Scott's Emulsion is Cod-liver Oil prepared as a food. At the same time, it is a blood maker, a nerve tonic and an up-builder. But principally it is a food for tired and weak digestions; for those who are not getting the fat they should from their ordinary food; for children whom nothing seems to nourish; for all who are fat-starved and thin.

It is pleasant to take; at least, it is not unpleasant. Children like it and ask for more.

Some druggists have a "just as good" kind. Don't let the kind all others try to equal. Good enough for you to buy.

Ladies! You will save time and patience if you USE Glapperton's Thread

A THEATRE CHRISTMAS.

(Concluded.)

The next morning, in accordance with a call posted in the stage entrance, the company assembled to hear the new play read by the gifted Mr. Freeland. Each and each of the gentlemen's elocutionary power that when he laid the manuscript aside expressions that ranged from mere satisfaction to rapturous enthusiasm were heard on every hand, and there was scarcely an actor or actress present that did not feel confident of a personal success in the new production.

The reading over, Mr. Freeland took Miss Livingstone, Mr. Borders and one or two other rebellious spirits aside, and as he expressed it in a subsequent interview with Mr. Hardestie, "stiffened their backbones" with the assurance that everything was all right and that the piece was to be done on Christmas eve in order that they might have a really merry Christmas on the prospects of its success. After that, he assured them, their back salaries would appear in upon them in a perfect avalanche.

As Mr. Freeland was leaving the theatre he felt some one tugging at his coat, and on looking around he saw that Kitty Sullivan standing beside him and saying in earnest tones, and with a red, weal-like face, "Lily, isn't there any part for me in this?"

"The child called him by a first name because she had always heard him spoken in that way by other members of the company, and Kitty encouraged her in the idea, because it sounded funny to him to hear himself addressed in such familiar terms by an infant of her size."

Kitty was a veritable child of the avant scene, and had been an actress from her very earliest infancy. She was now about 7 years of age, and was just beginning to comprehend the difference between the real things of life, such as houses, trees and streets, and the painted imitations of stagehands. And yet she beheld the ocean for the first time, and it is related of her that on that occasion she stood with Billy's hand tightly clasped in hers, watching the waves as they broke upon the beach, and finally turned to her companion and said in her serious way, "Billy, how do you call that?"

And now she was here beside her old friend, with her small, pathetic face upturned, and inquiring earnestly if there was any part for her in "The Giant's Causeway."

"See here, Kitty," exclaimed Mr. Freeland, touched by the child's grief. "I'll tell you what I'll do for you, and what's more, I wouldn't do it for any one else in the company. Are you listening?"

"Yes," said Kitty, turning her head around.

"Well, I'll write in a part specially for you, and that's something that an author like Sardou or myself rarely does for anyone, except a Bernardin or a Duse. Now run along, and be here to-morrow at 11 for rehearsal."

"The child darted away, signing the last year from her cheek as she ran, and Barney said approvingly, 'That's the best deed you'll ever do in your life, Mr. Freeland, and mark my words, the child'll bring good luck to the house.'"

How Billy succeeded in persuading the economical Hardestie that the piece would be a favorable impression on the venerable Mr. Borders as he looked out through the peepholes in the curtain, while behind the footlights feverish excitement and anticipation prevailed.

For Kitty, she had become so wrought up over her role, the longest one she had ever been entrusted with, that she seemed in danger of losing her lines that she had so carefully studied, and then a youngster in the parquette set up a pitiful howl of despair, which was followed by a general ripple of movement that might have proved fatal to the piece, had not Kitty come on with her lines with the coolness and gravity of the born and experienced artist, which she was displaying there by a presence of mind which won for her, on her exit, the first real applause of the evening.

Kitty Sullivan was, as the eminent dramatic critic had long ago pointed out, head at the business, despite the fact that she was but 7 years of age, for she had been born and brought up on the stage, and was as much at home in the presence of a great audience as an ordinary child is before a nursery. As the piece went on, she realized that she was making a hit—a far greater one than she had ever made before—and, young as she was, she was enough of an artist to appreciate the importance of the moment that might have proved fatal to the piece, had not Kitty come on with her lines with the coolness and gravity of the born and experienced artist, which she was displaying there by a presence of mind which won for her, on her exit, the first real applause of the evening.

APHRO, came swiftly across the stage, pointing at the left of the stage, and Kitty Sullivan, throwing aside the oars, stood up in the boat with her foot on the oar, and exclaimed in a clear, ringing voice, "I have come to love you for the sake of old Ireland!"

Commonplace as it was, with its old, well-worn melodramatic effects of soft music and moonlight, nevertheless the situation had taken a strong hold on the audience, and the sudden appearance of the sweet-faced child, who has charmed everyone during the earlier portions of the play, sent a distinct thrill through the entire house, and then came such an outburst of spontaneous applause as had not been heard in the Jolly Theatre for many a year.

Even Billy Freeland felt a touch of a magnetic current which which the atmosphere was charged, and might have been heard to remark half audibly, "The kid's knocked 'em good this time, for a thing's got to be good if it gets me."

And as the audience dispersed that night it seemed to Mr. Freeland, as he stood alert and watchful in the lobby, that there was not one name on every tongue, and that Kitty's sweet face and infantile art had made their way into the very heart of an always fickle public.

"You were right about her, Billy," said Hardestie.

"I told you the young one would bring us good luck," said old Barney at the stage door.

"The idea of making such a fuss about a 7-year-old brat! That shows what art is coming to in this country!" exclaimed Mrs. Livingstone, as she swept through the drafty passage, leaving an odor of sea-salt, tub roses and sachet powder behind her.

The members of the stock company and their Christmas dinner in the wardrobe room between the matinee and the evening performance, Messrs. Justice and Hardestie feeling the bill and just beginning to comprehend the difference between the real things of life, such as houses, trees and streets, and the painted imitations of stagehands.

And it is related of her that on that occasion she stood with Billy's hand tightly clasped in hers, watching the waves as they broke upon the beach, and finally turned to her companion and said in her serious way, "Billy, how do you call that?"

More attention is paid to Christmas decorations in Italy than in any other country. On Christmas eve, the young men and women assemble at the churches and spend their hours in making them beautiful. At midnight a mass is said, and after this a toothsome collation is served to the youthful workers and their friends, who are singing and playing upon musical instruments.

A Landlord's Tricks. The champion mean man dwelt years ago in Buxton, Me., and was a well-known innkeeper. One of his tricks was to bore holes in the bottom of the horse stalls where the horses were stalled, so that while the beasts were eating their grain a portion would fall through into a box underneath, kept there to receive it.

After being found out, he tried another trick, worth two of that. He man came along one day and had his horse put up for a feed. He had heard of the tricks of the landlord and determined to see that his horse had the amount of grain that he had paid for. So he stood by to see the landlord come out of the grain room with the measure well heaped up and had his horse put up for a feed. He had heard of the tricks of the landlord and determined to see that his horse had the amount of grain that he had paid for.

English Manures SUPERPHOSPHATES AND CHEMICALS.

Sole Agents for P. E. Island for THE BRADLEY FERTILIZER CO., the largest concern of the kind in the world. We have a large stock, on hand and to arrive, at these well known MANURES, and can refer purchaser to many of our very best farmers who have been using them for years with very gratifying results.

We can also supply the same goods (Ground Slag) as offered by our would-be competitors as "English Fertilizers" at at least 20 per cent less price than they now ask for it, but at the same time we would not advise its use, believing that THE GENUINE ENGLISH MANURES AS SOLD ONLY BY US are much the best value. Prices, Pamphlets, etc., on application.

What is Cheapness? Cheapness is not peculiar to prices. Goods are often cheaper than the prices; particularly is this true when the purchaser feels that the goods are bought with a certain amount of uncertainty and unreliability. We have no cheap goods although no one disputes the cheapness of our prices.

Your friends would appreciate a nice Fancy Rocker or Table, selected from our stock. Goods now will be stored until required.
