

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

OCTOBER 19, 1888.

Editorial Notes.

The Quebec Legislature will meet for the despatch of business early in December.

The annual money estimates of the cereal, root, and grass crops of Scotland, supplied by an agricultural correspondent of the Glasgow Herald state the total value of this year's harvest to be £23,904,147, divided as follows:—Grain crops, £9,372,224; potatoes, turnips, etc., £6,679,810; hay and grasses, £7,852,114.

The Montreal Gazette's London special says that a large emigration of crofter fishermen to British Columbia is probable next spring. A number of the leading canny owners are arranging to emigrate 120 families, about 600 souls, to take the place of Indians and Chinese in the canneries at fixed wages. The movement is regarded as important in view of the drawbacks of the Chinese element in the Province.

There will be a fair average crop of potatoes in New England, according to the New England Homestead. The yield is below the average in New York. There is not a full crop at the West. The rot is doing much damage to the late crop in the East. Prices range from 30 to 60 cents. The crop in Great Britain and Europe is very short. The Homestead thinks there will be a gradual advance to 75 cents per bushel at Boston.

The economy with which some of the ambitious normal schools are conducted by colored teachers in the South, is illustrated by Albion Auldham, at Franklinton, N.C., whose principal, Samuel S. Seiver, is now in the North trying to raise only four or five hundred dollars to carry on the work for the year. The state gives $1,500 for current support, and the Slater Fund $300. The board of pupils is put at cost—six dollars a month. There is a normal and an industrial department, and four or five teachers, of whom the principal receives a salary of $450 a year. The building and grounds are owned by the Freedmen's Board of the Northern Presbyterian Church.

Says the Montreal Star: In the way of trusts and combines the latest is the formation of a cabbage trust in Ohio, which is to be composed of all the large cabbage growers in the Findlay, Toledo and Cleveland markets, and control the entire cabbage product of north-western Ohio. This is carrying out the trust idea with a vengeance. There is no telling where it will stop. The next thing we hear of may be an egg trust to control all the eggs, or a potato trust to control all the potatoes. Trusts and combines, combines and trusts; the world seems to be made up of them, and they reach all the way from the coal oil with which thoughtless domestics light the kitchen stove to the coffins in which "kilt fathers and exemplary citizens" are laid at rest.

It is more than likely that the farmers of Maine will remember the present season as one specially clouded by agricultural disaster. From reliable sources it is learned that through the summer and up to the opening of September, there was unusual hopefulness and promise in the thrift of all the different crops. The first blow that fell was the frost of September 6th. This was unprecedented in its severity and in the damage it inflicted. Following this, instead of the despoiled husbandman being vouchsafed the poor reparation that perfect harvesting weather would give him for the damage the frost had wrought, he had to contend against persistent bad weather. Storm succeeded storm, and the fall so far has hardly had in it a single break of sunshine and good harvest weather. There will inevitably be a heavy loss upon grain and potatoes, through damage by the continued wet weather.

A European correspondent of the New York Herald says that Count Tasef, the Austrian premier, has Irish blood in his veins, he being a Viscount in the peerage of Ireland, the patent of nobility dating back to 1628, the third year of Charles I.'s reign. The count, says the correspondent, was born in Vienna, attended its university; began public life as secretary in the office of the governor of Bohemia and as a councillor and head of the provincial court at Prague. His wife is a daughter of a noble Bohemian house. In 1863 the count was made governor of Salzburg, being then in his 30th year. He has been president of the council of ministers since 1879, and his administration has been throughout able, though his enemies denounce it as one-sided. Count Tasef is one of a large number of distinguished men—MacMahon, O'Donnell's, Douglasses, Gordons, Edwardes, Romillies, Disraelis, etc.—who have risen to eminence in the countries of their own or their fathers' adoption.

At the F. C. Baptist Conference, at Blawie, N. B., the committee on Sabbath Observance submitted the following report, which was adopted:—

- 1. We believe the Sabbath to be a sign between God and us, and the obligation to keep it holy is perpetuated to the end of time.
2. It is a day of rest from all manner of work, a day in which we are to worship God in his sanctuary, and avoid all unnecessary work, by thought and conversation.
3. Your committee believe that visiting, pleasure driving, sailing, or the seeking of any kind of amusement, to be incompatible with its proper observance.
4. We recommend that our people, so far as possible, abstain from the burial of the dead upon this day, as it involves much manual labor, also often very great inconvenience to ministers and the people to whom they regularly preach.
5. Your committee very much regret the running of trains upon the Sabbath in this province (New Brunswick), and sincerely hope that the manager thereof may as no very distant day see their way clear to discontinue the same.

Parnellism and Crime.

TEXT OF THE LONDON TIMES CHARGES AGAINST THE IRISH LEADERS.

A special from London to the New York Sun contains the text of the London Times accusations against Parnell and the Irish patriots. The names of the members of parliament against whom charges and allegations are made are set out in the schedule. The members of the conspiracy and organization hereafter described took part in the work and operations thereof with the knowledge of its character, object and modes of action. From and including the year 1879 there have existed societies known as the Irish Land League, Irish National Land League and Labor and Industrial Union, the Ladies Land League and Labor and Industrial Union, the Ladies Land League, Ladies' Irish Land League and the Labor and Industrial Union, National League and affiliated societies of Great Britain and America, all forming one continuous organization. The ultimate object of the organization was to establish the absolute independence of Ireland as a separate nation. With a view to effect this, one of the immediate objects of said conspiracy was to promote agrarian agitation against the payment of agricultural rents, thereby securing co-operation of tenant farmers of Ireland, and at the same time the impoverishment and ultimate expulsion from the country of Irish landlords, who were styled an English garrison. The action was taken to organize a system of coercion and intimidation in Ireland which was sustained and enforced by boycotting and commission of crime and outrages. The organization was actively engaged in the following matters: First, promotion of and inciting to commission of outrages, boycotting and intimidation; second, collection and providing of funds to be used, or which it was known were used for the promotion of and payment of persons engaged in the commission of crimes, outrages, boycotting and intimidation; third, payment of persons who assisted in, were affected by or accidentally or otherwise injured in commission of such crimes, outrages and acts of boycotting and intimidation; fourth, holding of meetings and procuring to be made speeches inciting to the commission of crimes and outrages, boycotting and intimidation; fifth, publication and dissemination of newspaper and other literature inciting to and approving of sedition and commission of crimes, outrages, boycotting and intimidation, particularly the Irish World, Chicago Citizen, Boston Pilot, Freeman's Journal, United Ireland, Irishman, Nation, Weekly News, Cork Daily Herald, Kerry Sentinel, Evening Telegraph, Sligo Champion; sixth, advocating resistance to law and constituted authorities and impeding detection and punishment of crime; seventh, making of payment to or for persons who were guilty, or supposed to be, of the commission of crimes, outrages and acts of boycotting and intimidation for their defence or to enable them to escape from justice and for the maintenance of such persons and their families; eighth, it is charged and alleged that members of parliament mentioned in the schedule approved, and by their acts and conduct led people to believe they approved of the resistance to law and commission of crimes, outrages and acts of boycotting and intimidation when committed in furtherance of objects and resolutions of said societies and that the persons who engaged in commission of such crimes, outrages and acts of boycotting and intimidation were parties to and cognizant of payment of moneys for purposes above mentioned, and as testimonials of rewards, to persons who have been convicted or were notoriously guilty of crimes or outrages, or to their families; eleventh, with the knowledge that crimes, outrages and acts of boycotting and intimidation had been allowed in delivering speeches at meetings they expressed no bona fide disapproval or public condemnation, but on the contrary continued to be leading and active members of said societies, and to subscribe to their funds; twelfth, with such knowledge as aforesaid, they continued to be intimately associated with the officers of the same societies—many of whom fled from justice—and with notorious criminals and agents and instruments of murder and conspiracy, and with the planners and paymasters of outrage, and with advocates of sedition, violence and use of dynamite; thirteenth, they, and said societies with such knowledge, received large sums of money which were collected in America and elsewhere by criminals and persons who were known to advocate sedition, assassination, use of dynamite and commission of crimes and outrages; fourteenth, when on certain occasions they considered it politic to denounce and did denounce certain crimes in public they afterwards made communications to these associations and others, with the intention of leading them to believe that such denunciation was not sincere. One instance of this, of which said defendant proposes to give evidence, is in the following series of letters: Letters from C. S. Parnell, dated May 15, 1882; letter from same, June 16, 1882; another from the same of same date. A long list of names of some of the most prominent Irishmen at home and abroad are cited who are alleged to be guilty of crime or advocates of treason, sedition, assassinations and violence, with whom said members of parliament continued to associate. Then follow the names of 65 members of parliament against whom it is proposed to give evidence of charges and allegations.

Some Sad Scenes.

HEROINES AND HEROES DEVELOPED BY THE MUD RUN, PA., RAILWAY FATALITY.

MANY terrible and striking incidents that occurred at the Mud Run disaster are now being told, says a late despatch from Wilkesbarre, Pa. There were eighteen bodies on the boiler of the engine. One was standing on the pilot with the head nearly severed and resting against the head light. It was John Rogan, of Providence. Five bodies were so twisted together that it was impossible to remove them, and for six hours they hung, heads downward, in full view of their friends. One woman was burned almost to a crisp, and sat erect with her head child in her arms. The body of a cadet was found twisted up against the cab of the engine.

James McNichols, of Scranton, was found on the track with a broken limb. To those who came to help him he cried out, "My daughter is on the last car. Let me lay here and go save her." He was taken into a car. He had no sooner been placed in a comfortable position than a girl was carried in and laid on the seat opposite. The girl was crying "Father." McNichols, forgetting his own injuries, jumped up with a cry of "Lizzie," clasped her to his bosom and sank into a faint on the bottom of the car. Lizzie has since died. The first window of the rear car had not been covered by the other, and a man's hand was seen to fall out and move to and fro as a signal for help. For nearly an hour that hand swayed, and for an hour men worked to rescue its owner. "Have courage," some one cried, "you are saved." When they attempted to get him out it was found that his feet were fastened and his removal was impossible. His body fell through the window and he died suspended by the heels.

"That's my Jimmy's voice," cried James Jackson, of Pleasant Valley, as the voice of a boy was heard above the din. "God have mercy on him." It's my darling boy and I can't help him." The boy's cries continued. The father jumped to the side of the car and cried, "Keep up your courage, Jimmy, your father is coming to save you." As he said this Mr. Jackson struck the window with his clenched fist, and crawled through the opening. Fifteen minutes later he staggered out into the air with the boy in his arms, both covered with blood. There was a smile on the father's face. He kissed the pale lips of his son, and said to him: "Jimmy, you know I wouldn't stand by and see you die. No my boy, I have saved you." He placed him on a seat, looked into his eyes, jumped up, staggered back and screamed: "My God, he is dead," and sunk by his side unconscious.

In the midst of the excitement a girl was leaning out of the window on the left side of the telescoped car. When the rescuing party found her she was in good spirits, and apparently uninjured. "I am fastened in the cars," she said, "and it would be better for you men to attend the other people, as they are suffering and I am not." Her pale face was an evidence that all was not well, and for four hours they worked to release her. She was bleeding to death. All efforts to free her was in vain. The brave girl was told by Father Melley that she could not live, and she was given the last rites of the Catholic church. "I wait my father to kiss me before I die," she said, for the first time during five long hours of suffering she cried, "Father! Father! find my father!"

"I can't find him; but he is safe," said a broad-shouldered man, as he laid the girl's head gently on his shoulder. Four feet from the girl, with his head resting on a blood-stained car-cushion, lay her father, dead. "If you can't find father, tell Jimmy Coleman I want to see him," Coleman was found. The dying girl, Maggie Meighan, was evidently a dear friend to him, for she whispered something in his ear and the tears flowed down his cheeks, as he turned his eye heavenward and his lips moved in prayer. She died in his arms. Some of the rescuers did noble work. James Mulherrin, a brakeman, brother of ex-District Attorney Mulherrin, of Carbon County, worked for six hours. He devoted his time to releasing the living. Cadet Peter Kline, of Providence, whom it took four hours to remove, was first discovered by Mulherrin. "Tend to that other boy, he is hurt worse than I am," was what this brave little fellow of fourteen years said. Mulherrin took his advice and rescued his friend. "Now, then," said Kline, "stick to me." "I will if it costs me my life," replied Mulherrin, and stick to him he did until he was removed. He has since died.
