

THE POISONING CASE.

William Larter's Examination Continued.

Dr. Morris' Explanation About the Prescription.

He Refers to Certain Conversations with Larter.

Druggist Davies Gives Further Evidence.

Larter Sent Up to Supreme Court for Trial.

A large crowd of persons were waiting outside the courtroom this morning long before the door was opened. The prisoner arrived at ten o'clock. Then Slote was brought in and after that the crowd was admitted. Larter is still apparently unconcerned and composed as he has been throughout the examination. At 10.15 the case was begun promptly by the Attorney-General calling upon—

Dr. Morris, who was sworn, and testified as follows: I am a medical doctor and have been practicing at Milloree for two years past. I graduated at Philadelphia. I have known Larter for two years. I was in town at the last of March. I came in on business for my father. I went to meet my father at Larter's. I went there but did not see my father. My father has been in the habit of going to McEachern's for his dinner. I knew I was to see my father either at Larter's or McEachern's. We had made an arrangement to that effect. I got my dinner at McEachern's that day. I went there to get my dinner for the purpose of meeting my father. My going there had nothing to do with Larter. When I first met Larter that day he told me that his wife was ill; that her health was very irregular. He asked for a prescription. I said I could not give one without first seeing her. He said he would go down with me but he was too busy. He asked me "Is ergot ever used in these cases?" I said that fluid extract of ergot was frequently used for such cases. It is used as a prevention against hemorrhage. He asked what dose I give. I said that after confinement it is given in teaspoonful doses. He then asked me for a prescription. I refused to give him one. He asked me to write down the name of the medicine and the dose, and he wanted to know what would be required. I said 3 or 4 ounces would last a good many courses. He got some paper and I wrote it down. As I had refused to give him a prescription, I wrote it down in a prescription form, but in simple English, "4 ounces fluid extract of ergot—dose a teaspoonful 3 times a day." I have been in the habit of using fluid ergot for these cases. At this time I knew nothing of the McEachern girl. I had heard of her. I thought he wanted the medicine for his wife. I did not think he could get the ergot on the unassigned order I gave him. I did not think it would be given to him. I saw Larter again at dinner time. He came into McEachern's when I was waiting for my dinner. Mrs. McEachern was there, too. He spoke about introducing me to Miss McEachern, who was then hanging up my coat and laughing and chatting. Larter went out then, and I met him again in his own store about two hours afterwards. He asked me to come into a vacant room that he wished to see me. He asked me if I had noticed Miss McEachern. I said I had taken no particular notice except that she seemed lively and chatty. He said he thought he was going to get into a scrape with her. He said he had been intimate with her, but not to such an extent as to lead him to think he had ruined her. I said you are sure she is in trouble? He said he thought so. He asked what that was. He told me that she had come to her sick period and had passed it by a couple of days and there was no sign. I told him that he need not worry that it was not unusual. I said perhaps the girl was fooling him, but he thought differently. He said she was blaming him. I asked if he was certain he was not the father of the child. He said he was perfectly certain he was not. I said, "If such be the case, you need you care. You are a married man, and if others are the cause of the trouble she will put it on the right person." He asked me if I would see her, and have a talk to her, and find out from her if she really was in trouble. I said yes, and I saw her that day. She told me that she had been taking pills of some kind, and using a syringe. Larter had told me that she had been taking pills, and that he had bought her a syringe. Syringing with hot water is sometimes used for abortion. She asked me if I would do something for her. I told her I would not, and advised her to let things take their course. She said, "If I do I will have to go away." She asked me if I would see Larter and find out from him what he was going to do for her. I pitied the girl, and said I would. I went to Larter and asked him what he intended to do for the girl. I told him that she had said she was willing to go away if she got the money. She had told me this. He said the child was not his and he would not give her the money. I went back to her and told her that Larter did not appear willing to give her money to go away. She asked me again if I would not take hold of her case, I said no, that in doing so two things had to be considered, first that any attempt to procure an abortion would be highly dangerous to her life and secondly that there was another way of looking at it; there was the moral aspect—that to procure what she wanted she would be committing murder. She appeared to think over that and promised to give up the pills and stop syringing. I asked her to promise to do nothing else that would lead to committing a crime, and advised her to send back the syringe. She gave me the syringe to take back to Larter. I took the syringe to Larter, and I never saw the girl after. I considered when I left the girl that she had made up her mind to stop taking medicine. I told Larter this, and that the best thing he could do was to drop the matter and let things take their natural course. He asked me if nothing could be done for her and I said no. He asked me if I thought any doctor on the island would perform an operation. I said I did not think so. He asked what I thought of sending her to Halifax. I asked him what for, and he said couldn't it be done there. I said I didn't think so. I told him then that possibly the girl might not be in the trouble he feared; that perhaps she was fooling him, and that he had better drop the matter there and then. He considered over the matter for a few moments and finally decided to let things take their natural course. I told him that as he claimed he was not responsible that he was right and to keep clear of her. When I was going away I asked him if he was sincere in his inclination to stop this thing. He said, "To show you that I am sorry to take this syringe, which I took away and it is now in my house."

Attorney-General—Was the syringe like this? (showing one). Witness—It was like this, but larger. All this that I have related took place at the last of March. After he had spoken to me about the girl, I began to be suspicious about what he wanted the ergot for. I asked him if he was telling the truth when he said he wanted the ergot for his wife, and he said "yes." I said "Are you sure?" and he swore that it was so. I said, "Remember that what I gave you was not a prescription, and was not intended as such," and I said I would like to have the paper back. He felt in his pockets and said he hadn't it. Before leaving I asked him to leave the matter—to stop and have nothing further to do with it. He asked me when I would be in town again and I said perhaps a week, perhaps a month. I have not seen him since that day till this morning.

Fred. de C. Davies (re-called)—I sold Larter two syringes. He told me that he had given the first one to Dr. Morris. The second one was much smaller than the first. I think I made up the ergot prescription for Larter in the last week in March. Geo. Essory, (sworn). I now live in Charlottetown; formerly I lived in the country. I have a great deal to do with you and selling horses. I know Larter. I never gave him any tincture emetic. I know Donald McEachern, but not the rest of the family. I never had any conversation with Larter about the girl who is dead. Larter had once spoken to me of the manner in which an abortion might be procured. It was some time this winter. He spoke about some young fellow being in trouble with a girl, but gave no names. He asked me what would be good in such a case. That is all that took place.

T. C. James, jr., (sworn)—I used to be Dr. Dodd's employ, but left on the 22nd March. I know Larter. I never sold anything to Larter or Slote. I never sold powder or ergot. The Attorney-General then stated that he had furnished all the evidence he would call at the present time. The Magistrate asked Mr. Stewart if he had any evidence to put in. Mr. Stewart said—As the Crown has submitted all its evidence and closed its case, it will now devolve upon Your Honor to determine whether or not a prima facie case has been made out against the prisoner. If, upon a fair consideration of the evidence, Your Honor comes to the conclusion that a sufficient case has been made out, you will, of course, send the prisoner up for trial. If, on the contrary, you think the case insufficient, you will order him to be discharged. Let me state here that I do not intend to submit to Your Honor any evidence on the prisoner's behalf. His guilt or innocence cannot be determined here because should your Honor see fit to discharge the prisoner, that will prevent the Attorney-General from taking the case against him to the Grand Jury of the county. The law, as your Honor well knows, does not permit magistrates, on a preliminary investigation of this kind, after receiving the testimony of the Crown witnesses and the evidence adduced on behalf of the prisoner, to weigh and balance these (it may be differing) accounts, and determine on which side the preponderance of evidence lies. If the Attorney-General has made out a sufficient prima facie case, any evidence I might submit to contradict or explain this evidence would be unavailing, because if it were otherwise your Honor would be assuming the functions of judge and jury, and deciding on a matter outside of your jurisdiction. I am well aware your Honor does not pretend to be trying this case. For this reason I took no objection to the prosecutor's evidence, although many objections could have been taken by me, and did not cross-examine his witnesses, and as I have already said do not now intend to submit any evidence in the prisoner's behalf. That will be reserved for a higher tribunal, before which the prisoner will be tried. I am fully convinced that he can satisfactorily explain circumstances that may now seem to require explanation, and that any suspicion which the evidence at this stage may seem to cast upon him will be speedily expelled. Before concluding, I wish to call Your Honor's attention to this paragraph, which appeared in the Guardian this morning: "The prisoner Larter passed a miserable night in the cell at the jail on Wednesday night last. He did not sleep, but was crying and moaning most of the night. He evidently realizes the awfulness of his position, and is fretting terribly. The strain is telling on him, and he looks wretched."

I have taken the trouble to enquire into the truth of this matter, and I must characterize the account as an infamous and wicked falsehood. When such things are published only to prejudice the community against the prisoner, and to get up a sensation for a paper, such conduct cannot be too strongly reprobated. As for an editor who will stoop to such conduct against a man who is unfortunate, his conduct seems to partake of villainy. This is not the first time such a thing has been done by this paper, and I deem it my duty, in the interests of truth, to call attention thus publicly to the conduct of this paper. The Attorney-General rose and said: I do not think it is necessary for me to say anything more in the matter. I think it is without any doubt a case that is to be sent up for trial. The prisoner could be sent up on Dr. Warburton's evidence alone. I will not say now that he should be sent up on the charge of murder, but for the crime with which he is charged—administering drugs to procure abortion. You have the evidence of the prisoner attempting to bribe Murphy, Mrs. McEachern, and Slote. I don't wish to make any remarks. I prefer to let the case go up unprejudiced by a speech from me. With regard to the statement about prisoner in the Guardian, I agree entirely with Mr. Stewart. A paper goes beyond its duty when it makes an unfair comment upon a man who is accused of such a serious crime as prisoner stands charged with. His Honor the Stipendiary Magistrate said: Beyond all question the evidence is so strong that I have no other course before me than to remand the prisoner to jail until he shall go up to the Supreme Court to stand his trial on the charge of administering drugs to procure abortion.

ERRATA.—In our synopsis of Donald McEachern's evidence, in Tuesday's report of the poisoning case, we inadvertently placed Mr. McEachern's farm at Lot 48. The father of the girl farms at Lot 49. Donald McEachern, farmer, of Lot 48, has nothing whatever to do with the case. GAIN IN WOMAN'S INFLUENCE. CHERFUL NEWS PROMULGATED AT THE MEETING OF WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS. The National Woman Suffrage Association of Massachusetts held its monthly executive meeting at Boston on Tuesday. It was reported that the California legislature had extended school suffrage to women. This is the 21st state to do so. In Arkansas the Senate has passed a bill conferring on the women the right of suffrage and making them eligible to membership on school boards. In six Kansas cities of the first class, 16,888 women and 31,528 men voted. The school suffrage bill passed the California house 39 to 28, and the Senate 31 to 6, but was vetoed by the governor. In the New Mexico House the woman suffrage bill passed the council. In Pennsylvania the office of notary public has passed. The married women's property rights bill has passed both branches of the Kentucky legislature. The Minnesota senate has voted in favor of an amendment extending full suffrage to women. There are two women bank presidents in the country, Mrs. Annie Moore, of Mount Pleasant, Texas, and Mrs. C. E. Chadbourne, of Columbus, Wis. The association voted to send suffrage literature to the southern and western committees to be used in campaign work.

NEWS NOTES. Since the organization of Yale College, 15,350 students have graduated, of whom 7,800 are living. A law at Hutchinson, Kan., is said to require chickens to be inclosed in pens from March to October. George Wolff, 46 years old, fell from his bicycle on Columbus avenue, Boston, on Sunday, and was instantly killed by the fall. Doors have of late become very decorative. Probably one of the finest on Fifth avenue, New York—aside from the Vanderbilts—is that of Miss Helen Gould's house, with its quartered oak, wrought-iron-work, plate glass and lace curtains within. Cornelius Hondrahan, who came to New Brunswick from Castleton, Ireland, in 1840, and lived at Fredericton for a while, died at Rockland, Me., recently, in his ninety-first year. Starting as a penniless journey laborer he accumulated an estate worth from $75,000 to $100,000. He left about half his fortune to Catholic Church institutions. DONAHOE'S MAGAZINE.—The May number of Donahoe's Magazine is, beyond doubt, one of the bright and most interesting numbers of this valuable and entertaining periodical yet issued, and that is saying a great deal, when we consider the meteoric fashion in which this monthly has flashed into the front rank of American periodicals. The special features for the month include articles entitled, "Through the World's Fair in an Hour," illustrated by Commissioner E. C. Hovey; "The Sacrifice of the Shop Girl," by Mary B. O'Sullivan; "The Catholic in Politics," by Thomas C. Quinn; "The Sisters in the Civil War," by Charles S. O'Neill; "Thirty Years of Ireland's Bettle," by Hon. John F. Finerty; "In American Studios," illustrated by Henry Austin; "The Knights of Columbus," illustrated by Thomas W. Cumming; "Suppressing Dangerous Books," by Rev. Charles Warren Currier; "Round About Plattsburgh," illustrated by Bayard Brantford, and a discussion, "Should Married Women Work?" Donahoe Magazine Company, publishers, Boston.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.

SPECIAL DESPATCHES TO THE EXAMINER

Caught in Stock Disasters. MONTREAL, May 4. A good many Montrealers have been caught in the stock disasters which befel New York yesterday. One man is said to have dropped $65,000, in sugar and national cordage. Others are said to be totally cleaned out of funds. One broker is credited with having lost $20,000. A banker said that Montrealers must have dropped at least $150,000 in New York stock during the past two months, and the end is not yet.

Bishop Elected. BOSTON, May 5. At the Episcopal Diocesan Convention held here yesterday, Rev. William Lawrence, Dean of the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge, was elected Bishop of Massachusetts. Dr. Lawrence was the choice of the Broad Churchmen.

Harry Wilkes Purchased. ST. JOHN, May 5. H. R. McLellan has purchased from the New Brunswick government the famous stallion, Harry Wilkes. The price paid is not yet stated.

Captain Pike Dead. ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., May 5. Captain Richard Pike, of the steamer Kite, famous for conducting two Peary expeditions to the arctic regions, died here yesterday.

Sad Suicide. MONTREAL, May 5. Mrs. Mary Grant committed suicide by taking a heavy dose of Paris green. The loss of her daughter was the cause of the woman's trouble.

Custom Rulings. OTTAWA, May 5. Yesterday's custom rulings include the following: Cardigan jackets, dutiable ten cents a pound and twenty per cent.; frilling and edging, thirty per cent.

General Telegraphic News. LONDON, May 3.—Lady Somerset was re-elected President of the British Woman's Temperance Association to-day by a majority of sixty-nine. The minority thereupon left the convention, declaring that the introduction of politics into the association's work would split the organization, and ruin the temperance cause. PARSONS, KANSAS, May 3.—A Missouri, Kansas and Texas R. R. passenger train was held up at Briar Creek, Indian Territory, last night by six armed men, supposed to be members of the notorious Harry Starr gang. The express messenger refused to divulge the combination of the safe, though a revolver was held at his head and a knife at his throat. The robbers relieved all passengers of their money and jewelry and escaped. A large number of prominent railroad men were on the train.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 3.—The appointment of a chief of police, the new office created by the city bill recently passed through the legislature, to succeed the city marshal, was settled at a meeting of the city council to-night by the selection of John O'Sullivan the deputy marshal. The other two candidates were John Naylor, Secretary S. P. C., and detective Power. It was generally thought that either Power or Naylor would get the position.

WINNIPEG, May 3.—The water in the Red River is very high and the Northern Pacific track is flooded and no trains have gone south the past two days. Emerson is under five feet of water. People are moving about in boats. Should the water rise a couple of feet more it will meet that of the Coulees back of the town and the situation will then be alarming. Several large warehouses have been carried away at Selkirk. MONTREAL, May 3.—There will probably be 6,000 head of cattle shipped from this port during the next ten days. Freight rate about 45 shillings. Exporters state that if the embargo is raised on the other side, 100,000 head will go from the St. Lawrence this season; and if not, the figure will not reach more than half that number. It is generally believed, however, that the imperial authorities will allow Canadian cattle into the interior of Great Britain before very long.

KINGSTON, Ont., May 2.—The Conservatives of this city intend to desecrate the Old Chief's tomb on the anniversary of his death. The Macdonald Club has invited the Montreal Club of the same name to visit this city on that date and participate in the decoration ceremonies. The Montrealers having accepted, it is now proposed to invite all similar organizations throughout Ontario to send representatives. It is suggested that the decoration day of the various societies be on the same date that Sir John Macdonald's grave is to be decorated, and the Macdonald Club will endeavor to have matters so arranged.

DIED. At Sydney Mills, Lot 34, May 4th, 1893, Isaac Thompson, in his 43rd year. [Funeral on Sunday, at 3 p. m.] At Little York, on the 4th inst., Addella Jean, daughter of the late Mr. Charles Hardy, aged one year and twenty-three days. "Safe in the arms of Jesus."

SPLENDID BUILDING LOT FOR SALE.

I WILL sell by Public Auction on the premises, on the 19th MAY NEXT, at 2 o'clock, p. m., my splendid Building Lot situated on the St. Peter's Road, just outside the city limits, having a breadth of one chain and forty links on the St. Peter's Road, and running back for the distance of two chains and fifty links. This is a great opportunity for any one who wishes to purchase a Building Lot which is free from city taxes and has all the advantages of being in the city. WILLIAM N. TOOMBS. ap27—cod guar
