Assassination Linked With Queen's Visit

LONDON (CP) — The assassination of President Kennedy has been linked again with fears regarding the Queen's forthcoming visit to Canada.

Publication of the Warren report on the Dallas assassination "could scarcely have been more unfortunately timed," says the Daily Express in a story from Ottawa by correspondent Rene MacColl.

"For the report has received massive publicity which could easily trigger off in the mind of some crackpot the desire to imitate."

MacColl quotes a high authority as saying:

"It is always happening. Certain crimes are apt to follow a cycle, as people with unbalanced minds read about them and then try more of the same."

MENTIONED IN REPORT

The Kennedy assassination has been mentioned in previous reports in connection with terrorist threats against the Queen and Prince Philip, scheduled to leave for Canada Oct. 5.

"As a veteran of 22 royal tours extending across four reigns I have never encountered an atmosphere quite like that in Canada," says MacColl.

"It is an atmosphere compounded of tension, uncertainty and apprehension. It presents the Queen with one of the greatest challenges she has ever faced."

The Sun, a new London newspaper, meanwhile reports its men have been discussing the royal visit with readers It presents the views of eight persons, only one of whom is opposed to the trip. One woman suggests the Queen wear a bullet-proof vest.

"Prestige demands that the Queen should go," says Mrs. Evelyn Buckingham of Crawley, Sussex. "But I think she should travel in a bullet-proof car—not an open one like President Kennedy's.

"And, if necessary, she should wear a bullet - proof waistcoat."

Miss Lesley Billington, Burnley, Lancashire, comments:

"Why go to a country where she may not be welcome and where some silly hothead might injure her?"

British PM Is Seen Afraid Of TV Debate With Wilson

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) — Sir Alec Douglas-Home is politely applauded when he declares he wants to avoid an American-style contest in the British election. But behind this may be a touch of concern that the prime minister is no match for Labor Leader Harold Wilson before the television cameras.

It is obvious, said James Cameron in the London Sun, that if the two leaders held a TV debate in the style of Richard M. Nixon and the late John F. Kennedy that Wilson would make 'mincemeat" out of Sir Alec.

The campaign for the Oct. 15 elect on is moving at a somewhat slow pace with the emphasis turning to such volatile domestic issues as a housing shortage, high interest rates and the possible threat of a foreign trade crisis.

These issues appear to be churning up some attraction for a rather unenthusiastic electorate but not of the kind that might provide devastating blows for one party or another. The professional pulse-takers appear to mirror the view that this still is a neck-and-neck race between the Conservatives and Labor.

SEEKS DEBATE

Perhaps realizing he needs more powerful weapons if he is to knock the Tories out of 13 years of rule, Wilson has challenged Douglas-Home to a national TV debate. Sir Alec has dryly replied that after seeing the Kennedy-Nixon battle, he was cured forever.

'Let's keep this election British and keep personalities out of it," he keeps repeating as he tours the country pursuing the theme that the Labor party would destroy Britain's prosperity and world prestige if it got into power.

Yet some viewers, who caught a glimpse of Wilson and Douglas-Home on separate TV appearances, could not help comparing the relaxed, fatherly image that Wilson projected with the uncomfortable, stiff and nervous image conveyed by Sir Alec.

The Daily Express, a strong Conservative supporter, hailed Sir Alec's first appearance and interpreted the prime minister's nervous twitter as jovial laughter and confidence. The Guardian, which supports the Liberals suggested Sir Alec appeared stiff and nervous.

Stronger was the comparison of The Sun which describes itself as independent but which recently rose from the ashes of the Labor-leaning Daily Herald.

TOO PROFESSIONAL?

It suggested Wilson's command of political argument and his deployment of facts as being almost too professional. As for Sir Alec, The Sun's commentator said:

"One watched with some embarrassment: The fidgeting fingers, the bleak eye, the almost ventriloquial line of the permanently-stiff upper lip, the nervous reaction of the staccato laugh. . .

"Clearly Sir Alec detests the telly. One feels that to him it intrudes all the vexatious vulgarity of popular politics."

OUR BOARDING HOUSE MAJOR HOOPLE

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By B. JAY BECKER

1. You are declarer with the West hand at Three Notrump. North leads the jack of clubs on which South plays the seven. How would you play the hand?

	♠ J 9 5 3 ♥ 4 2 ♦ A Q J 6 ♣ A 8 3
♠ A K 2 ♥ K J 10 9 5 ♦ K 10 7 3 ♣ K	N W E S
	♠ 6 4 ♥ 8 6 ♦ 9 5 2 ♣ A K J 10

2. You are declarer with the West hand at Four Hearts. North leads the A-K-Q of diamonds, South following suit. How would you play the hand?

	♠ A K 8 ♥ A K Q 10 5 ♦ 3 4 ♣ Q 9 3
♠ 6 4 3 2 ♥ 9 6 ♦ 9 8 2 ♣ A K J 10	N W E S

1. You start with eight sure tricks and the only problem is how to go about trying to get the ninth. Two main lines of play are possible. One is to come to your hand with a diamond and lead a heart toward the dummy. If North follows low, you have to decide whether to play the nine or king from dummy. Mathematically, all you have is about a 50 per cent chance of guessing right.

The other line of play is to attack spades instead of hearts in an effort to obtain the ninth trick. You start by cashing the A-K. If the ten or queen appears, you are now certain of making the contract by continuing with a spade. If neither of these cards appears, you still make three notrump by leading another spade, unless it develops that North started with Q-10-x-x of spades.

Of the two lines of play, by far the better one is to attack spades. You have about an 85 per cent chance of developing an extra spade trick before you start to lead the suit. Even if it turns out that both opponents follow low on the A-K, you still have about a 4 to 1 chance of establishing a third spade trick by continuing with a spade from dummy.

2. Ruff the third diamond and lead the ten of hearts! This strange play comes very close to insuring the contract. If you cashed the A-Q-K- of hearts instead, hoping to find the trumps divided 3-3 or to drop the doubleton jack, you would very likely go down if it turned out that either opponent had the J-x-x-x of trumps and a shortage in clubs.

By playing the ten of hearts first, you retain control of the hand. The opponent who takes the ten with the jack cannot profitably return a diamond, since it can be ruffed in dummy. Whatever else he returns, you draw trumps with the A-K-Q and still make the contract if the trumps are divided either 3-3 or 4-2.
