Mr. and Mrs. John MacDonald and family, Moncton are spending their vacation with Mrs. MacDonald's sisters, Mrs. Russell Garrett, Red Point, great choir of voices, joined in the old psalms and hymns.

Personally it was in the nature of a wish come true, that the afternoon's guest speaker should be a Minister from an Island pulpit, giving pleasing stature to the voice we had always welcomed when, across the miles between, over our hills and our vales, we managed to coax our radio to bring its verities into our farm-home—There is a strong hint of "The Gaelic" on this man's tongue. The language we had often heard in our childhood — the same a Scottish lady then assured us, "is the best language in which to pray. The words are so meaningful and sweet, they bring one closer to her God."

It was fitting too that when homing we stopped at a manse to visit with a former Minister of the "Old Kirk" at the Corner. Lonely this good man is now, heart thoughts, divided. Still teaching of Heavenly places, indeed thoughts linger, we think, more steadily there, while hands tend lovingly the cemetery close by his church, where all that was mortal of the good wife, the springtime called away, now rests. We came away with his blessing, that we should have a continuing safe homeward way.

But there it is again — that old clock's warning! It has checked away another lovely July-day.

Until tomorrow — — Diary—Good-night.....

Summer Flowers Set Scene At Recent Bridal Shower

A shower was held for Annie Lee Fyfe recently, prior to her marriage to Elmer MacDonald, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Moore and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Moore, Cavendish.

The bride-to-be was escorted to her chair by Mrs. Elwin Wyand and Mrs. Reggie Simpson played the bridal march.

The gifts were carried in by Sylvia MacNeill and Holly Clark and opened by Mrs. John Dennis and Enid Wyand. The accompanying verses were read by Mrs. Herbert Moore and Mrs. Chesley Clark.

A social hour followed during which lunch was served by the hostess assisted by the women of the district.

Another shower was held at the home of Mrs. W.R. Carson, Charlottetown. Miss Fyfe was escorted to her seat by Mrs. Fred Burke. She then opened her gifts while Mrs. Nelson Henry read the verses. Beth MacFarlane arranged the gifts.

Mrs. Harold MacKie presided over the tea service and was assisted by Mrs. Sterling Rowatt, Mrs. William Toombs and Mrs. W.R. Carson.

Mrs. George Dunning was hostess at a surprise tea and shower at which Mrs. Francis Moase assisted the bride-to-be in opening the gift while Mrs. John Fyfe read the verses. A lunch was then served by Mrs. George Dunning, Mrs. Ian Dunning and Mrs. John Fyfe.

Another bridal shower was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Fyfe, the parents of the bride-to-be.

The room was decorated with streamers and baskets of summer flowers.

While Mrs. Lorne MacEwen played the bridal march, the bride-to-be was escorted to her seat by Isobel Campbell.

The gifts were carried in by Bruce Simpson and George MacEwen. Ribbons were cut by Eileen Simpson and Mrs. Elwin Wyand while the verses were read by Mrs. Edwin Johnson and Beth MacFarlane. The gifts were then arranged by Olga Woolner and Mrs. Scott Woodside.

During the remainder of the evening refreshments were served by the women of the district.

ELLEN'S DIARY

From Amid The Blossoms Comes The Robin's Song

On our yesterday's outing, we, before long, passed the old school, the little brook, the home, and village of our childhood We went by its stores, the hall where as a child we "said a piece" at its opening ceremonies; the Church, a little strange to us ever since a time back in the years,when it was of necessity moved from its friendly and picturesque perch on the roadside cliff at the corner to a new location, the Manse now on its near, not far side. The latter has through the years, lost its wide piazzas, and the balconies above, and also the crabapple tree on the lawn. It was from there amid the white blossoms of springtime, when the sermon arrived at its "Fifthly — my dear ones" a robin took up for this young'un the sweet saving Story, and in a prized ripple of notes that enthralled us, declared also engagingly there in the quiet of a Sabbath morning, those Truths.

It was just by there that one of the little company, settled back comfortably, and folding idle hands peacefully, remarked, "Well,Alberton, here we come! We are now well on our way!"

"If" our best of drivers commented with a chuckle which indicated no uneasiness over the matter, "we can manage to find it!"

"I'm told that once we leave Summerside" another offered "it's a straight road we travel."

"Before too long" another predicted "we'll be in the company of other cars bearing Ither. We'll recognize them, because the occupants, all women, will be wearing hats!"

"Yes, hats and gloves" another agreed, with a smile.

At length, and without having encountered any difficulty over the route, and all on a beautiful July-day, the little car nosed into the perfect parking-lot in the shadow of the — to all of us — strange Church.

Now it is a known spot to us, a remembered hallowed place, its folks kind and most hospitable, its Presbyterial services, periods of inspiration, of insiruction, of praise, of thanksgiving and prayer. With a depth of feeling not always indicated these times in Church services, the assembled company, in a

MARY HAWORTH

Gambling Mate Makes Wife's Life A Burden

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband must be one of the world's worst. He has few, if any, assets; only liabilities.

He has no sense of responsibility, pays no bills, owes everyone and doesn't worry about his poor credit rating, which has caused me to be denied credit, although I am very prompt in paying bills.

He charges items, then pawns them; also pawns all of his decent clothes. On paydays he sometimes gives me between $7 and $13 a month for food (occasionally as much as $20, but very rarely), but contributes nothing to the upkeep of our child, other than the meager food allowance and rent.

I have a job (of course), having had to carry most of the burden during our six year marriage. I've tried unsuccessfully to pool our earnings, to help him get out of debt. In principle he agrees to this; but in practice he fails to cooperate. Often he keeps all his money on paydays and stays out late, saying later that he was gambling.

We both feel that our marriage is finished, yet I just don't have the gumption to break away, as I dread living alone. He feels he is dragging me down, yet he won't leave or reform.

We've both talked to our pastor, to no avail. I am really fed up with myself, for lacking the nerve to move out on my own. My family despises my husband. I can't return to them as I really don't want to, and besides there isn't enough room. Do you have any suggestions? G.F.

DEAR G.F.: Your husband's problem, as described, is a familiar story to members of Gamblers Anonymous.

Perhaps you've heard of the organization: a national affiliation of local units, that came into being less than 10 years ago, "to help inveterate gamblers stop gambling, losing money and wasting their lives and the time, life and love of their families," as one spokesman explains it.

My suggestion towards solving your problem is to get in touch with the GA unit nearest you. For information, write Gamblers Anonymous, National Headquarters Office, P.O. Box 17173, Los Angeles 17, California.

Wives of members of GA find it helpful to join Gam-Anon, the ladies' auxiliary, which serves as a social and psychological restorative to their tattered morale.

The Gam-Anon encourages an affirmative philosophy of thought and action, based on a 9-point creed of living "just for today," and vitalized by squaring one's performance with a daily moral inventory of assets to strive for and liabilities to beware of.

According to the Gam-Anon handbook for wives, assets to strive for include: self-forgetfulness, humility, modesty, self-acceptance, honesty, patience, love, forgiveness, trust, generosity, activity, promptness, straightforwardness. Also, positive thinking (highminded, spiritual, clean thinking). Looking for good in the person, situation or circumstance.

The Gam-Anon list of liabilities to guard against includes; self-pity, self-justification, self-importance, self-condemnation, dishonesty, impatience, hate, resentment false pride, jealousy, envy, laziness, procrastination, insincerity, negative thinking (vulgar immoral or trashy thinking) and criticism.

M.H

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A very close friend of mine, a girl 15, has been going with a boy for about two years. She has told me some very startling things ... which I would be ashamed to reveal. I think they are headed for serious trouble.

I've always liked and respected her, but this past year she has stopped listening to everyone's advice and simply goes her own way. How should I advise her, or what can I do, before too late?

C.C.

DEAR C.C.: To emphasize the gravity of your concern, you may tell your friend that if she refuses to heed your good counsel, you must refuse to be her confidante as regards her self-damaging behavior. Then stick to your word, as proof of taking a moral stand. It just might jolt her into putting the brakes on.

M.H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of (The Guardian).
