HOW TO CUT GLASS.

With Oil and a Hot Poker You Can Make Rings Out of a Bottle.

This week we give you a somewhat unique way of utilizing a broken bottle. Even if you do not care to make a practical use of the suggestion you will find it an interesting experiment in the study of heat.

When the neck of a bottle is broken off, a ragged edge is left, which wholly unfit the bottle for any use whatever, except to be thrown on the ash heap. Let us see how we may save it from that melancholy fate.

Place the bottom part of the broken bottle on a table and pour oil into it until it reaches the point where you would like to have the bottle cut. Then heat the end of an iron poker redhot and plunge it suddenly into the oil. There will be a little snapping sound, and you will see that the glass has been evenly cut all around on a level with the oil. The accompanying illustration shows the whole process.

If you wish to carry your experiment a little further and make a number of glass rings, you have only to remove part of the oil every time and repeat the process above described. Pour out, say, half an inch of the oil each time, and you may easily make several rings half an inch in breadth.

You will recognize in this experiment the same principle as in the fracture of a cold glass when hot water or hot coffee is poured into it. Glass is a poor conductor of heat, and the fracture is caused by the expansion of the inside of the vessel before the heat can get to the outside.—Philadelphia Times.

Flower Study.

Children in many European countries have excellent opportunity for the study of botany. The little city people have plants especially supplied them, and in a province of southern Russia 283 acres are devoted to school gardens. These gardens are planted with fruit and forest trees. Teachers instruct in tree, vine, grain and garden and also give lessons in the culture of bees and silkworms.

Besides Russia, Sweden, France, Austria and Germany provide opportunities for their children in this branch of education. In Berlin two large wagons loaded with plant specimens deliver cuttings, which have been labeled and packed for different schools, the daily papers having already notified what kinds are to be expected.—Baltimore Herald.

Smart Woman.
"Progressive!" he said. "Well, I should think she was. Why, do you know what that woman did?"
They admitted that they did not.
"She has secured the services of a hypnotist," he explained, "and now she is able to feed her boarders on rump steak and make them think it is tenderloin."—Chicago Post.
