Alberta Gets Old Skeleton

OTTAWA (CP) — An almost complete skeleton of an ancient duckbilled dinosaur has been shipped from the National Museum to Edmonton where it will go on display in the Alberta Museum and Archives.

One of the many dinosaur skeletons and fossils discovered in the rich fossil fields of southern Alberta, the specimen was uncovered in 1937 by Dr. C.M. Sternberg, who retired from the National Museum in 1951.

It originally measured 30 feet in length and was buried on a delta along the shore of an ancient island sea, dating back 75,000 years, near the present town of Manyberries. Its scientific name is lambeosaurus.

The specimen is to be considered a permanent loan to the new Alberta Museum, now under construction as a centennial project. The loan is in recognition of the great contributions to museums everywhere of the Alberta fossil fields.

OBITUARY
DUNCAN A. GASS
Inserted by the family

The many friends, neighbours and relatives were deeply saddened when they learned of the sudden passing of Duncan A. Gass at his home in New Haven Nov. 23 in his sixty-first year. It is in his home that his loss will be most keenly felt.

He was the son of the late Andrew and Euphemia Gass, born at Appin Road, August twenty-second, 1905. At the age of five moved with his parents to New Haven where he resided until his passing. Though in failing health for the past year following an operation in July, his family became more alarmed of the seriousness of his illness. He was always trying to hide from his family his pains and suffering which he endured with a cheerful manner and patience.

He was always an active man, was out as usual helping with the morning chores, had plans on going to Charlottetown that afternoon. He took a turn for the worse. He knew that evening as his time was drawing high he was asking to go to be with his mother. Always attended Church on the Lord's Day when able to be there. His warm personality and good neighbourliness will long be remembered by his many friends.

"King and humble" in all his ways Upright and just to the end of his days. Sincere and true in heart and mind. Beautiful memories he's left behind.

Left to mourn his passing are his wife, Lydia E. MacDonald, Canoe Cove. Five children, (Bernice) Mrs. Ronald Cudmore; Wilbur, Johnnie, Melbourne and Andy, all of New Haven; fourteen grandchildren, one predeceased 1950; four brothers, Daniel, Richard and Andrew all of Cornwall; Johnnie, predeceased him 1930. Three sisters, (Mary) Mrs. Fletcher MacEachern; (Sarah) Mrs. Fred Hansen; (Annie) Mrs. MacPhee MacLean, all of Cornwall. Also six half brothers, Willie in B.C., Jolie in Boston, Andrew killed in action 1923, Robert from the effects of being wounded and gassed. Johnnie and James also predeceased him, one half sister, Mrs. Janie MacPhail of Charlottetown.

A short service was held for the family and relatives at the home at 11.30 in the morning, conducted by his pastor, Rev. Raymond Gillis. The remains were then conveyed to Clyde River Presbyterian Church for service at 2 p.m. which was largely attended. The service was conducted by Rev. Raymond Gillis assisted by Rev. Donald Nicholson. Mrs. Gordon MacKinnon was organist. Rev. Donald Nicholson feelingly rendered a solo, Beyond The Sunset, a favourite of the deceased of which he sang through the evening before his passing away. Hymns sung were "The Lord is My Shepherd" and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus".

He was tenderly laid to rest in the church cemetery. Pallbearers were Michael Murphy, Thomas Devereaux, Arnold Beer, Richard MacPhee, Earl Moore and Kenneth MacNeill. Flower-bearers: Sandy MacNeill, Kenneth MacKinnon, Ralph Newman, Everett Boyle, Charlie Frizzell; Brent MacDougall.

Senate Plan For Elderly Getting Favorable Reception

By KEN CLARK
OTTAWA (CP) — A Senate committee recommendation for a guaranteed annual income for the elderly is getting a favorable reception in government circles, informants say.

Whether the recommendation by the Senate committee on aging will be adopted by the Liberal government remains to be seen.

The committee recommended Feb. 3 an annual minimum income of $1,250 for single persons 65 and over. Couples would get $2,220. It would amount to $105 a month for single persons and $185 for couples.

Informants say adoption of the Senate recommendation would be an acceptable political course for the minority Liberal government as a means of raising old age pensions—now $75 a month at age 69.

Government acceptance of a flat old age pension increase is not politically feasible, the reasoning goes, because the Conservatives and NDP campaigned on that platform in the Nov. 8 election campaign.

The Liberals promised to implement a national assistance program to provide special aid to the needy elderly in co-operation with the provinces that would provide up to $125 a month with a means test.

However, the government is reported to be under some pressure from many Liberals to take more direct action to raise old age pensions.

One Liberal MP, Steve Otte (York East) told a Reporters' "Most Liberal MP—almost all—are concerned about old age pensions and want to raise them to a living standard."

He does not believe they should be raised to a flat $100, as advocated by the two major opposition parties. But something should be done to get them up although a $25-a-month raise would increase inflation dangers, he said.

The Canada Assistance Plan promised by the Liberals still is in the planning stage. The federal government has held discussions with the provinces, but has not shut the door on format changes.

Adding to indications that a change for old age pensions may be in the offing is a claim by Conservative MP Erik Nielsen that the Liberals are thinking of instituting $100-a-month pensions. The Yukon member has a reputation for coming up with advance information.

He told a reporter the government has either begun negotiations with the provinces or plans some on a plan to provide the increase.

New Look At Communists Suggested

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Halifax professor says Canadians should drop their "cowboys and Indians" approach to communism.

Dr. J. B. Hardie of Pine Hill college told the Women's Canadian Club of Vancouver that too many Canadians still think of communism as being for the "bad guys" and free enterprise for "good guys."

"Canadians need a closer look to see what communism thinks about itself and not just what Time magazine and right wing newspapers think about it," he said.

"From one-third to one-half of the world's population now lives under communism or wishes it did."

"This is a far cry from the American belief that people under communism are waiting to be liberated."

"Whether we like it or not, communism is dynamic and forceful and we must recognize this if we are to reckon with it," Dr. Hardie said.

Dr. Hardie listed the appeals communism holds for different groups:

"To the peasant it promises a share in the state's wealth, university professors find it embodies cherished economic theories, trade unionists see the promise of respectability and scientists see support and equipment for their research."

Dr. Hardie said the greatest influence in the course of world events over the next 20 years will be resolution of tension between Russia and China.

Dr. Laidlaw, Dr. Lantz and nurse see their kindness, to Rev. Raymond Gillis, Rev. Donald Nicholson, Mrs. Gordon MacKinnon as organist.
