OLD HATS ON MANY HEADS.

Where the Discarded Headgear of the Average Citizen Finds its Fate.

What becomes of the old hats? The "stovepipes," derbies, fedoras, soft hats and straw hats of various kinds—where do they go when discarded by their owners? Every time a man buys a new hat he has the old one wrapped up, and either stowed away in the hat store for safe keeping or sent to him at his office or residence. As a rule he says, "Wrap it up, and I'll call for it in a day or two."
The latter wraps it up, marks it with the customer's name, puts it away and waits. On the largest mirror in the hat store is a banner with a strange device on it informing the public that "we are not responsible for hats left with us over 30 days." In the store they keep a book, and when Smith, Jones, Brown or Robinson leaves his old "bid" a note is made of it and duly entered on this book.

After 50 or 60 days have elapsed a general clearing out of the old hats is made, and they go to the secondhand stores along South Clark street, to the costumers' palaces, to the country stores sometimes, all to be cleaned, relined and furnished up the best way possible. It is thus possible for a man to be stopped on some chilly evening and asked to assist some unfortunate who is wearing one of his old hats. These old hats are sometimes sent to the theaters to be used as headgear for "the rabble" or "an angry mob" or "a group of Roman citizens." Drivers of coal wagons, transfer wagons and teamsters generally who want a hat for outdoor use buy a great many of these castaways. The soft hats can be made over most effectually, but a stiff hat remodeled and dyed has an ancient luster that does not deceive the intelligent.

Country stores sometimes take an invoice of these veterans, and the result is a weird exhibition of headgear by the sages of the cracker barrels and hitching blocks.
A stiff hat once broken can with difficulty be patched up acceptably, but a soft hat may be worked over many times and still be marketable. Laborers generally wear soft hats, although a few sport derbies, and many a once proud, stylish hat may be seen during the usual Chicago street cleaning days perched on the cranium of some stalwart welder of the shovel and pick.

The peddlers buy the old hats. The millmen, the sailors, rivermen, laborers and that most shifting army of human odds and ends which form such an item in the city's population—these are the men to whom the vast bulk of the old hats go. Hats that have glistened with newness and glossy nap, once started on the downward path, go lower and lower till the ash heap in the alley or the oblivion of an empty lot marks their final degradation.—Chicago Chronicle.

GRANT IN DISGUISE.

A Reconnaissance on the Quiet Which Took the Boys by Storm.

"One day at Chattanooga," says one of the soldier boys writing in the Chicago Inter Ocean, "a lot of us were loading hard tack and bacon into a wagon train that was to be sent to half starving men, and were giving more attention to badgering each other than to the work in hand, when a lame man in fatigue dress, walking with some difficulty with the assistance of a cane, passed along the high porch of the quartermaster's shed and looked down at the boys for a minute or two without a word. Then he spoke quietly, saying: 'That is not the way to load boxes, men. Put them in straight and carefully. Do your work like soldiers.'
"Old Hannibal, who was slouching a good deal at his work, turned with impudent bravado toward the officer and was just in the act of saying that he did not want any quartermaster's clerk to give orders to him, when he started in surprise, saluted and, much to the astonishment of the boys, lifted his hat. The look of impudence went from his face like a flash, and he said, 'All right, general, we will do it just as you want it done.' Then all the men recognized in the quiet man the commanding general of the army.
Grant followed every look and word, and he probably understood old Hannibal better than that rough old fighter understood himself. There was a twinkle in his eye as he said: 'Remember, men, these provisions are going to half starved soldiers. You ought to get as many boxes in the wagon as possible. When mules are so scarce and roads so dangerous, the more boxes in the wagon the more men you feed.' The boys got up in the wagon, straightened out every box and loaded all carefully as the general directed. This was only three or four days before the battle of Chattanooga, and while the fight was in progress old Hannibal said he knew that Grant 'wasn't limpin round Chattanooga for nothin.'"
