LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Johnston's River Again.
Sir,—“Live and learn” is, after all, perhaps the truest of proverbs, ancient or modern. Until your issue of the 28th ult. the people of Johnston's River were utterly unaware of two important facts which were then disclosed to them, the first being that we have been asleep all these years, and the second that we have in our midst a resident (!) who has such a command of the English language in its most intricate forms. Up to that date we were of opinion that we were as intelligent and public-spirited as any section of P. E. I. people have held themselves inferior to any in intellect or enterprise until “Resident” made the grand discovery that ours has been a state of somnolence. But was it not an unkind act on the part of this would-be critic to issue such a torrent of bombastic words for the benefit of people who are in a “dormant” condition? Why not first present each and every one of us with a copy of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary? But then “Resident” evidently thinks that we have been prepared by a course of at least nine years within the classic walls of a college. “Resident” has a tendency to forgetfulness. He next makes reference to the “pedantic quill of ‘Gerrymander.’” Now, Webster tells us that pedantic means making a vain and unnecessary display of learning. Let the readers of THE EXAMINER compare the work of “Resident” with that of “Gerrymander,” and form their own conclusions as to which of them deserves the adjective pedantic. Pedantic, forsooth! “Resident,” for the future before you hurl such a bombast forth purchase a dictionary and a grammar—any common text book will do—and study up the use of simple adjectives, and learn that the term pedantic is properly applied to a vain display of learning (!) including the use of many syllabled words. But mark the originality of the next quotation which I shall make from the new and (would be) illustrious star which has arisen on the literary firmament. “Up to the issue of the 14th,” nothing, he says “was known of ‘Gerrymander’ save by reputation.” What! nothing save by “reputation”? Nothing at all! Truly, this is the age of wonders. The existence of this person was not known, it seems, save by invisible, whose movements are inaudible, who can neither be seen or heard, and yet is. We can scarcely use the verb exists with propriety. A little further, and mention is made of the admirers of “Gerrymander” being many, but did this much abused personage depart for the west “the mourners would be few.” Why, then our people must be possessed of either rare courage, or favored with that communion of spirits which is not usually given to mortals. When they can admire something that exists only in the spiritual state, and if, as “Resident” implies, “Gerrymander” has no corporeal existence, then why should the mourners be any? Most truly, ours must be a dormant dreamy state when we can admire and mourn of shadows—arid nothings. But, “Resident,” take a timely advice; be warned before it is too late, and when you next endeavor to air what you would fain make us believe is your superior knowledge, make sure of your own weapons and do not attempt to assist those whose literary and scholastic reputation is established on too firm a footing to be affected by any such “blasts” as yours of last week. But alas for this would-be genius, this writer of misplaced sarcasm. A little further on he speaks of “flattering praise.” More knowledge gained. Previous to this time an opinion prevailed, at least among the dormant inhabitants of Johnston's River, that praise was essentially of a flattering nature. We had never before heard it insinuated that anyone could be flattered by censure. But it must be so. “Plato, though resolute well.” There must be the praise that has a tendency to flatter and that which partakes of the nature of blame. How is that for a paradox? To the casual reader “Resident” must seem the incarnation of bravery. How nobly he takes up arms in defence of those whom it pleases him to consider that insult and injury has been offered to! What a marvellous courage he exhibits—on paper! How quickly he ascertains other's feelings! How promptly he flies to the rescue! Did the heroic deeds of “Resident” equal his heroic productions, then would his praises ring in story. But too much of your valuable space has already been taken up. Enough. But when a person of “Resident's” stamp pretends to voice the sentiments of an intelligent community, and tries to vent personal spleen on an unoffending person, then it is truly time to take up the cudgels in our own behalf. Speak of insult and injury, indeed. “Resident” has given both to the place he professes to be a native of. No, Mr. “Resident,” we are not sleeping—decidedly not! We can even read and understand such a perfect cyclone of words as that you launched forth last week.
In conclusion, I would say to “Resident” once more: Study the simple rules of common sense ere you appear before the public again in the character of a critic; and if at any time you feel inclined to act upon Greeley's advice, you will not even be so well situated as “Gerrymander” was, whose admirers were many, but whose mourners (according to your statement) will be few, inasmuch as your admirers are none, and your mourners—the same.
FAIR PLAY.

How the Maoris Marry.
CURIOUS MATRIMONIAL CUSTOMS IN NEW ZEALAND.
Strange matrimonial customs still prevail among the Maoris in New Zealand. The savages there are most interesting in their manner of living as far as courtship and marriage is concerned. Girls are given great license from a very early age in the matter of lovers. Some girls, however, are born proud, and either kept to one sweetheart or have none, but this is rare. When a girl married she became tapu to her husband. Anyone outside the relation of brother and sister could marry, although marriage of first cousins was greatly disliked. Polygamy prevailed among those who could afford it, and whose circumstances or inclination led into it, “but as the tribe supported all in food, the mean men would be prevented, in some way or another, from having large establishments.
A COMMON PRACTICE.
 betrothal of children is common among people of high birth. If no betrothal there is generally a lot of talk and squabbling, everyone in the tribe thinking he has a right to interfere, till at last the young couple, if lovers, would flee to the bush until their living together was agreed to. The girl generally begins the courting. The writer has often seen the pretty little love letter fall at the feet of a lover—it was a little bit of flax made into a half knot. “Yes” was made by pulling the knot tight; “no” by leaving the matrimonial noose alone. Sometimes in the where maturo (the wooing house), a building in which the young of both sexes assembled for play, songs, dances, etc., there would be at stated times a meeting. When the fire burned low a girl would stand up in the dark and say “I love So-and-so—I want him for my husband.” If he coughed (sign of assent) or said “yes,” it was well; if only dead silence,
SHE COVERED HER HEAD
with her robe and was ashamed. This was not often, as she generally had managed to ascertain either by her own inquiry or by sending a girl friend, if the proposal was acceptable. On the other hand, sometimes a mother would attend and say, “I want So-and-so for my son.” If not acceptable there was general mocking, and she was told to let the young people have their house (the wooing house) to themselves. “Sometimes, if the unbetrothed pair had not secured the consent of the parents, a late suitor would appear upon the scene, and the poor girl got almost hauled to death between them all. Girls have sometimes been injured for life in those disputes, or even murdered by the losing party. There was generally a show of force, more or less severe; but after she had been taken away, the parents came to see the pair, and when presents had been interchanged all were satisfied.”—Press.

LONDON, May 1.—The wife of Captain Roberts, of the White Star steamer Narvon, who has been missing since February 11, when the vessel sailed from Liverpool for New York, and the wife of Chief Officer Wright have both gone insane through despair caused by the loss of their husbands, and have been placed in an asylum for the insane.

ST. HYACINTHE, Que., May 1.—Custom House officers here say that 30 families, embracing nearly 200 people, returned to this country during April, and it is not probable that this fully represents the number, as the return movement becomes more pronounced from week to week, especially to the Montreal district.

In Lowell, Mass., the bicycle is coming in for legal recognition in a new way. The chief assessor proposes that the owners shall pay taxes on their machines the same as men who have horses.

The English sailors received the lion's share of the applause awarded the foreigners at the land parade in New York, and the New York papers generally admit that they presented a better appearance even than Uncle Sam's marines. This indicates that the Britishers are a long way ahead of the representatives of any other powers.

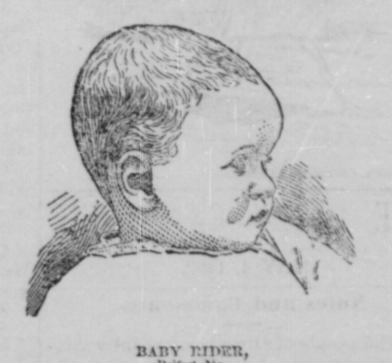

It is announced that the United States Civil Service Reform Association has passed a resolution urging that the President should make appointments to office without the assistance of members of Congress. The Montreal Gazette, commenting upon this fact, remarks that “the Association appears to have peculiar ideas as to what members of Congress are elected for.”

It is quite clear that the newspaper “stretcher” has taken up his abode in Chicago very early in the fair season. The story of an attempt to steal the ashes of Columbus from their resting place in the exhibition buildings reads so nicely that not one in a hundred would stop to think that these relics of the new world's discoverer never were nearer the windy city of the West than his body was in life.

Kansas is coming to the front as a divorce state, her courts having severed the marriage tie in some five thousand cases last year. So easy is it to obtain a divorce there that it is seldom one is refused when applied for. One result noted by a correspondent is that hasty marriages as well as the marriages of those who are practically children are on the increase. Kansas is a state of advanced ideas, where woman suffrage is the rule. The Gazette thinks that in her case the force which moral reformers must count on seems to have failed as a defence of the home and the family.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 1.—A peasant was buried alive recently in the village of Marulch, Government of Kalooga. The discovery of the fact was made through peasants, who, hearing sounds coming from the grave, notified the authorities. When the body was exhumed a horrible sight was revealed. The shroud was found to be torn to pieces, the face of the corpse was badly lacerated, one of the eyes was torn out, and some of the fingers were bitten off.

Baby Rider, was a terrible sufferer from Eczema of Scalp and Face. The whole Top of Head was covered with crusts 1/4 inch thick, and Face and Ears traveled in similar manner. No rest night or day for child or mother. Hands and Clothing Covered with Blood, where the little one endeavored to allay the itching and burning, by scratching the raw surface of Face, with its tiny fingers. Remedies of nearly all kinds, had been used, but it was constantly growing worse, when the mother began the use of SKODA'S GERMAN SOAP, and SKODA'S OINTMENT. These Remedies used externally, four or five times, daily, for a few weeks, produced as clear and fair a skin, as ever adorned a Baby's Body.
