ELLERSLIE—Despite a heavy rainfall a large number of people turned out for the official opening of the experimental oyster propagation centre Saturday morning.

Featured guest at the opening was Hon. H.J. Robichaud, federal minister of fisheries, Ottawa. Acting as emcee were the ceremonies was Dr. A.L. Pritchard, director of conservation and development service, department of fisheries, Ottawa.

In addressing the guests Mr. Robichaud remarked that he had a deep and personal interest in the industry because I feel that it can be greatly expanded on his parents and his own because it comes from an area, that of Shipigan and Caraque, which until recent years was renowned for the production of high quality oysters.

Over the years the oyster industry has been beset with many difficulties," Mr. Robichaud said. "There was the actual almost 50 years ago when mortalities struck the Prince Edward Island stocks and when the present deputy minister of fisheries was put in charge of the problem."

Mr. Robichaud was referring to Hon. A.W.H. Needler, who was stationed for some 13 years at Ellerslie during the late '30s and early '40s and who was also in attendance at Saturday's ceremony.

A dozen Ayrshire heifers and young cows brought an average of $275 apiece, with the highest going to A.J. Floyd, Antigonish, N.S. at $365, at the promotional sale of breeding stock held Saturday by the P.E.I. Ayrshire Breeders Association on the farm of Wallace G. Wood, Marshfield. "Your breed has come a long way but you still have a long way to go," said Mr. Roper who urged that every breeder act as a field man to promote the Ayrshire breed.

"Greater precision per cow per acre per man is our goal," said Agriculture Minister Andrew MacEwan, himself an Ayrshire breeder.
