CHIPPING POTATOES

A market is rapidly expanding for potatoes of type suitable for the manufacture of potato chips. If such a market can be continuously supplied with suitable quality potatoes, a worthwhile premium should be realized.

The main requirement of a chipping potato is to have a low sugar content. The low sugar content is necessary for a light colored chip. Potatoes with high sugar content produce dark chips with a burned appearance and taste. The low sugar content is achieved through variety and storage conditions.

In the late summer and early fall, variety isn't very important with Irish Cobbler and Sebagoes making satisfactory chips. Once the cold weather arrives the demand for premium chipping potatoes increases. Once a potato receives a severe chilling under 40 degrees F. it will never make a top quality chip.

For chipping potatoes from December to April or May, Netted Gems and Columbia Russets have been found to be good varieties for Prince Edward Island but they must be given special care. They must be dug early, before ground temperatures go below 40 degrees F. and then stored at temperatures of 45-50 degrees F. until two to three weeks before their use. Then finally, before processing they have to be held at 70 degrees F. for two to three weeks. This causes any sugars present to be converted to starch.

This last stage of conditioning at 70 degrees F. is usually done by the processor.

Some seasons, depending upon certain growing conditions, other varieties such as Sebagoes, Kennebec, etc., are suitable for processing during early winter. In this province it has been found necessary to use Southern new potatoes during June and July to produce a satisfactory chip.

C.V.M.A.

The Canadian Veterinary Medical Association held its Seventh Annual Convention in the city of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, from September 10th to 14th. Over 200 veterinarians along with their wives, from every province in Canada took part in the deliberations. The opening session was presided over by the National President, Doctor R. MacG. Archibald of Toronto. N. S. Greetings from the government of Canada were extended by Hon. R. R. Knight, M. P., from the government of Saskatchewan by Mr. H. E. Horner, Deputy Minister of Agriculture. Mr. Horner stated that it was particularly fitting that the veterinarians had chosen Saskatchewan in this its Jubilee year. His Worship Mayor John McAskill of Saskatoon, welcomed the delegates to the City of Bridges. It is of interest to note that Mayor McAskill formerly came from N. S.

Following the addresses by the various Provincial Presidents and the President of the Ladies' Aid to the C.V.M.A., a memorial service was held in memory of the colleagues who had recently passed on.

Doctor K.F. Wells, Veterinary Director General for Canada, in dealing with control problems of contagious diseases; stated that approximately 90 per cent of the cattle in Canada are under a constant tuberculosis testing programme and that it will not be many years before the entire country will be tested. At the present time, the Health of Animals Division of the Canada Department of Agriculture tests annually over 2,400,000 cattle.

In 147 packing houses across Canada veterinary inspectors of the Health of Animals Division inspect approximately 70 per cent of the meat and meat food products in Canada. It is only through this constant surveillance not only of the livestock itself but also of the livestock products, that our products can enter into the foreign trade so freely.

There are three main problems in the control of contagious diseases: First, a physical one in the contact of personnel. Second, that full co-operation must exist between government workers and the practicing veterinarians. The practicing veterinarians are a vital link in the control of any contagious diseases. The third problem is of a technical nature — chiefly connected with the field of research. In other words, to be able to obtain satisfactory diagnosis and treatment for various diseases and conditions.

The highlight of the President's banquet was an outstanding address by the Hon. T. C. Douglas, Premier of Saskatchewan. Mr. Douglas spoke briefly about each province and what it has to offer to the Canadian economy. He also gave brief history of the agricultural and industrial developments in Saskatchewan over the last fifty years. As the story of the Cecal worm, and can harbor the causative agent of Blackhead in turkeys. This is a chief reason why chickens and turkeys should never be raised together.

There are several other species of poultry round worms. However, the two species mentioned here are the ones most commonly found in P. E. I. birds. The tape worms are fairly widespread. The adult tape worms of poultry differ considerably as to length (1-5 to 10 inches) and the number of segments vary from two to sixty or more. Tape worms attach their heads in the tissues of the intestinal lining; and the segments farthest from the head are continually breaking off and passing out with the droppings. These segments contain the eggs. It is necessary for the eggs to be taken into the body of an intermediate host in order to become effective. Flies, slugs, snails, earthworms, grasshoppers, ground beetles, and dung beetles serve in this capacity for some of the tape worms. When a bird eats one of these infested intermediate host the life cycle of the tapes start over again.

CONTROL AND TREATMENT

No worm medicine for poultry should be used until it has been shown by post-mortem examination that parasites are present in sufficient numbers to justify treatment. No treatment can be suggested until it is known what kind or kinds of worms are infesting the birds. Drugs effective in removing one parasite may not be of any value in removing others.

Moreover, no satisfactory treatments are available for the removal of some species of intestinal worms. The best control of intestinal parasites has been obtained by those owners who have relied exclusively on preventative measures rather than on curative measures or treatment. Clean houses, clean ranges, clean properly balanced rations, pure water, proper disposal of sick and dead birds, the avoidance of overcrowding, the separating of growing birds from mature stock are important factors in the control of worm infestation. Worm remedies cannot take the place of sanitation. They do not destroy worm eggs but merely expel the parasites, or in the case of tape worms, only portions of the parasite. In fact, flocks there is not often need for worm remedies.

CLUB NEWS

The Malpeque Sea-Crest Club held its last regular meeting of the year on the 9th of September at Hamilton Hall.

The president, Janet Mann called the meeting to order, and the meeting opened by repeating the 4-H Pledge in unison.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Fifteen members answered the roll call and ten members were returned to the members.

Plans on the transporting of calves and members to the Rural Youth Fair were discussed.

It was moved by Roy Crozier and seconded by Carol Pickering that the meeting be adjourned.

A one-half hour of recreation then followed.

Earl Lockerby, Secretary.

PARASITES IN POULTRY

In last weeks column we dealt with External parasites of poultry, namely, lice, mites and fleas. This week we will commence a discussion of round worms and tape worms.

Many species of round worms and tape worms are found in the intestinal tract of poultry. When these parasites are present in large numbers they draw heavily on the nutritive juices and the birds do not assimilate sufficient nourishment. Some worms attach themselves to the lining of the intestines causing injury and some hemorrhage. The constant irritation sometimes thickens the intestinal wall to such an extent that the opening of the bile ducts are closed. When not sufficient quantities of bile reach the intestines, digestion is incomplete and the bird is undernourished. Such changes obviously are more or less chronic and are never fully repaired even though the parasites are removed. Worms also secrete two kinds of toxins or poisons. One of these destroys red blood cells, resulting in pale condition on the skin, comb and wattles in heavily infested birds. The other poison affects the nerves. Its action is evidenced by a partial paralysis of the legs, blindness, or a twisting of the head to one side (wry neck). Worm infestations also render birds more susceptible to disease.

Some intestinal worms are so small that they can barely be seen without the aid of a microscope. Others are several inches in length. The general round worm has a direct life cycle. The female deposits its eggs in the intestines of the bird and these pass out with the droppings. It has been estimated that a single female worm of this species may lay around fifty million eggs. Under suitable conditions of moisture and temperature these eggs become infective within ten to twenty days and if picked up at this stage by chickens and turkeys, will hatch in the intestines.

Another common round worm is found in the ceca (blind guts, these worms are from 2-10 to 1.5 inches in length and may occur in very large numbers). The eggs become infective in seven days to ten days after passing out in the droppings. This worm is generally called

REPLACES PERON

Along time foe of Peronism. Maj. Gen. Eduardo Lonardi, has emerged as Argentina's new leader. The 59-year-old veteran artillery officer who helped mastermind the four-day revolt that ousted Juan D. Peron after 10 years in power was imprisoned in 1952 for 8 months after an abortive attempt to unseat the government of Peron. He retired from the army in 1951 amid a dispute over the abortive proposal to make Mrs. Peron vice-president of Argentina.

Pub Sign Vetted By Sir Winston

AYLESBURY, Eng. AP—Sir Winston Churchill's fans in this sleepy Buckinghamshire town are disappointed. They won't be able to put the doughty old warrior's name on their pub sign.

When a new tavern was planned the suggestion arose, "Let's call it the Churchill Arms."

That's a big honor in Britain, where the best-loved personalities in history are immortalized in pub signs. It would be a man-sized job to count all the Lord Nelson taverns, the Dukes of Wellington and even those named after an earlier Duke of Edinburgh.

But Churchill isn't having any. He wrote back to the brewers this week to say that while he is most appreciative of the offer, he would rather they found another name.
