OFF FOR SYDNEY

Forty Men and Twenty-five Horses Shipped Today

Peake's No 2 wharf, at which the S. S. Bonavista was lying, was a busy place this morning. A stranger might imagine that this steamer was an immigrant vessel, although her passengers did not greatly resemble the accounts we have had of either the Doukhobors or the Finns. But the passengers were not immigrants. They were workmen from Montreal, numbering one hundred and twenty-five, bound for Sydney to work at the Dominion Iron and Steel Company's new works. They were joined here by about forty more men, and to see this crowd eating their dinner, which was served at twelve o'clock, was a sight to behold. Packed like sardines in a box they stood around the steamer's rear hatch. The tarpaulin covering was their table cloth; napkins they did not need. First a can of soup was served to each man. Then came beef, bones and bread. They were a happy looking company as they ate their meal, but whether they will appear so joyful when eating their dinner out in the Atlantic to-morrow is a question. It is to be hoped that it won't be very rough. Besides the men, Mr. F. W. Hyndman shipped twenty-five excellent draft horses for which prices were paid ranging from $70 to $109. Mr. Hyndman tells us that many more of the right kind of horses will be needed, but no more men will be engaged for the present. The Bonavista also took from here considerable cargo for Newfoundland. This included 10 cattle, 40 sheep, 60 lambs, 660 bags of oats and 40 bbls of oysters. She sailed about one o'clock.

DIDN'T LIKE SOLDIERING

A Prince Edward Island Youth's Experience in the Ranks.

The Leinster regiment has one less private in its ranks today than it had a few days ago, and a young man who once wore the scarlet tunic is now on his way home-ward having had his fill of soldiering.

The young man in question is John Sellars, or at least that is the name by which he is known in Halifax. His home is in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, and his father is one of the wealthiest men in the Island province.

Some four months ago the young man left his home to go on a visit to an aunt in Boston. His indulgent father had supplied him with a liberal allowance of money, so he decided to visit Halifax en route and take in the sights of the Nova Scotian metropolis.

He landed here with the roses of his rustic home still on his cheeks and a large amount of worldly experience—to get. Of an athletic build and rather well favored in the way of good looks, he soon became a prime favorite with some of the members of the Leinster regiment, and enlisted.

His father had cherished the hope that some day his son would be a physician, and up to the date of his visit to Halifax, the younger Sellars had fallen in with his father's wishes and had studied industriously as a preparatory course. But when he fell in with the jolly Leinsters his views were changed in an instant and he promptly disregarded the lancet and pial for a musket and tunic. In short, he was so thoroughly entranced with the idea of serving his country that he enlisted and next day found him with his beautiful football hair cropped close to his head and his natty outing suit exchanged for regimentals—learning to present arms with the "recruits."

In the science of arms he proved a fairly apt scholar and was soon well grounded in the elements of drill. In barracks he became popular with his fellows and with the officers over him, but he did not like the life. He found that a soldier had to do more than wear a uniform and look pretty; and besides he longed for his old school friends and the dear ones at home. Finally he grew desperate and wrote to his father asking him to buy his discharge. The father was only too willing to comply, but thought he would teach the youngster a lesson, so it was not until Tuesday that he came to Halifax to take his son home. After some preliminaries had been arranged and explanations given the father presented his now penitent son with the papers necessary to secure his release, while the military treasury was increased by $48.66.

Yesterday was spent by father and son in looking about the city and this morning both left by the early train for their home.

When seen by a Mail reporter last night young Sellars said he had seen all he had cared to see of military life and would now try to make a name for himself in a line where the duties are not so arduous and the remuneration greater.—Halifax Mail.

LOCOMOTIVE FIREMEN

John McLean's Disability Claim—He Will Get $1500.

Mr. C. A. Wilson, Second Vice Grand Master of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, came to Charlottetown from Peoria, Ill., on Friday evening and left this morning for Philadelphia, where he will organize a Lodge of the Brotherhood on Sunday next. The main object of Mr. Wilson's visit to this province was to take up the disability claim of Mr. John McLean, a member of Sunbeam Lodge, No. 171, Truro, who has been totally disabled because of consumption. Mr. McLean was a fireman on the Island railway before he was laid up. He will get $1500 from the Brotherhood.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, it may be pointed out, has 543 Lodges. Of these 122 are in Canada, and they have a membership of 2790. The total membership of the order is 30,743. Each member carries an insurance policy for $1500, which costs him $5 every three months. This insurance is payable at death or in the event of the insured becoming disabled through the loss of a hand or foot or by reason of blindness or partial blindness, Bright's disease, consumption, paralysis or locomotor ataxia.

The members in Canada, the United States and Mexico last year paid into the funds of the Brotherhood $552,534.60. Last year 286 death and disability claims were paid, which, together with the donations made at the Toronto Convention, amounted to $424,600. There is a balance on hand of $143,616. The net gain in membership last year was 3703.

Mr. Wilson expresses himself as pleased with the good feeling and harmony prevailing between the different branches of service on the Island railway and the management. He addressed a meeting of railway men yesterday afternoon in the hall of the Benevolent Irish Society, on Kent Street, which was largely attended.

Mr. Wilson says that if arrangements can be completed there will be an open meeting of railway men in Charlottetown next November, at which many of the most important scenes in the life of a railway man and a large number of other interesting views will be thrown upon the canvas.
