Island Farmer reports that there was a pleasant gathering at the residence of Donald Taylor, Esq., Bedouque, on Tuesday evening last, when his daughter, Miss Lillia Taylor, was united in marriage with Mr. Walter C. Taylor, of the Pioneer staff. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. McMillan, of Malpeque, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Carney. The bridesmaids were Miss Sinclair and Miss Brander, and the groom was attended by Mr. F. W. Cannon. The bride was made the recipient of many useful and valuable presents. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor have the best wishes of their numerous friends for many years of wedded bliss.

The Rifle.

The Charlottetown Engineer Corps held the first of a series of interesting competitions on the rifle range yesterday afternoon. There are two classes of competitors—first, prize winners in the Provincial and County matches; second, non-prize winners.

There will be five competitors, the winners to fire off. The prize will be a medal or badge to the final winner in each class. Snider rifle, 7 shots at each range.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

A Denial.

SIR,—On my return from the country, I find in your issue of Wednesday a letter signed "Beaver." He throws out some insinuations against me, which, together with the other points contained in his letter, I will answer in full to-morrow evening. This will give him an opportunity of appearing out over his own signature, which will gratify me very much. I most solemnly state that I never wrote 4 11 44, nor did I dictate it, or have I the slightest idea who the author is. If you and your Patriot friend desire free advertising, you ought to pay for it like men, and not make me your target to cast out your mean, miserable reflections.

S. N. EARLE.

A Change Suggested.

SIR,—I notice by your paper it is proposed to hold the Provincial Exhibition on October 3rd. This date is the same as claimed by the St. John County Agricultural Society and published some six weeks ago; races are also held at the Exhibitions of this Society. The clashing of dates prohibits many of our horse buyers particularly, who have an interest in the home exhibition, from attending the P. E. I. Fair. Would it not be well to hold your Exhibition (now that the date of the Exhibition here is and has been fixed for some time) on the day suggested by one of your Commissioners, viz., October 10th, or a few days later than the 3rd, giving our people who desire to attend time to get over after the closing of their Fair? I suggest the above, because I was unable to attend last season just for the above reason, both Exhibitions being on the same day.

Yours truly, J. H. SMITH.

St. John, N. B., June 20, 1888.

The Point Conceded.

SIR,—I am very much obliged to your correspondent "Beaver" for conceding the point for which I contended, namely, that Mr. Ross taught the boys of the choir, and is therefore, according to all rules of honor, entitled to at least a share of the praise bestowed upon them.

Things One Doesn't Like to See.

I don't like to see a woman spend the greater portion of her time gossiping about her neighbor's affairs to the neglect of her own. In those days people have enough to do to mind their own business. If everyone did this the community would be the better off.

I don't like to see girls waiting about at noon and evening to see their young men home, even if it is leap year. The girls might be better employed, and the young men would, I feel sure, esteem them just as highly if they acted less indiscreetly.

I don't like to see a woman don't all her finery, and with a satchel or small purse (containing very little money) in hand, start out shopping. Nine times out of every ten the woman who does this does not want to make any purchases but is merely putting on style.

I don't like to see a woman who does not want to purchase anything, enter a shop, and after making the already weary clerk fill the counter with goods, say that she cannot see what she wants and leave the store without as much as a "thank you" to the clerk.

In some other parts of the world such people are termed "counter irritants," and their presence is telegraphed from one clerk to another by means of signals made by tapping peculiarly on the counter. I do not know that any such system is in use in Charlottetown, but I do know that there are a good many "counter irritants" here.

I don't like to see a woman running around talking temperance or politics or indulging in any other masculine pastime, while her husband—the man whom she has vowed to love, honor and obey—goes about his work with his suspenders and unmentionables connected by means of a nail, and his collar wilted like the last rose of summer. The sooner such a woman mends her ways the better for the peace and harmony of the household. Men are but human.

I don't like to see a man fail in business, pay his creditors off with a few cents to the dollar, and afterwards bloom out larger than ever. This may be a smart legal way of getting out of a tight place, but it is not a very honest way.

I don't like to see a man talk loudly in favor of any improvement or charity, and when the hat is passed around in aid of the same, make a point of evading the collector. The fine speeches made by some of these individuals may look nice enough in print, but when the subscription list is published, citizens are given an opportunity of seeing who are practical sympathisers and who are not.

I don't like to see a man who, when he obtains a position a little higher than that which nature intended him to fill, affects an air of superiority and makes a point of looking the other way when any of his former friends chance to meet him. Such snobbishness is intolerable, and the man who is guilty of it is more to be pitied than anything else. The people he would like to associate with treat him with contempt, and those whom he affects to despise return the compliment with interest. Between the two stools he eventually falls to the ground.

I don't like to see a man all things to all men. I have no earthly use for the man who when talking to a Liberal-Conservative is loud in his admiration of the "grand old chief-tain," or when in conversation with a Liberal lands the Opposition to the skies. Neither am I in love with the hypocrite who has a leaning towards Catholicism when talking with a Catholic and towards Protestantism when with a Protestant. I like a man to be one thing or another. The man who talks crooked either on religion or politics is generally despised—as he deserves to be.

I don't like to see the man who is foremost in church affairs shove off a creditor till the debt becomes overdue, and then tell his victim to "go and sue for it if he likes." If there is one corner warmer than another in a certain torrid climate to which some of us will go if we do not mend our ways, it should be reserved for men who act in such a manner.

I don't like to see a man evade payment of his just debts on every possible occasion. This man may live in a fine house, wear good clothes, and think himself away and above his neighbor who pays cash as he goes, but he cannot gainsay the fact that he is not an honest man.

I don't like to see a man take cramps too often in front of a liquor shop or drug store wherein a new bar-keeper or clerk is employed. It looks very much as if the man who took the cramps wanted a drink of brandy and was either too mean or unable to pay for it.

I don't like to see a man go to the market, and, singling out a strange vendor, order certain things sent down to his house to be paid for on delivery, as his pocket-book had been accidentally forgotten. If the stranger is soft enough to allow the "snap" to be worked upon him, he generally mourns the loss of both money and goods.

I don't like to see a man who has been engaged to a young girl for several years try to break the engagement by calling upon her in a drunken condition and talking in a profane manner, in order that she may become disgusted with him and give him his freedom. Of course the girl in the case is all the better for being rid of such a contemptible creature, but that does not palliate the offence.

I don't like to see persons open their mouths and let anything that comes handy emanate therefrom. If people were a little more careful about what they say there would not be so much ill-feeling prevalent.

I don't like to see persons enter a hall where a concert is in progress, after the performance has begun, and bustle up the aisles in the midst of a vocal or instrumental solo, or during an interesting scene in a drama. There are many persons who have a habit of doing this, and it is hoped they will take the hint thus given them.

I don't like to see grown up people of both sexes make themselves ridiculous by continually referring to their parents as "papa" and "mamma." Such terms are all right when used by children, but to my mind "father" and "mother"—those dear old names—are more suitable for men and women. Moreover, tastes differ.

I don't like to see the words "lady" and "Esquire" used so frequently both in conversation and in the press. Nowadays every woman is a "lady" and every man has "Esquire" written or printed after his name. Of course this is done through courtesy more than anything else, but the practice has become so common as to be ridiculous. Why it was only the other day that an American newspaper, in the course of an anatomical article spoke of a "lady's skeleton," but forgot to explain the difference between that sort of skeleton and a "woman's."

I don't like to see people take exception to any of the foregoing paragraphs, and say unkind things about the person whom they may suspect of being the writer thereof. Such conduct only goes to show that they have been touched in a tender spot, which, perhaps would not be so apparent if they acted otherwise. "A still tongue shows a wise head."
