Armed Earth Satellite Seen Rocket Defence

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer
OTTAWA (CP) - Scientific opinion among defence officials here is that only an armed earth satellite will provide any kind of effective defence against the intercontinental rocket.
They don't believe the projected ground-based Nike-Zeus counter-missile system being developed by the United States will be feasible because of the difficulty of picking out the actual warhead from among decoys, booster rockets and other space debris.
Neither do they believe that an airborne counter-missile system such as the American Bold Orion will do the trick because of the necessity of keeping manned planes constantly in the air with their interceptors.

New Avro Proposals May Keep Plant Busy

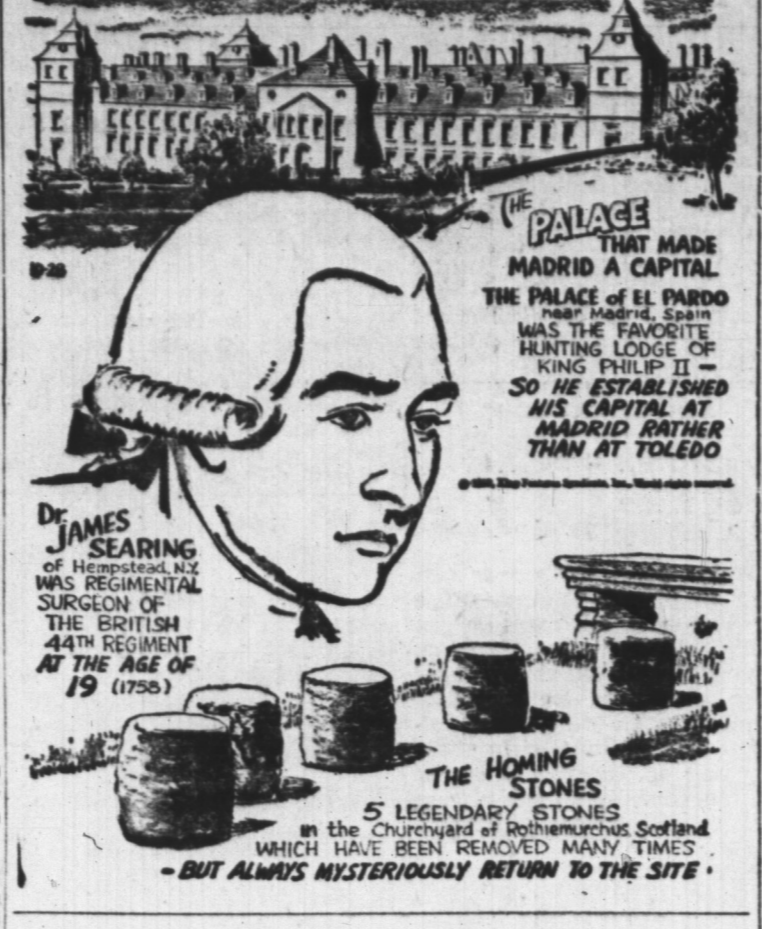

TORONTO (CP) - Avro Aircraft Ltd. has on hand five or six proposals from various companies which could lead to increased activity at Avro's plant, Sir Roy Dobson said Monday at the annual meeting of A. V. Roe Canada Ltd., parent company of Avro.
Sir Roy - who is chairman of Roe - made the statement in reply to a shareholder who asked if there are any plans for the manufacture of new products which could make use of the facilities made largely idle through cancellation in February of the government's contracts for Arrow intercepter aircraft.

CONSIDERABLE PROGRESS
At Avro Aircraft, considerable progress has been made with the Avrocar, a unique form of aircraft capable of rising vertically from the ground, and we hope to be able to clear one or two outstanding technical problems and then demonstrate it in free flight.
Earnings for the year ending next July 31 will probably be lower than for the year ending last July 31, Sir Roy said, reflecting the full impact of the federal government's cancellation in February of contracts for the company's Arrow intercepter aircraft and the Orenda engine.
In a brief reference to company executive changes following the Arrow-Orenda cancellations, Sir Roy said:
'I do not intend to delve too deeply into the subject of resignations, but it is sufficient to say they were necessary and leave it at that.'
Summing up some developments on the 'brighter side' Sir Roy said:
'Dosco's steel operations are considerably better at the moment and we are doing better in the trailer business. Sales of refrigeration equipment are improved, our new bus will be out in a few months' time and we hope by next year to be able to report success with our Bobcat military vehicle.'
Sir Roy's comments were contained in a text made available to the press in advance of delivery.

Opening lead-king of clubs.
This hand was played in the European championships in Stockholm in 1956. It occurred in the match between England and France. South, for England, was Harold Franklin, who became declarer at three hearts.
West cashed the A-K of clubs and shifted to a low diamond. East won the ace and returned a diamond. South taking the king, Franklin then led a low spade to the queen. East took the king and returned another diamond.
South won and didn't bother to go to dummy to take a heart finesse. Franklin led the ace of hearts, caught the lone king, and made three hearts as a result of the fine play.
He reasoned that if East had had the guarded king of hearts in addition to the king of spades and ace of diamonds, East would have had two notrump rather than three clubs.
Since it followed that West therefore had the king of hearts, no good could come of a finesse, and the only hope was that West had the unguarded king.
Franklin couldn't have been more right in his analysis, as the result showed. But East pinned the blame on his partner for allowing South to make the hand.
When the end was led to the queen, West had played the six. East contended that if West had made the more proper play of the nine to start a high-low signal showing only two cards in the suit, East would have permitted the queen to win the trick.
'Declarer would then naturally have assumed that West had the king, and might therefore erroneously have concluded that East had the king of hearts. South would accordingly have taken a heart finesse, lost to the king, and gone down one when he later lost a spade trick.
All of which sounds very metaphysical, though we do think East had a point. The whole hand just goes to show that when an important championship is at stake, the players just don't sit there and whistle Dixie.
