THE CHRONICLES OF MARTIN HEWITT BY ARTHUR MORRISON

THE CASE OF THE MISSING HAND

CHAPTER VI.

Then my uncle and Mr. Hardwick turned on Martin Hewitt with doubts and many questions. "Why do you call it suicide?" Mr. Hardwick asked. "It is plain the Fosters were with him at the time, from the tracks. Do you mean to say that they stood there and watched Sneathy hang himself without interfering?"

"No, I don't," Hewitt replied, lighting a cigar. "I think I told you that they never saw Sneathy."

"Yes, you did; and, of course, that's what they said themselves when they were arrested. But the thing's impossible. Look at the tracks!"

"The tracks are exactly what revealed to me that it was not impossible," Hewitt returned. "I'll tell you how the case unfolded itself to me, from the beginning. As for the information you gathered from Ranworth coachman, to begin with, the conversation between the Fosters which he overheard might well mean something less than murder. What did they say? They had been sent for in a hurry and had just had a short consultation with their mother and sister. Henry said that 'the thing must be done, and at once;' also that as there were two of them it would be easy. Robert said that Henry, as a doctor, would know best what to do. Now you, Col. Brett, had been saying—before we learned these things from Mr. Hardwick—that Sneathy's behavior of late had become so bad as to seem that of a madman. Then there was the story of his sudden attack on a tradesman in the village and equally sudden running away—exactly the sort of impulsive, wild thing that madmen do. Why then might it not be reasonable to suppose that Sneathy had become mad—more especially considering all the circumstances of the case, his commercial ruin and disgrace and his horrible life with his wife and her family? Had become suddenly much worse and quite uncontrollable, so that the two wretched women, left alone with him, were driven to send in haste for Henry and Robert to help them. That would account for all. The brothers arrive just after Sneathy had gone out. They are told in a hurried interview how affairs stand, and it is decided that Sneathy must be at once secured and confined in an asylum before something serious happens. He has just gone out—something terrible may be happening at that moment. The brothers determine to follow together at once and secure him wherever he may be. Then the meaning of their conversation is plain. The thing that must be done, and done at once, is the capture of Sneathy and his confinement in an asylum. Henry, as a doctor, would know what to do—in regard to the necessary formalities. And they took a halter in case a struggle should ensue, and it were found necessary to bind him. Very likely, wasn't it?"

"Well, yes," Mr. Hardwick replied, "it certainly is. It never struck me in that light at all."

"That was because you believed to begin with that a murder had been committed, and looked at the preliminary circumstances, which you learned after, in the light of your conviction. But now to come to my actual observations. I saw the footmarks across the fields and agreed with you (it was indeed obvious) that Sneathy had gone that way first, and that the brothers had followed, walking over his tracks. This state of the tracks continued until well into the wood, when suddenly the tracks of the brothers opened out and proceeded on each side of Sneathy's. The simple inference would seem to be, of course, the one you made—that the Fosters had here overtaken Sneathy and walked one at each side of him; but of this I felt by no means certain. Another very simple explanation was available, which might chance to be the true one. It was just at the spot where the brothers' tracks separated that the path became suddenly much muddier, because of the closer overhanging of the trees at the spot. The path was, as was to be expected, wettest in the middle. It would be the most natural thing in the world for two well-dressed young men on arriving here to separate so as to walk one on each side of the mud in the middle. On the other hand, a man in Sneathy's state (assuming him, for the moment, to be mad and contemplating suicide) would walk straight along the centre of the path, taking no note of mud or anything else. I examined all the tracks very carefully, and my theory was confirmed. The feet of the brothers had everywhere alighted in the driest spots, and the steps were of irregular lengths—which meant, of course, that they were picking their way; while Sneathy's footmarks had never turned aside, even for the dirtiest puddle. Here, then, were the rudiments of a theory.

"At the watercourse, of course, the footmarks ceased, because of the hard gravel. The body lay on a knoll at the left—a knoll covered with grass. On this the signs of footmarks were almost undiscoverable, although I am often able to discover tracks in grass that are invisible to others. Here, however, it was almost useless to spend much time in examination, for you and your man had been there, and what slight marks there might be would be indistinguishable one from another. Under the branch from which the man had hung there was an old tree stump, with a flat top, where the tree had been sawn off. I examined this, and it became fairly apparent that Sneathy had stood on it when the rope was about his neck—his muddy footprint was plain to see; the mud was not smeared about, you see, as it probably would have been if he had been stood there forcibly and pushed off. It was a simple clear footprint—another hint at suicide.

"But then arose the objection that you mentioned yourself. Plainly the brothers Foster were following Sneathy and came this way. Therefore, if he hanged himself before they arrived, it would seem that they must have come across the body. There was mud on the knees, and clinging to one knee was a small leaf. It was a leaf corresponding to those on the bush behind the tree, and it was of a dead leaf, so must have been just detached. After my examination of the body I went to the bush, and there, in the thick of it, were, for me, sufficiently distinct knee marks, in one of which the knee had crushed a spray of the bush against the ground—and from that spray a leaf was missing. Behind the knee marks were the indentations of boot toes in the soft, bare earth under the bush, and thus the thing was plain. The poor lunatic had come in sight of the dangling rope, and the temptation to suicide was irresistible. But at that moment he must have heard the steps—probably the voices—of the brothers behind him on the winding path. He immediately hid in the bush till they had passed. It is probable that seeing who the men were and conjecturing that they were following him—thinking also, perhaps, of things that had occurred between them and himself—his inclination to self-destruction became completely ungovernable, with the result that you saw.

"But before I inspected the bush I noticed one or two more things about the body. You remember I inquired if either of the brothers Foster were left-handed, and it was assured that neither was. But clearly the hand had been cut off by a left-handed man with a large, sharply-pointed knife. For well away to the right of where the wrist had hung the knife-point had made a tiny triangular rent in the coat. So that the hand must have been held in the mutilators' right hand while he used the knife with his left—clearly a left-handed man.

"But most important of all about the body was the jagged hair over the right ear. Everywhere else the hair was well cut and orderly—here it seemed as though a good piece had been, so to speak, sawn off. What could anybody want with a dead man's right hand and certain locks of his hair? Then it struck me suddenly—the man was hanged; it was the Hand of Glory!

"Then, you remember, I went at your request to see the footprints of the Fosters on the part of the path past the watercourse. Here, again, it was muddy in the middle, and the two brothers had walked as far apart as before, although nobody had walked between them. A final proof, if one were needed, of my theory as to the three lines of footprints.

"Now I was to consider how to get at the man who had taken the hand. He should be punished for the mutilation, but beyond that he would be required as a witness. Now all the foot-tracks in the vicinity had been accounted for. There were those of the brothers and of Sneathy, which we have been speaking of; those of the rustics looking on, which, however, stopped a little way off, and did not interfere with our sphere of observation; those of your man who had cut straight through the wood when he first saw the body and had come back the same way with you; and our own, which we had been careful to keep away from the others. Consequently there was no track of the man who had cut off the hand; therefore it was certain that he must have come along the hard gravel by the watercourse, for that was the only possible path which would not tell the tale. Indeed, it seems a likely path through the wood for a passenger to take, coming from the high ground by the Shepperton road. Brett and I left you and traversed the watercourse, both up and down. We found a footprint at the top left lately by a man with a broken shoe. Right down to the bottom of the watercourse where it emerged from the wood there was no sign on either side of this man having left the gravel. (Where the body was, as you will remember, he would simply have stepped off the gravel on to the grass, which I thought it useless to examine as I have explained.) But at the bottom, by the lane, the footprint appeared again. This then was the direction in which I was to search for a left-handed man with a broken-soled shoe, probably a gypsy, and most probably a foreign gypsy—because a foreign gypsy would be the most likely to hold still the belief in the Hand of Glory. I conjectured the man to be a straggler from a band of gypsies—one who had got behind the caravan and had made a short cut across the wood after it, so at the end of the lane I look for a patrin. This is a sign that gypsies leave to guide stragglers following up. Sometimes it is a heap of dead leaves, sometimes a few stones, sometimes a mark on the ground, but more usually a couple of twigs crossed, with the longer twig pointing the road. Guided by these patrins we came in the end on the gypsy camp just as it was settling down for the night. We made ourselves agreeable (as Brett will probably describe to you better than I can), we left them, and after they had got to sleep we came back and watched for the gentleman who is now in the lock-up. He would, of course, seize the first opportunity of treating his ghastly trophy in the prescribed way, and I guessed he would choose midnight, for that is the time the superstition teaches that the hands should be repared. We made a few small preparations, collared him, and now you've got him. And I should think the sooner you let the brothers Foster go the better."

"But why didn't you tell me all the conclusions you had arrived at, at the time?" asked Mr. Hardwick.

"Well, really," Hewitt replied, with a quiet smile, "you were so positive, and some of the traces I relied on were so small that it would probably have meant a long argument and a loss of time. But more than that, confess—if I had told you bluntly that Sneathy's hand had been taken away to make a medieval charm to enable a thief to pass through a locked door and steal plate calmly under the owners' nose what would you have said?"

"Well, well, perhaps I should have been a little skeptical. Appearances combined so completely to point to the Fosters as murderers that any other explanation, almost, could have seemed unlikely to me, and that—well no, I confess, I shouldn't have believed in it. But it is a startling thing to find such superstitions alive nowadays."

"Yes, perhaps it is. Yet we find survivals of the sort very frequently. The Wallachians, however, are horribly superstitious still—the gypsies among them are of course worse. Don't you remember the case reported a few months ago in which a child was drowned as a sacrifice in Wallachia in order to bring rain? And that was not done by gypsies, either. Even in England, as late as 1865, a poor paralyzed Frenchman was killed by being 'swum' for witchcraft—that was in Essex. And less atrocious cases of belief in wizardry occur again and again even now."

Then Mr. Hardwick and my uncle fell into a discussion as to how the gypsy in the lock-up could be legally punished. Mr. Hardwick thought it should be treated as a theft of a portion of a dead body, but my uncle fancied there was a penalty for mutilation of a dead body per se, though he could not point to the statute. As it happened, however, they were saved the trouble of arriving at a decision, for in the morning he was discovered to have escaped. He had been left, of course, with free hands, and had occupied the night in wrenching out the bars at the top of the back wall of the little prison-shed (it had stood on the green for a hundred and fifty years) and climbed out. He was not found again, and a month or two later the Foster family left the district entirely.

[THE END.]

SAVED HIS LIFE.

"I now weigh nearly 200 pounds," said a fine robust looking man the other day, and yet this same man was given up to die of consumption less than two years ago. What cured him? Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil did. He took it when at a low ebb, when his weight was less than 100 pounds. It created new blood for him and that combined with his will power raised him up to a life of usefulness and happiness. If you are threatened with consumption or any other lung trouble try Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver O'. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all Lung affections. In big bottles, 50c. and $1, at all drug stores.

Hon. Dr. Montague took his seat in the commons on Tuesday afternoon on his return faom England. He was warmly applauded.

Get the Best

The public are too intelligent to purchase a worthless article a second time, on the contrary they want the best. Physicians are virtually unanimous in saying Scott's Emulsion is the best form of cod liver oil.

Eight hours a day in the government printing bureau goes into effect on the 1st of May.

FOR TIRED FEELING.

Exhaustion is Waste — Overwork means Shorter Life—Dodd's Kidney Pills Means rest for the Kidneys.

Overwork is what you do after common sense asks you to quit.

Overwork of any kind does more than tire, it exhausts you.

Just a little more after you ought to quit is the "too much" that uses you up.

The blood goes out to all parts faster than usual when you overwork.

If the kidneys are not in perfect filtering order more poison is injected through them to all parts of the body than usual and then work, to say nothing of overwork, is harmful.

As soon as your kidneys commence doing good work there is less and less poison in the blood every minute.

This explains why Dodd's Kidney Pills cure so promptly and permanently.

Tenders for the four per cent. Halifax city loan for $213,000, to run 24 years, show that the offer of J. A. Meldrum, Toronto, was the best, his premium being 2.31 per cent. Another loan of $6,000 for the citadel improvement was given to Nelson Murphy of Maitland at four per cent, par.

Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Chase's Pills have gained popularity because they are a specific for the uric condition, prevents disease, cure Rheumatism and all catarrhal conditions of the Kidneys and Bladder. They do this because they possess remarkable alterative, tonic and diuretic properties, exerting a wonderful soothing influence on irritated or inflamed mucous membranes of the kidneys or bladder. One pill a dose. 25c. a box. The cheapest medicine in the world.

Experience Has Proved It

A triumph in medicine was attained when experience proved that Scott's Emulsion would not only stop the progress of Pulmonary Consumption, but by its continued use health and vigor could be fully retored.

Mr. C. Donnelly, wholesale liquor dealer, Alliston, Ont., was troubled for years with Itching Piles. He was persuaded Jas. McGravey, Alliston, livery man, to use Chase's Ointment, which he did, was cured, has had no return of them and highly recommends the Ointment as a sovereign cure for Piles.

True Meaning of "Tabby."

"Nice Tabby!" "Pretty Tabby!" "Poor little Tabby!" were phrases often heard at the Cat Show at Madison Square Garden. Very few of the thousands who went to the show probably knew the meaning of the word tabby. The misapprehension that it means a female cat, just as tomcat means a male, is common. Many people suppose that tabby is a name applied to cats in general. It really means cats whose fur is marked in a certain way, and so there are both male and female tabbies.

The tabbies are divided into banded and spotted furred cats. The name is derived from Atab, a street in Bagdad celebrated for the manufacture of watered silks, which, when sold in England, were called atabi, or taffety, and from their resemblance to watered silk the banded and brindled cats were called tabbies. It is one of the commonest of colors, or markings rather, and is found in many breeds of cats, but a uniformly marked tabby is comparatively rare and valuable.

What are you wearing On your feet this weather?

There is style in footwear as there is in hats. Each year the Granby Rubbers and Overshoes are modelled to fit all the fashionable shapes of boots. They are thin so as to prevent clumsy appearance and feeling and to make them so necessitates the use of the finest quality of rubber. While Granby Rubbers and Overshoes are up to date in Style, Fit and Finish, they retain their old enduring quality.

Granby Rubbers wear like Iron.

Burrell's English Prepared Paints.

Last December we ordered one and one-half tons of these celebrated Paints for Spring Stock, and in March we had to send a repeat order for another ton.
