Theatre

Hello, I would like to clarify my last, chr, blurb. I shall try again to elucidate the play we, UPEI Theatre Society, are performing on the week-end of November 19 & 20. It is a romantic farce loosely hung around a formal critique of the leading writers of our day. These writers are studied in universities across America and should, therefore, be familiar to students (especially anyone who has taken an English course). The play as a lovers' triangle is built upon three characters; Charles, a writer in residence, Myra, the professor who's after Charles, and Bobbi, a student who is receiving tutorialship from Charles. Well, the sparks fly, needless-to-say and it makes for good entertainment as Bobbi says everything an English major ever wants to say about the majority of English writers. I invite you and yours to our performance to see for yourself how much fun freedom of expression can be. Thank-you, The Producer, UPEI Theatre Society.
