The sprinkling of railway lines with oil is valuable in that rain does not penetrate the oiled outer crust, and that vegetation along the lines of the rails is destroyed.

It is always better to be right than to be inconsistent.

The Transvaal War

Recent despatches report that General Gatacre is sweeping through the country like a cyclone with flying columns in all directions. His swiftness and strategy have proved of inestimable value to Lord Roberts.

The rebuilding of the railway bridge of Norval's Pont will occupy two months. The temporary bridge will be completed in about ten days. Meanwhile supplies are transported by an aerial tramway across the gap. These works necessarily delay the providing of supplies for the advance. Lord Methuen's movements north of Kimberley are believed to be a prelude to the gathering of a column of twenty thousand men with Kimberley as a base to strike eastward from Fourteen Streams into the Transvaal.

The Financial News of London, remarks that the unfortunate, but unimportant, riotous outbreak between French and English elements in Montreal the other day has doubtless gratified the hearts of disloyalists and foreign enemies, but if these persons could read a speech from the Canadian "Hansard," which is now before us, they would have to modify their transports. The speech was made a month ago, in the Ottawa House of Commons, by Sir Adolphe Caron, a representative French Canadian. It was an impassioned defence of the loyalty of French Canadians. Sir Adolphe maintained that, so far from there attaching the slightest breath of suspicion to the loyalty of his branch of the Dominion's citizens, were the matter ever put to the test it would be the French Canadians who would feel the most keenly any disaster to the Empire, and would set the example of unswerving loyalty. We believe that Sir Adolphe Caron echoed the sentiments of the great majority of the Canadians of French race. The small minority counts for nothing: have we not a small minority of disloyalists in the Mother Country, who have not even the excuse of alien extraction.

A despatch to the London Daily News, from Springfontein says:—General Gatacre and his staff are still here. He is most strict regarding the private property of the Boers. Some officers who had looted Boer farms have been tried and severely punished to the great astonishment and gratification of the Boers.
