Aids For Air Navigation Sparks Hot U.K.-U.S. Row

MONTREAL (CP) — Delegates from 25 countries and organizations start talks here today in a special conference of the International Civil Aviation Organization designed to spell out worldwide standards for navigation aids to commercial aviation. But expectations are the conference will develop largely into campaigns by British and United States delegates for support of systems developed in their respective countries. The dispute between Britain and the U.S. is described as being among the most bitter in years. Hinging on the ICAO decision, considered possible in about three weeks, are export orders for electronics equipment worth millions of dollars. The urgency of the need for more accurate air navigation has been underscored by mid-air collisions such as the Grand Canyon crash and the crash between a jet fighter and a Viscount airliner over Italy late last year. NOW IN USE The present international short-range navigation aid adopted by ICAO and in general use is the very high frequency omnidirectional range (VOR) developed by the U.S. This provides the pilot with information about his bearing from the VOR station. ICAO, a specialized agency of the United Nations, has agreed that no change in this standard will require the replacement of VOR equipment before Jan. 1, 1966. The British system is a combination of the Decca navigation system for short ranges and Decca for long ranges. Both were developed by the Decca company and together form a comprehensive system. The new American system, known as Vortac, is a combination of VOR and the distance-measuring equipment of another existing aid, tactical air navigation (Tacan). Decca navigator already covers parts of Western Europe, the east coast of Canada from Newfoundland to Quebec City and has been installed experimentally to cover New York. Decca already covers the North Atlantic.

FLU IN THE U.K.

Prince Charlie Said Recovering

LONDON (CP)—An influenza outbreak has hit every area of Britain but the health ministry says it is not the killer Asian flu of last winter. Offices, factories and schools have been hit. An appeal has been made to people not to visit their doctors for anything other than urgent reasons. A health ministry official said Monday night of the flu that "where a virus has been isolated by laboratory tests it has been found to be Virus B, which produces a mild infection keeping the patient in bed for two or three days." The official noted that a "serious" flu epidemic brings a death rate of about 1,000 persons a week. The last available figures showed that death from flu now is at the rate of about 25 a week. PRINCE RECOVERING Among those reported struck is Prince Charles, 10-year-old heir to the throne. He is recovering from an attack at his boarding school, Cheam, near Newbury. "A Buckingham Palace spokesman said no bulletin was issued on the prince because of the mild nature of the illness. The spokesman said the prince spent three days in bed and now is better. Many of the areas with near-epidemics to contend with also had a thick coating of recurring fog. In the Cotswolds and West Country—around Bristol, Exeter, Exmoor, Dartmoor and southwest of Oxford—visibility even in the open country was less than 25 to 50 yards. London itself was not seriously affected by fog Monday. For some areas this has been one of the two or three foggiest winters of the century and many health officials and doctors say there is an evil connection between the flu and fog. Increased pressure for hospital beds "is due to a combination of fog, influenza and complications of influenza," said Cmdr. J. R. E. Longworthy of the emergency hospital bed service.

Chief Of The CP Bureau In New York Dies Suddenly

NEW YORK (CP)—D. O. (Don) Gilbert, veteran newspaper man and chief of bureau for The Canadian Press in New York, died suddenly Monday at the age of 46. He was undergoing surgery for a stomach condition. Gilbert had headed the New York bureau, through which all Commonwealth, United States and foreign news is channelled to CP newspapers across Canada. He joined the CP staff in Montague two years later as a teletype operator but soon switched to editorial work that took him in the ensuing years to top news posts in Canada and abroad. One of his big achievements outside the organization he served for almost 30 years was helping to set up after the war a new national news service in Germany under the Allied military government for occupied territories. SERVED IN U.S. ARMY He took the post-war news agency post after service from 1942 in the United States Army, which he joined after working in CP's New York bureau from 1933. During his army service he became a U.S. citizen. Following the organization of the German agency, Gilbert returned to Canada and rejoined the CP staff in Montreal in September, 1946. After a brief period of service in the head office at Toronto he returned to New York for two years before going to CP's bureau in London, England. Returning to Canada again in 1950 he was appointed CP news editor at Winnipeg and in 1951 moved to Edmonton where he was chief of bureau supervising western Canada service until 1953, when he returned to New York. He was retiring by nature, he nevertheless exerted a forceful personality in the pursuit of news, and was widely respected throughout the news-gathering cooperative for his ability in bureau administration. Last year he addressed eastern Canada publishers at a regional meeting on the job of covering U.S. regional news as well as the top foreign stories that flowed through his bureau. In 1954 he joined the circle of 25-year men in CP. By coincidence, Clyde Blackburn, chief of bureau in Ottawa, was in New York for the observance. Blackburn had hired the young teletype operator in Montreal in 1929. Gilbert was a native of Liverpool, England, and attended schools at Wallacey and Kirkby Lonsdale before going to Nova Scotia in 1927. He is survived by his wife, Virginia, whom he married in New York in 1946, a brother, Bunnell, in Southampton, England, and two sisters, Mrs. Bertha Rawcliffe of Montreal and Mrs. R.E. Mead of Hazel Hill, N.S.

Toronto's Mayor Phillips Annoyed By Flag Incident

TORONTO (CP) — Mayor Nathan Phillips Monday promised prosecution to "culprits" who tore down a Canadian Red Ensign in a north-end park and replaced it with a flag sponsored by the Native Sons of Canada. Obviously angered, the mayor announced had ordered police and parks department officials to investigate the incident at Alexander Muir Gardens where the Ensign was found crumpled on the ground and a Native Sons' flag flying from a 30-foot flagpole. The park was named for the man who wrote The Maple Leaf Forever 92 years ago. "I will not stand for disrespect for the flag," Mayor Phillips said. "Those responsible should be thoroughly ashamed of themselves." The Native Sons' flag has a green maple leaf on a red and white background. It was also spotted flying over Hart House at the University of Toronto Monday morning and was replaced by the Canadian Ensign. Bernard Glaum, vice-president of the Toronto branch of the Native Sons organization, said an anonymous caller told him about the flags Sunday night. He said he investigated and was "quite pleased" to find the Sons' flag at both locations. He added he knew nothing about how they came to be hoisted.

W. R. Shaw, leader of the Conservative party outside the House, has been advocating a loosening of farm credit and his party is counted on to renew demands for action in this field. Mr. Shaw will direct his party from the visitor's gallery. He has no legislative seat, but has been nominated to contest First Queens in the next general election. Premier Matheson said last fall a general election will be held "soon". Conservative leader Shaw, 70, who describes himself as "A pretty old fellow for such a young man," said Sunday his party's chance in an election this year would be "very excellent." "The federal government has been very generous with the province," he said, "and it would be in the interests of Prince Edward Island to get in line with Ottawa." WON BY-ELECTION The Conservatives held only three seats after the 1955 general election. They won First Queens in a 1957 by-election to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Liberal W.F.A. Stewart. The Island's last Conservative government was defeated in 1955. A proposed causeway across Northumberland Strait between Port Borden, P.E.I., and Cape Tormentine, N.B.—hoary object of discussions at four previous legislative sessions—will likely get another going-over. The scheme has been given new life by a $200,000 federal survey, and an unofficial report that rock suitable for fill has been located near the proposed New Brunswick end of the nine-mile causeway. Mr. Shaw said an interim report on the survey is expected to be presented at this session of Parliament in Ottawa. "We are very much in favor of a causeway," Mr. Shaw said. "It would be a tremendous boon to farmers, fishermen and business in general."
