It is a fact that Johnson's Anodyne Liniment cures every form of inflammation, internal or external.

Why doesn't Micky come? She fixes her gaze earnestly upon the far-off shore, and after a bit mutters out the last but not least, "Oh miserable boy! Oh perditional ferryman!"

Turning her back resolutely upon the good Mr. Giles, she seats herself upon the grassy sward and taking her knees into her embrace fixes herself up to a secret revelling of Fate. But Fate is impervious to her reproaches; it takes no heed. Slowly with leaden heels the minutes go by until three o'clock is reached and then it is astonishing with what rapidity they fly. Dorothy's discomfort is indescribable when she discovers that five o'clock has been reached and still no tidings of Micky. Her heart dies within her. Oh what will Tom not think! Of course he had arrived. The Towers at three o'clock the hour he had appointed to meet her to—no—to tell her that he loved her, and what will be the result when he finds her absent? He will imagine her as happy and enjoying herself with this most hateful man beside her, who, regardless of her misery is keeping up a continual chatter on matters absolutely repugnant to her! Oh the horror of the thought! Dorothy's heart will to this small island! Is there no chance of escape! And yet how different would be her imprisonment if only Tom had been the one obligated to share it with her!

SUPERPHOSPHATES AND CHEMICALS.

Sole Agents for P. E. Island for THE BRADLEY FERTILIZER CO., the largest concern of the kind in the world. We have a large stock, on hand and to arrive, at these well known MANURES, and can refer purchaser to many of our very best farmers who have been using them for years with very gratifying results.

We can also supply the same goods (Ground Slag) as offered by our would-be competitors as "English Fertilizers" at at least 20 per cent less price than they now ask for it, but at the same time we would not advise its use, believing that THE GENUINE ENGLISH MANURES AS SOLD ONLY BY US are much the best value. Prices, Pamphlets, etc., on application.

THE DRAIN ON THE SOIL.

Prof. Robert of Cornell Station, in a bulletin, gives tables showing that a crop of corn each year for twenty years will remove $128.23 worth of fertility (nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid) from an acre of land, while the fruit, leaves, tops and roots of thirty-five trees will remove $337.61 worth of fertility in twenty years. Yet, no man will grow corn, or add to the soil, or plant trees, with the fertilizing it, but thousands expect apples to thrive without fertilizers for twenty to thirty years.

COMMENDABLE PROMPTITUDE.

A Resident of St. John, N. B., makes a Successful Trial of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

St. John, N. B., Aug. 3.—Mr. Robert Moore, residing in Indian town, a suburb of this city, has recently made what is allowed by all who are acquainted with the facts to be a most remarkable recovery. He has been a sufferer from a serious complaint of the kidneys for over seven years, and during that time has suffered excruciatingly. He has also suffered considerably in pocket, having paid large sums for medical advice. Quite recently he happened to read of the many cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and with a commendable promptitude made a trial of them, with the result that after taking three boxes of the remedy he was entirely restored to health.

GEORGE E. HUGHES, Charlottetown.

Science is "knowing how." The only secret about Scott's Emulsion is years of science. When made in large quantities and by improving methods, an emulsion must be more perfect than when made in the old-time way with mortar and pestle a few ounces at a time. This is why Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil never separates, keeps sweet for years, and why every spoonful is equal to every other spoonful. An even product throughout.

In other emulsions you are liable to get an uneven blend—either an over or under dose. Scott's Emulsion has a salmon-oil wrapper.

It would be impossible to describe the amount of godly anxiety Mr. Giles throws into the exceeding ill-timed voice which he employs to chant this gay refrain. "We should, my dear young lady, revel in the glad sunshine, the emblem of a perfect nature, all warmth and contentment. You are a young girl, and you should be content with the remains of the buttered toast, as though modestly aware that such a nature as he has described is all his own."

"Dear Mr. Giles," says Dorothy, to the maiden aunt, "aid your persuasions to mine, and induce your niece to accede to my request."

"It is quite time for a trip of the kind," says Miss Jemima eagerly. "Do my dearest Dorothy take Mr. Giles to Denmark. It will occupy an entire morning and afternoon, and they can dine near the end of their destination. He is very seldom at his post. Ah, I have imagined him to be, by the greatest good luck!"

"Such good luck," says Mr. Giles, "Micky, who is a tall Celtic lad of about seventeen, with a twinkling eye, seeing them approach, looks not only willing to ferry them anywhere, but quite as if he had been expecting them long years ago."

Stepping out of the phaeton, Dorothy and Mr. Giles walk slowly toward the boat, whilst George, the groom, whipping up his ponies, starts for home again.

"Do you know," says Dorothy in a pained tone to Mr. Giles, "once or twice during our drive here I fancied I noticed the smell of brandy? Did you? I do hope George is not growing unsteady."

"Dear me! I hope not. I hope not indeed," says Mr. Giles, with much concern. "I must speak to him. I shall bring the artillery of my eloquence to bear upon him. I have seldom" with charming diffidence "known a man so firm. You are sure you did not smell anything about George's nose? Have you noticed his nose? Red—terribly red!"

They step into the boat. Half-way across from the mainland to the island Dorothy's face grows distressed again.

"There," she says leaning toward Mr. Giles, "I noticed it again! didn't you?"

The smell of that horrid brandy! I mean Oh! I hope it isn't Micky Maguire!"

"I hope not indeed," says Mr. Giles with a severe glance at the unconscious Micky; "but I have no doubts—strong doubts. Oh how thankful I should be that Providence directed my steps to this brandy-ridden spot!"

"They have reached the island now, and are stepping ashore," says Mr. Giles, with heavy gallantry, assists her to terra firma with so mistaken an ardor as almost brings her into his arms.

Righting herself with a sudden redoubt, she steps back from him on the gravelled shore, and frowns slightly.

"Again I am distressed by that abominable thing," she says. "Surely there is brandy somewhere!"

"Do you know," says Mr. Giles, with the hesitating air of one just awakening to a curious fact, "I begin to think I must be delirious. I have a dry throat, a very dry throat—a sad affliction, dear Miss Dorothy—and, oddly enough, the lozenges I use for the relief of it smell exactly like brandy, though I need hardly say to you that they have nothing in common with that most pernicious liquor."

"Ah," says Dorothy, "what curious lozenges!"

"Very, very curious," says Mr. Giles. Dorothy's gaze, a little puzzled, wanders over the water, and marks the fishermen rowing away from the shore that is quite half a mile off.

"You told him what hour he is to return to us, says she, earnestly.

"Yes, oh yes," says Mr. Giles, "I have a really charming little island; and for some time Dorothy occupies herself in showing its beauties to Mr. Giles. But he has grown singularly dull and drowsy, and is totally unimpressed by the charms of his surroundings, and presently Dorothy finds, to her infinite disgust, that he has even ceased to pretend admiration for aught but her, and is busily employed in demanding her hand in marriage.

To refuse a man is a simple matter enough; but things grow difficult when the man refuses to accept his "No" with a proud submission. Mr. Giles declines to receive it at any price.

"You will think it over, dear girl," he says, confidently, with a squeeze of her hand. "Oh, yes; believe me, you will think it over."

"I shan't," says Dorothy.

But he consents to this determined remark to the winds with a wave of his obese fingers.

"You will," he says, "and I shan't think the worse of you later on for this maidenly consent. I have a conviction that Nature has framed you for each other. So think your good aunt, I might say now," with a deep chuckle.

"You may say what you like now, or then or any other time," says Dorothy indignantly. "It will make no difference whatever to me." "Heaven forbid," she glances at her watch, and finds it is long after two o'clock. Good gracious!

The traffic reverts to the C. P. R. for the week ending July 31st were $62,000, an increase of $102,000 over the corresponding period of last year.
