

A Noted Inventor in Jail

This morning in the Police Court the name of Dr. Badcock was called. In response a terrible wretch tottered to the bar.

"What is your name?" asked the court. "Badcock—Dr. Badcock, was the answer. When asked to plead to a charge of drunkenness, he said he wished to explain the circumstances. He had, indeed, taken two drinks—two small drinks—but he had been paralyzed and could not walk. He was not drunk. He had been in the hospital, but was a doctor, and thought he could make a living, and did not wish to be a charge on the public. "I invented," he said, "the fire and water-proof paint and the chemical fire-extinguisher that bears my name." It was indeed, the wreck of the Badcock fire-extinguisher.

"Have you a family?" asked the court. "Yes, sir, but not here," was the reply. "Where are they?" "Up North—I don't know where I fixed them up—my children—and sent them off, and I don't know just where they are. I have been in the hospital just twenty days, and I came out too soon, and I cannot live in jail—I thought I should die there last night."

The court remarked that the case seemed to be one calling for sympathy rather than severity, entered a plea of not guilty and allowed the old man to go on his own recognizance, it being understood that he would be sent back to the hospital.—Stockton Cal. Mail.
