Games For Old Men On Limited Pensions

TORONTO (CP)—If plans under study by the Ontario division of the Canadian Red Cross Society bear fruit, more parks will have shuffle boards, checkers and other games for old men on limited pensions who have no other way of spending their time.

There will be clubs in congested areas where pensioners can play cards, have light refreshments or a meal; where they can take a bath or simply sit and swap yarns.

There will be handicraft centres where the "forgotten men" can be encouraged to take up a hobby or otherwise develop latent talents they may have forgotten.

Ontario's Red Cross officials said all this and more should be done for old men "who do not fit into club life and who sit idly in parks, libraries and stations where they see life but are not a part of it."

COMBINED EFFORT

The senior citizens committee of the Ontario division Red Cross met recently to discuss the preliminaries for the study they will make this summer in conjunction with other welfar. groups and service clubs.

They were joined in the talks by representatives of the provincial department of education, Salvation Army, Ontario Welfare Council, the metropolitan parks commission, which serves the city and 12 suburban communities, the Ontario Alcoholic Research Foundation, the Ontario Recreation Association and other groups.

A need was seen, too, for "semi-treatment centres" for the aged alcoholic.

This was a "necessity—so that those who needed help could have other places to go than the police station and the gutter."

The committee was told that a province-wide survey showed a number of communities are already making progress in this field.

Brockville is starting a senior citizens program; Preston is organizing a senior citizens council; North York, a Toronto suburb, is interested in establishing a day centre for the elderly; Markdale and Walkerton homes for the aged had requested help for similar projects.

Th old and lonely person is a "calendar casualty" said Col. J.A. McCamus, president of the Ontario division Red Cross.

One of the main problems was to arouse public sympathy. Service club representatives are to be invited to attend the committee's next formal meeting in the autumn.
