Minimum Wage Scheduled For Cabinet Consideration

Expected to be considered at this week's meeting of the government's Executive Council is a possible recommendation from Welfare and Labor Minister Henry Wedge that a minimum wage be implemented in the province.

The Labor Relations Board made a study of the need for a minimum wage and reported to Mr. Wedge. It is believed that the Board's recommendation is about one dollar per hour.

All other provinces have minimum wage regulations, and these regulations are administered by a labor relations board or a minimum wage board, appointed by the government.

The regulations are enforced by inspectors who have the power to examine company books and payroll records. It is probable that if this province goes ahead with a minimum wage regulation that an inspector will be appointed.

Several of the larger provinces pass minimum wage regulations for various occupations, as was done in the province recently for restaurant waitresses and cashiers in the Charlottetown and Summerside areas. Generally minimum wages are on an industry basis and vary in some areas; in some cases the size of a community governs the amount of a minimum wage.

even more lively singing, square dancing and set dancing.

No parade is ever complete without clowns, and a number of these laugh-makers were on hand yesterday. One clown, wearing a diaper and the other wearing a full length dress. Still another clown dressed in a monkey in a space suit with a long wooden barrel around his neck.

A sign read "The First Islander" and another "The Greatest". A space machine was termed a "Space Ship".

One clown strolled around dressed in a hollow barrel, on which was a sign reading "Fiasco. Died, give me back my shirt".

Asked to comment on the parade and spectators, carnival manager Charles Hogan termed it "terrific, excellent, a great show. I have never seen so many people in Summerside at once".

Carnival president Arthur J. McCallum said he was "pleased to see the parade as we've ever had." He referred to the parade as, "terrific and wonderful".

Riding on the various floats were the 14 contestants in the "P.E.I. contest".

During the afternoon, a meeting of the P.E.I. committee members of the lobster carnival and representatives of the various departments of fisheries, discussed plans for the growth of the lobster industry.

The carnival next year will devote one day to be known as "Fishermen's Day" and will feature aquatic sports, demonstrations of equipment and fishing methods and competitive fishing will be conducted.

A cooking school will also be held by the federal department of fisheries, and a restaurant owners of P.E.I.

A steering committee, with a chairman, F. McAdam, St. Peter's Harbour; D. Polner, Cape D'Or; H. Condon, Bransford; and representatives from each of the major fishing communities that will be added.

This committee will act with the lobster carnival committee to formulate the program for the coming year. Fisheries Minister Leo Rosier, volunteered to fund the steering committee from his department on an advisory capacity.

speaking fees. I would not favour such double standard. I do not believe that renouncing respecting fees warrant any more consideration than resolutions affecting a great many other things.

"Fees are related to program, and in a sense the level of fees is determined by the type of program approved at the annual meeting of the CTF and consideration in this area of representation might also lead to changes in the CTF and the Board of Directors, Mr. McCurdy said.

The speaker observed that whatever the outcome of such constitutional changes a general rule would be that the one who is elected to office is responsible for the program. If an agreement is achieved, complete responsibility for the CTF and its affiliates can be worked out.

TEACHERS' NEEDS

Delegates were welcomed by the organizations should: "provide the teacher with professional status and protection that will help secure material rewards in keeping with the position he is expected to occupy in our society; protect him against the incursions of those who would restrict academic and professional freedom to serve social or political ends; and provide for the development of half of the profession not only for helping to inform its members of the public interest in their work but also for taking the lead in bringing about new developments in educational progress."

"Surely there is room here for the strong provincial organization serving the needs of its members in both the professional and the protective field; and for a national organization speaking for teachers on national and international matters and providing for the services that are equally acceptable in the large affiliate and the small."

"If both the material and the intellectual energies of teachers should be distributed in an equal way, not only will the profession appear in bad light as the public is concerned, but teachers themselves might consider stages where they would say, and with considerable justification, 'a plague of locusts is devouring me.' Mr. McCurdy concluded.

DELEGATES WELCOMED

Mayor Sees Need For Apartment Buildings

Mayor Gaudet said yesterday that the northwest section of the city would have to be rezoned if six or eight apartment buildings were erected.

The mayor was referring to the section of the city for which an application for commercial rezoning had been rejected by the Charlottetown City Council Monday.

The present zoning limits housing to four-family units, he said.

"Commenting on the application received by the council Monday for the erection of apartment buildings on Belvedere Avenue, Mayor Gaudet said that a great need for apartment buildings exists in this city.

"The application merits the full and sympathetic consideration of the town planning advisory committee," he added.

"There is a great deal of interest in housing at this time. The application fits in with the housing survey report expected in August," he pointed out.

"Only by making possible such an upgrade in housing," Mayor Gaudet asserted, "can we hope to proceed with a redevelopment program in blighted sections of the city."

"However," he concluded, "this matter is within the jurisdiction of the town planning committee."
