Canadian Actor Thrilled By London Role

By Muriel Narraway Canadian Press Staff Writer LONDON, (CP)—Timothy Findley of Toronto has found that actors, like small boys, must sometimes be seen and not heard. Findley, 25, is appearing with Alec Guinness in "The Prisoner," first stage production by the latter since he returned from the Stratford, Ont., Shakespearean festival last year.

The Canadian speaks only half a sentence in his first West End part. But he doesn't mind being speechless. It isn't the first time. "I couldn't talk when Alec offered me the chance to come here," he said in an interview, explaining how he would have found it hard to believe a year ago that he would ever be on the same London stage as Guinness.

INVITED BY GUINNESS

Findley came to Britain last September along with Montreal's Robert Easton, 20, at Guinness' invitation. The British actor, impressed by their work in the Stratford cast offered them the fare across, accommodation and three months' fee-paid training at the Central School of Dramatic Art.

The two actors lived for three months with Guinness, his wife and 13-year-old son, spent Christmas with them and then moved into separate digs. "The Prisoner" is on the Cardinal Mindszenty theme. It concerns the efforts of an Iron Curtain interrogator to extract a confession of treason from a Roman Catholic Cardinal played by Guinness. There are only three speaking parts in the play. Easton has a wholly silent part.

A. spoke very encouragingly and thanked Mrs. Rogers for the invitation after the President of the different branches had expressed their thanks at being present. The season's work was viewed with great interest and a delicious lunch was served by the ladies of the afternoon and evening Branch. A social hour brought a very happy seasons' work to a close.
