Arctic Exploration.

PROPOSED SEARCH FOR OASES IN GREENLAND—PREVIOUS EXPLORATIONS AND SEARCHES.

A correspondent writes from Christiania under date of Feb. 13:—The Sweedish explorer, Dr. Oscar Dickson, who, together with King Oscar and the Russian, Mr. Sibiriakoff, fitted out the celebrated Nordenskjold expedition around North Siberia, has arrived here from his home at Gothenburgh to lay before the King the plan of a new Sweedish Artic expedition under the direction of Professor Nordenskjold. Nordenskjold has again adopted the idea—long ago given up by others—that the so-called East Colony in Greenland, where there was a large settlement in the Middle Ages, must be searched for on the eastren coast, east of Cape Farewell, the south point of Greenland. The East Colony is said to have embraced 100 villages, thirteen parishes, two cloisters, and one diocese. But, owing to the great devastions caused by the plague in Norway in the middle of the fourteenth century, the connection with the mother country was interrupted, and the colonists were left to themselves, lacking everything, so they were unable to defend themselves against the Esquimaux population, the so-called "Skrollinger," who, only in 1379, reported to have fallen in with the Northmen. The navigation on Greenladd stopped, and gradually the colonists died from hunger and privations, or they succumbed in their struggles with the Esquimaux, the details of which are unknown to us.

During an expedition made in the years 1828-31 the Danish naval officer Grash believed to have proved that the East Colony should be searched for near Inlianchaab on the western coast. But, as above mentioned, Nordenskjold is of a different opinion. To search for the old Norwgian colonies, traces of which may possibly be found East of Cape Farwell, is but a subordinate aim of the new travelling plan conceived by the great discoverer. Nordenskjold principally proposes to penetrate thirty or forty miles into the inland ice fields of Greenland and there to search for eventual oases, the existence of which is confirmed by several facts scientifically proved, and traces of which were discovered by the German Arctic expeditions.

The eastern part of Greenland has a stronly marked Alpine character, and is still less known than the western part, which may be called a plateau of glaciers. The country is indescribaly wild and difficult to penetrate into, owing to the breaking up of the mountains into huge walls, the large extent of the glaciers, and the depth of the snow. Another impediment to the exploration of the country is the softness of the soil during the season when the snow melts. The country, which is frozen and hard as a stone during the larger part of the year, can only in summer be explored, and then with difficulty. The soil is then quite sott, the lower parts of the country are changed into swamps and the slopes are inundated by the floods of the melted snowdritts. The Celebrated discoverer, however, does not mean to be deterred by such difficulties. It is said that Dr. Dickson will request the Swedish Legislature, through the Government, that a government vessel may be fitted out for the expedition which will start in May. An expedition already planned to the Siberian coast has been put off, as the results of the Danish expedition, under Lieutenant Hovgaard (the Dijmpha expedition), are waited for.

The Great French Remedy, Dr. LeDuc's Periodical Pills.

For the cure of Leucorrhœa or White's Excessive of painful Menstruation, Green Sickness, Falling of the Womb, Catarrh of the Uterus or Vagnia, Hysteria, Pain in the Back, or Piles, or for the puepose of invigorating and giving tone to the Generative Organs, two pills should be taken twice daily, or in very enfebled conditions, one pill three times a day. To effect cures in chronic cases it will be necessary to continue the use of the remedy for some months. A reasonable trial will create sufficient confidence in the remedy to insure its being taken until a permanent cure is effected.
