Catarrh in the Head
Is a dangerous disease because it is liable to result in loss of hearing or smell, or develop into consumption. Read the following:
"My wife has been a sufferer from catarrh for the past four years and the disease had gone so far that her eyesight was affected so that for nearly a year she was unable to read for more than five minutes at a time. She suffered severe pains in the head and at times was almost distracted. About Christmas, she commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and since that time has steadily improved. She has taken six bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and is on the road to a complete cure. I cannot speak too highly of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I cheerfully recommend it." W. H. THEIR LOT IS NOT EASY.

'MONGST BROWN CAPUCHINS.

The Father Superior of One of Canada's Monasteries Entertains Two Visitors—The Daily Round of Monastic Life.

The wind that shrieked over Parliament hill stung one so shrewdly that none save those whose business made it necessary ventured forth from comfortable homes or shops. Somewhere in the pine forests which, beginning beyond the Laurentian ridge, stretch away nor'-east to the country of Lake St. John, the storm king had marshalled his icy legions. Valiantly they charged over leagues of pine desert, and at Ottawa they first met civilization. The blizzard compassed an entire stoppage of business. Even the electric cars ceased whirling through the snow, and the motormen thanked their lucky stars that they had a few hours' freedom from toil.

It was on this day, then, that a saffron-gowned Capuchin tacked bravely up Sparks street. The untiring wind seized him and buffeted him from side to side of the slippery pavement as he tried at once to steady himself and to prevent the market basket which he had on his arm from being whipped into a snowdrift. His bare legs were leaden blue with cold, and he shivered as the stout habit refused to repel the blast. He dived into a shop for which he had evidently been looking, and placed his basket on the counter. The good Romanist grocerman dropped in some bundles which he had prepared. The Capuchin bowed and withdrew without saying a word. Up the street he went, making other calls, and, then, his basket being full, turned his back to the storm and half walked, half slid down the icy hill whose end is at O'Connor street.

Two men who, from an hotel window opposite witnessed the scene, wondered, and one of them admired. A chance remark gave rise to a debate which was not so intellectual that it need be here paraphrased, but the end of it was that, as soon as possible, they would honor the Capuchin Monastery with a visit. They had spoken bad French to Ottawa hackmen, and were therefore tolerably certain that a literate priest could at least understand at what they were driving.

And so, next day being gloriously slushy, with a rain which had somehow leapt forward from April into February making inroads into the roadside snowbanks, the pair donned mackintoshes and set out for the abode of monks. Down on the Richmond road, about four miles from the city, they found it. A cross-road grocery store was over the way; a few cottages had established themselves under its protection. The building was not at all like what Young World people suppose monasteries to be. There was no high stone tower; there were no pleasure grounds in which the holy fathers could placidly meditate and discuss abstruse theories of religion. The building was of plain red brick, erected cheaply, and, save for the immense wooden cross which was perched upon the largest gable, might have been a public school, or a factory. There was a tremendous clanging of a gong when the bell-rope, which hung by the door, was pulled, and then followed the peculiar clicking made by the striking of sandals on a hard wooden floor. The little slide in the door was thrown open, and the upper part of a bearded face was visible. The eyes stared surprisedly at the visitors, and the voice behind them asked in rapid French what their owner could do for them.

They apologized for troubling, but might they see the Father Superior?

"Yes," said the hall porter, using the only English word he knew, and the great door was swung open. Inside there was little at first visible. A long hall, somehow with its whitewashed walls and clean scrubbed floors reminiscent of a hospital corridor, stretched down the building to where a great crucifix hung. The visitors were shown into an ante-room, the walls of which were decorated with dozens of steel engravings of famous members of the Order. A couple of cheap chromos of Christ Calling the Little Children and of Christ Stilling the Tempest stand gaudily from amongst the celebrated Capuchins, who all seemed to have had hooked noses and humped shoulders.

While this altogether impolite scrutiny was being made the clacking of sandals once more sounded up the corridor, and a little gentleman with a head so bald that it surely required no tonsure, entered. He bowed to his callers, and announced himself as Father Alexis. Yes, he would be glad to show the gentlemen through the monastery—that was, of course, through as much of it as he might with propriety conduct them. "But," said he, "there is truly little to be witnessed. We are, you know, beggars, and such as we have is given us by our kind friends."

Whereupon it happened, as was subsequently discovered, that each of the visitors suddenly became speculative as to how he could offer this courtly gentleman money, and whether he would not be insulting him in doing so.

But the Father Superior, by some esoteric divination discovered that he must make the visitors' minds clear upon this point and he did it very neatly.

"Yes," he said, "we are beggars, but we cannot receive money. If a professional gentleman, for instance, desires to help us, he must go to his butcher or baker and make the arrangement with him. Then one of our brothers will call upon the tradesman, but, as I said, it is forbidden us to handle coin."

So saying, with his loud sounding sandals beating an accompaniment as he trotted down the corridor, Father Alexis conducted his visitors to the chapel. A poor enough place it certainly was. A life-sized statue of the Virgin looked down upon the altar, upon which a pair of immense candles shed a flickering light. The floor was bare, and there were no seats either in the body of the chapel or within the slender altar rail. If a bishop officiated within those walls he would have to stand. The two visitors had expected to see in the chapel many worshiping Capuchins, and one of them ventured to ask Father Alexis why it was untenanted.

"Ah," said he, as soon as he had comprehended the halting French. "We have a time for all things. Our routine must be adhered to. But do not fear that we have not plenty of time for worship. When you are in your beds we are here. I shall tell you when you are in the corridor how we spend our days."

His promise being fulfilled, this is the Capuchin's daily round of duty: At 8.15 in the evening he goes to bed in his little nine-foot square cell. At midnight the bell in the tower clangs out the summons to "choir" as it is called. Then for an hour and a half, or until half-past one—the brothers unite in the singing of matins and lauds. This done, to bed again until a quarter past four, when they arise for the day. At five o'clock there is choir again until half-past seven, when the morning meal is partaken of. Breakfast over, the tables are transformed into desks, and study is engaged in until half-past eleven. Then comes half an hour of choir once more, and at high noon the brethren sit down to dinner, one of them reading from some theological volume during the repast. From half-past twelve till two must be the most welcome time of the day to even these ascetics, for this is the hour of "Gratias Deo," when, by the grace of God, they are allowed to speak and to engage in conversation. During all other hours of the day strict silence must be maintained, unless consent to the contrary has been obtained from the Father Superior.

The time for speech having fled, the Capuchins engage in toil. Three of them do all the carpentry about the monastery, others have the care of the gardens, but only the lay brethren—who are usually uneducated—are obliged to perform the more menial tasks, such as sweeping and dish washing. The others engage in studies until half-past five, when there is once more choir until seven o'clock. Then supper, half an hour's "recreation," which means reading such religious works as are not on the ordinary list, and at eight o'clock prayers. By this time bed-time has come, and the Capuchin's day, which is in no way different from scores which have passed, and scores which are to come, is gone.

The little cells in which the fathers sleep are small and desolate. A single blanket on a straw pallet, graniteware washing utensils, and a crucifix nailed against the wall, compose the furniture. Everything is clean as possible. To strange olfactories, however, the permeating odor of onions and garlic is unpleasing. All of the brethren are French, and they adhere to their nation's love for these pungent esculents. Even their rough brown habits carry the taint of garlic, much as the smoke of tobacco impregnates the clothing of the devotees of the nicotian herb.

The Order is a subsidiary branch of the Trappists, whose mode of life is one of the most rigorous of all the monastic organizations. It is stated by Father Alexis that but one out of fifteen who enter the Capuchins as postulants takes the novices' vows of poverty, chastity and obedience, while but twelve out of twenty-five of the novices take the final vows which are administered to him who maintains his desire for monastic life.

The monastery at Ottawa is the only one of the kind in Canada. The Order has another branch in Kentucky, and is very strong in France. The reason for the establishment of these two cis-Atlantic monasteries is that the new French law relating to service in the army compels every member of any monastic order under thirty years of age to perform military duty. The ordinary priesthood is exempt. Thus it is that all of the Ottawa Capuchins are men, awaiting the arrival of their third decade, when they will return to France. But three of them have taken the final vows.

It is well known that the Capuchins are a most exclusive Order. The postulant must be a man of great erudition, and must have unimpeachable social connections. Father Alexis, the Superior at Ottawa, was for some years secretary of the Spanish Legation at Washington, and comes of an old Lusitanian family. He has been in the Order but four years, and has advanced with unprecedented rapidity.—Roden Kingsmill.

The Kingdom of God.

The existence and effective presence of the Kingdom of God is evidenced by the practical results which follow from certain causes. The Savior's casting out devils by the Spirit of God, in the midst of doubters and enemies, is cited by Him as proving that the Kingdom of God had come unto them. So, also, are the practical results of Christianity an undoubted index of the presence of God's Kingdom among men. As the wondrous works of Christ in the days of His ministry threw upon the people of His times the responsibility of their rejection of Him, so the works of Christianity in the world put upon people to-day the responsibility of deciding their case.

Don't Make Any Mistake
When you are threatened with consumption or lung troubles and get the wrong kind of emulsion. There is only one perfect, pleasant and effective preparation of that life giving substance and it is Miller's Emulsion. There is no bad taste to this preparation. It is compounded on an entirely new principle, by which the vital energy of the liver of the Norwegian codfish is retained and incorporated with the hypophosphites of lime and soda, making the most potent blood maker known to science. It has saved thousands of young lives, and is revolutionizing the old methods of consumption treatment. Miller's Emulsion is the great nerve strengthener and blood maker, and cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Scrofula and all Lung affections. In big bottles, 50c. and $1, at all drug stores.

Struck a New Idea.
The Bordeaux Claret Co. struck a new and fruitful idea when it conceived the notion of putting a cheap wine upon the market at prices which would bring it within the reach of all. For the long profit and the slow sale is not as good business as as the small profit and the great sale, and $3 and $4 per dozen quarts appeals to the whole people, whereas $8 for a wine not one whit better—if as good,—could only appeal to a section of the people. Wine upon the poor man's table; good, wholesome wine which will do him and his family good, at a little over the price of poor beer. The famous Medoc wines. Selling enormously all over Canada. Address—Bordeaux Claret Co., 30 Hospital St., Montreal.

"Knowledge is power," but there is not enough of it to overcome ignorance.

Counterfeits
A few years ago a great discovery was made.
Unprincipled persons are trying to prey upon and dupe people who are led to ask for kidney treatment.
Some of the methods adoptee by imitators are as follows:
First—To imitate the size, color and shape of Dodd's Kidney Pills and sell them by count.
Second—To put them up to appear very nearly the same and to be offered at the same price.
Third—To hook on the work "kidney" in naming cathortic pills so as to increase sales of mere physic.
Fourth—To give a name so near to Dodd's that unwary people may be deceived and think they are getting Dodd's.
Look out for such dodges. When you want kidney medicine you want the best. And ought not to be the subject for any trick.
So beware.

Man is made up largely of strut and blow.

It Saved Our Child.
"My little daughter, three and a half years old, suffered three years with Eczema. Her little body was covered with the itching rash, and doctors did no good. Four boxes of Chase's Ointment have entirely cured and saved our child. Her skin is clear and not a sign of rash is to be seen." Andrew Aiton, Hartland, N. B. Mr. Aiton is one of thousands benefited by this unfailing cure for piles and skin diseases

Do not spend your life in waiting for the turn of the tide.

A Prominent Londoner.
Chase's Ointment is an invaluable remedy for itching Piles and in my own case I would pay $50 it if it could not be otherwise hard.

CHRONIC HEADACHE.
The change in my Mother's condition marvellous.
Scott's Sarsaparilla is a Boon.
MONTREAL, August 29th, 1895.
GENTLEMEN:—There is such a change in my mother's health that I cannot restrain myself from writing you. She suffered for years past with a chronic headache, accompanied with a disordered stomach. She was weak and irritable, and we thought she was going into a decline. For three weeks she has been taking a course of Scott's Sarsaparilla, which was recommended to her by Mr. McGale, Druggist, Montreal. Her headache is now but a memory, her appetite is good, and she has gained five pounds in weight in twelve days. She is a different woman, and I feel that you, in God's hands, have been the means of restoring her to health. I shall always recommend Scott's Sarsaparilla to sufferers from head or digestive troubles. Thanking you again, I close.
Yours sincerely,
Hortense Gaviliere.
Scott's Sarsaparilla is a concentrated extract, pleasant to the taste, and is taken in small doses. It is the finest remedy for disorders of the stomach and liver, palpitation, scrofulous sores, eczema and skin diseases arising from impurities of the blood. It builds up the weak, the strong it maintains in health. $1 of all druggists.
