
SPRING PARK SCHOOL PROGRESSING

The new Spring Park School will be ready, at least for partial occupancy, by the end of September, it was learned last evening.

The Contractors, M.F. Schurman and Co. Ltd., who began construction in April, hope that the end of next month will bring some relief to the congestion in the present school where some 300 pupils, from grades one to ten, are located in eight rooms. With the opening of the new 8-room school in September, only the elementary grades will remain in the old school.

Situated between Nassau Street and Kirkwood Driver, the new school, constructed at a cost of over $100,000, has long been deemed a necessity, and the residents of Spring Park may well be commended for their enterprise in undertaking a major contribution to education in their district.

Veteran's Hospital Will Study How 'Flu Is Caught

By RENNIE TAYLOR

LIVERMORE, Calif. (AP)—A big hospital building internally bathed in "black light" is the setting for an unusual experiment designed to show whether the new Asiatic flu can be transmitted from one person to another through the air.

Inside this building, part of the veterans' hospital here, are about 140 long-term patients. As long as they are patients they will not be allowed to leave the structure, which has been equipped with a barber shop, a chapel and other features to make it virtually self-contained.

The building and its occupants, as well as other units of the institution, await the onset of the expected flu epidemic which some health authorities say could affect as much as one-third of the United States population.

The veterans administration disclosed the project today in announcing that the patients in the building plus the 520 employees of the entire unit have volunteered to play parts in the test.

The experiment is important because medical science does not know how the influenza virus moves from one human being to another. It might show whether the flu organism could be stopped by a radiation barrier or whether some degree of isolation is effective.

Black light, or ultra-violet, as it is called is a form of radiation. It can kill some kinds of germs.

The walls of the test structure, know as building 62, are studded with ultra-violet lamps, so aimed that their rays do not strike patients or employees directly but irradiate the air volume.

Samples of blood serum have been taken from every patient in building 62 and in all employees of the hospital installation.

These samples are being checked for the presence of Asiatic flu at the government's communicable disease centre in Atlanta. From this the public health service will know just which ones, if any, have had the flu and which have not.

After the expected epidemic sweeps through, blood samples will be taken from these same patients and employees and checked again for signs of flu infection.

The employees generally will not have the benefit of ultra-violet radiated air. If the percentage of infection among them turns out to be higher than among the patients of building 62 it will be a pretty good indication that ultra violet has some deterrent effect on the disease organism.

Knows Newfoundland Flora Better Than That Of Home

By IAN MACDONALD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Dr. Ernest Rouleau, professor of systematic botany at the University of Montreal, has arrived here to continue his study of flora in Newfoundland which he said will take "another five years."

Dr. Rouleau noted in an interview that he has been conducting a Newfoundland botanical survey since 1948. "In fact, I'm more familiar with the flora of Newfoundland than that of Quebec," his native province.

The survey has been sponsored for the past three years by the wildlife division of the provincial mines and resources department. In 1948, Dr. Rouleau was on a Guggenheim Fellowship, and in other years with the National Research Council.

The tall, well-built botanist, who is also curator of the Marie-Victorin Herbarium in Montreal, was in London in 1949 on a Nuffield scholarships studying Newfoundland plants collected by British botanists.

Dr. Rouleau has collected 5,000 Newfound and plants to date, and says his most interesting find was an Arctic fleabane, a low plant of the dandelion family which grows in rock crevices.

"I'm most proud of having collected it here," he said. "It is most interesting because of its rarity in eastern Americana."

This plant is known to exist in two localities in Quebec, and at another spot on Baffin Island. It is abundant in the Rocky Mountains. The rarity in Newfoundland was found at Breakfast Head, facing Shellbird Island on the Humber River.

He plans to continue collecting plants until September. His trips take him to all parts of the province, and he is especially interested in the belief that trees at Johnson's Cove are native sugar-maples.

The botanist's work is complex and exacting. Dr. Rouleau has 120 catalogues of various vascular plants, showing the area where each species is known "so that at a glance once can look at the distribution of any species."

To aid new Newfoundland studies he has made an index of about 5,000 place names, located by numbers on the map, so he can quickly find the location where any flower or plant was secured.
