"Well, if this is what is called Farming," James teased his sister when leaving his field-work and driving circumspectly and slowly, he dropped us at her door. "It's not the laborious occupation it's supposed to be!"

THE DAY BEFORE CONVENTION

The streets of Charlottetown, the shops, the theatres, the hotels, the restaurants, and of course, the Prince of Wales College Convention Hall, will be filled part of this week, with the handsome and alert delegates to the annual convention of the Provincial Women's Institutes. Because few will pause to consider and praise Dad's and the family's share in Mom's coming here, I am dedicating to them Scene I, Act I, of a touching little comedy, entitled "The Day Before the Convention." By popular request, I may complete it and offer it to the next Drama Festival. No royalties!

Dramatis Personae
Jack Fairley, a farmer
Betty Fairley, his wife
Bonnie Fairley, their fifteen year old daughter
Eddie Fairley, their ten year old son
Bubs Fairley, their seven year old son.

Act I. Scene I
The scene is laid in the kitchen of the Fairley home.
The kitchen is as colorful as the outdoors. Rose and blue curtains hang in the windows. Five goldfish brighten the kitchen sink. Two kittens, a white one and a yellow one, purr on the cozy sofa. A spotted dog (orange and black) surveys the proceedings from the rocking chair. Mrs. Fairley and her daughter are spreading a pink cloth on the table. They hum a tune while they set out the silver and glassware. Bonnie looks at her mother and smiles.
Mrs. Fairley: I was thinking, mother.
Mrs. Fairley (encouragingly): Yes?
Bonnie: I was thinking, the purse I have will just match your suit.
Mrs. Fairley: Present in the kitchen and green coat, will look good on you for the convention. Here they are. (She brings in a box).
Mrs. Fairley (fondly): Well, aren't you a dear. Now I shall be all dressed up. You're sure you won't mind my leaving you for a few days?
Bonnie: I am thrilled, mother. Why don't you stay over next week? I'm just dying to try out the recipes I learned at the W.I. food club, and it will be fun when my work is over to sew another dress like the one I made at the sewing club.
Mrs. Fairley: Thank you, dear. Perhaps I shall stay over if you feel that way.
(Eddie Fairley runs in with a big speckled trout). Here, mother, this is for you. I just caught it. My going away present.
Mrs. Fairley: My thoughtful son! (Kisses him, or tries to. Just trying to kiss a ten year old).
(Bubs Fairley runs in with a large bowl of wild strawberries). Bubs: You'd better eat them, Mom. They'll be gone by the time you get back. I bet they won't have any even at Government House.
Mrs. Fairley: How good you're all to me!
All: You're good to us too, Mom. (Enter Jack Fairley, whistling happily. He gives his family a big smile).
Jack Fairley: What a wife! What a family! What a lucky man am I! (He goes to the pantry and looks at the rounded brown loaves of newly baked bread, and more loaves. And more loaves. And at the plump biscuits. And more biscuits. And at the cookies. Tray on tray of them. And the meat. And the layer cakes. He opens another door and looks at the jars of preserved meats. And vegetables. And pickles. And fruits. He opens the refrigerator (or ice-chest) and looks at the roasts. He puts his arms around his wife (he well may).
Mrs. Fairley: Well, mother, that should keep us for a few days. Don't hurry back. Enjoy yourself. And here's some extra spending money.
(Mrs. Fairley looks lovingly into his eyes and kisses him). Mrs. Fairley: My dearest husband! And children! What can I bring you all, that's good enough for you!
Mr. Fairley (proudly): Your mother is not only the best cook in the world. She can turn a sentence better than anyone. Read that resolution mother you're going to give at larger school unit.
Mrs. Fairley (modestly): Aw, Dad. (She reads and all listen attentively).
All: Hurray for Mom. (They dance around her singing, "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow.")

Pasture Crops For Swine
Pasture crops are valuable for breeding and growing swine. In addition to providing green succulent feeds they supply proteins, minerals and vitamins in readily available forms. Moreover, the hog, while foraging, takes exercise, an important routine in the life of breeding boars, brood sows and young pigs.

Pasture crops play an important role in the control of parasites. If pastures are rotated or changed, worm infestation can be brought under control to a considerable extent. Young pigs that have been treated for worms after weaning and put on clean pasture have a reasonable chance of escaping further infestation.

Most clovers and grasses grown on Prince Edward Island farms provide suitable pasture, but none is better than alfalfa or red clover. Fall wheat can be pastured in the late fall or early spring when other forage crops are not available.

Club News

The Kingsboro Poultry Club held their regular meeting on Friday evening at 8 p.m. with eighteen members present. Miss Lyle Robertson acted as president and Miss MacLean, the secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting. The topic under discussion at the meeting was poultry nutrition. Mr. Harry Robbins, the provincial poultryman for the Province, attended the poultry club meetings and led the discussion groups.

The Busy Bees Ayrshire Calf Club of Head of Hillsboro and vicinity, held their regular judging class at Harvey Douglas's on Friday, June 27th. Following this, films were shown at the School and the members sold ice cream to make money for the Club. Over $17.00 was realized, plus a donation of $10.00.

On Thursday evening, June 26th, the Alexandria Calf Club met at the home of Club Members Athol and Lowell Jenkins. Instruction in judging Holsteins was given by F. Morris Deacon, Fieldman.

The Johnston's River Holstein Calf Club was reorganized at an enthusiastic meeting held at the home of Club members, Mary and Louis McKenna, on Tuesday evening, June 24th. Sixteen members were present, and Leo Driscoll was elected President for the coming year. Other officers were: Vice-President, Louis McKenna; Sec'y-Treasurer, Doris Trainor; Joseph Beagan was again elected Club Leader and there is no doubt that under Joseph's excellent leadership that this Club will have a very successful year.

The Victory Calf Club of North Wiltshire was recently reorganized and the following officers were appointed: Stanley Easter, President; Connie Clark, Vice-President; and Stewart Vickerson, Secretary-Treasurer. The adult directors appointed were Frank Easter, Bruce MacDonald and Fred Coles. It was agreed the meetings would be held on the first and third Friday of each month and that the membership fee be 50c.

The Cardigan North Ayrshire Club held a regular judging class at the home of Barbara Sanderson. Instruction was given by provincial fieldman, Morris Deacon. Just previous to the meeting a regrettable misfortune occurred when the club secretary, Rose Marie MacLean, was bitten by a dog, which necessitated two stitches and a couple of needles.

The regular judging class and club meeting of Milton Ayrshire Club was held at the home of Harry Leslie, Souris Line Road. The club members wrote test number one and also had a short discussion of lesson 2.

Four Ayrshire Calf Clubs were on a very successful tour Friday afternoon, July 4th, which was sponsored by the Department of Agriculture. The tour began with the clubs visiting the Central Creameries Ltd., Souris, and were conducted through the building by the general manager, Mr. Sterling Gillespie.

This visit was made all the more enjoyable by a treat of chocolate dips. R. L. Burge, Five Houses, was the next place of call, and the clubs had a little competition among themselves in picking out two cows which were classified very good in his Holstein herd. Following this they visited W. W. Anderson & Son's where they were impressed by the fine herd of Ayrshire cattle, the 2100 five-months-old pullets, and their lovely garden. The 55 head of Ayrshires are chiefly descendants of a fifteen-year-old cow still doing well in the herd, and which was the second calf that Donnie had while a member of St. Peter's Calf Club.

The next breed of cattle to be observed was the Shorthorn herd of John Dupasquier of Forest Hill. A brief description of the points used in judging beef was given by a Provincial Fieldman. The next two breeds observed were Jerseys owned by Arthur MacDonald, Forest Hill, and Herefords owned by Charles Townsend. Fortune. The tour was brought to a close by sports and two ball games at Fortune Beach. The clubs participating were: Milton, Souris Line Road; Gowan Brae; Bear River, and St. Charles. The winners of some of the sports are as follows:

Jockey Race: 1st, Urban Howlett and Reggie Mallard, Gowan Brae; 2nd, Francis Sheehan and Leo Gallant, Bear River.

Wheelbarrow Race: 1st, Leo Mallard and James Mallard, Gowan Brae.

Hop, Skip and Jump: 1st, Urban Howlett; 2nd, James Mallard.

Shoe Race: 1st, James Mallard.

Rooster Fight: 1st, Alban Wood.
