

Happenings of The Week

A black and white shepherd tartan dolly bag attracted the Queen during her visit to the British Industries Fair.

A new line in travel bags caught the interest of all the royal visitors and a sample was ordered by the Queen, the Queen Mother, the Duchess and the Princess Royal.

Of striking interest is the first English-designed tartan to be acceptable to Scots. There is no ruling against any Scot producing, or having produced, a new tartan, and this latest tartan, designed in London's Chelsea, is called the Galloway tartan.

Their Excellencies, attended by Miss Anstice Gibbs and Flight Lieut. A. A. Sherlock, were present at the National Gallery on Tuesday evening, when His Excellency opened an exhibition of contemporary Irish paintings.

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

"Ah, me!" James let fall a long sigh as he slowly let himself down to unlace his boots, after he came to the comfort of his old armchair tonight "every bone of my body aches, Ellen - every muscle complains!" "Maybe" we chirped blithely "there's going to be a change in the weather. Perhaps we're going to get rain. Dear knows we could do with a whole day of it, everything's getting so dry!" There was a moment of silence while he continued to wrestle with a contrary knot.

Then "Weather, Ellen!" he exclaimed shortly "the weather has nothing to do with it - not a thing I say! If you had walked as far as I did today, indeed if you had taken only half of the steps I took since sunrise, then you would know the cause of my complaint. Just let's try to reckon the distance I've gone, when following the team at that harrowing!" . . . We may say that James is one who delights in providing us with problems which arise out of our farming. Those like: "Ellen, how many acres are in a piece of land . . . yards in width and . . . chains long. And one side is nineteen yards longer than the other, and when I stepped it this evening there was about the same difference in the ends."

"And it's an odd shape, Ellen, comes kind of to an angle - but you'll just have to allow for that!" Or it may be that our problem has to do with the approximate sailing piece of a hog or a steer, being careful of course, since there is a virtue in rendering to each his own, to "knock off, oh well a nice few pounds since he was fairly full when we weighed him!" And then when we have checked our calculations to have them accurate using up in the endeavour what James declares is "a whole ream of paper," he will affirm our result with "That's just what it came to for me. Of course I didn't stop to verify it on paper, but that's what I got when I made it up hastily in my head!"

Extra Fat

The housewife should keep an old can on hand to receive that extra fat she wishes to throw away, instead of pouring it into the sink. Constant pouring of fat into the sink means plumbing bills. The can is very easily disposed of.

Velvet coat collars can be cleaned by using hot water and ammonia, and sponging lightly. When this dries, sponge with alcohol.

The Roasting Pan It will be much easier to wash the roasting pan if it is greased well before the roast is placed in it. This also causes all the essence of the meat to go into the gravy rather than into the pan.

Better English

By B. C. Williams

1. What is wrong with this sentence? "When will I be liable to see him?" 2. What is the correct pronunciation of "boudoir?" 3. Which one of these words is misspelled? Hereditary, heliotrope, Himalayan, humorous. 4. What does the word "collaborator" mean? 5. What is a word beginning with "t" that means "a route; record of a journey?"

ANSWERS 1. Say, "When shall I be likely to see him?" 2. Pronounce boo-dwar oo as in boot, as in ah, accent first syllable. 3. Hereditary. 4. One who works jointly, as in writing a book. "His wife was his collaborator" in the preparation of the manuscript. 5. Itinerary.

How Can I!!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I give an added flavor to ripe olives? A. Ripe olives will be more delicious if they are soaked overnight in olive oil, to which has been added a small piece of clove.

Q. How can I remedy sagging doors? A. Frequently all the sag, and also the habit of sticking, can be eliminated from a door by tightening all the hinge screws.

Q. How can I kill moths in upholstered furniture? A. To exterminate moths in upholstered furniture, sprinkle powdered alum in the crevices of the upholstery.

Cook's Corner

That Body Of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

PROGRESS MADE IN TREATING LEPROSY When we consider the large number of men and women dying of cancer, we may think it strange that research workers have not discovered the cause and cure of this fatal disease. What we forget is the great number of formerly fatal diseases that have been conquered or controlled during the past fifty years.

There is a little magazine called The Star, edited and published by the patients of the U. S. Marine Hospital National Leprosarium, Carville, Louisiana. In this magazine appears a page of cartoons not only showing the great progress made in the treatment of leprosy (now called Hansen's Disease) during the past fifty years but also in the control of tuberculosis by streptomycin and surgery, of diabetes by insulin, of pernicious anemia by liver and liver extracts, and of mental diseases by the shock treatment.

In a message to the patients of this hospital, Dr. Frederick Johansen, Superintendent, says in part: "During the past fifty years we who work with Hansen's disease have seen achievements that mankind has been eagerly awaiting for centuries. The successful use of the sulfa drugs has brought about a new concept of Hansen's disease. The public attitude towards leprosy and those who contract it is gradually developing as more people learn its true character. Superstition and intolerance are giving way to public behavior based on scientific fact and human understanding."

Dr. Johansen's report to the Surgeon General on the work done at Carville in 1949 stated that this hospital discharged the largest number of patients to their homes and occupations than in any one year since the hospital was founded. The above is a wonderful achievement when we think of all the centuries during which leprosy patients were treated as "untouchables" and isolated from everybody but physicians and nurses.

SCOURGE

We should all know as much as possible about the two dreaded social diseases, gonorrhea and syphilis. Taking No Chances

The grateful father was thanking the young man for his bravery in rescuing his daughter from the river. He finished up: "Do you realize, my boy, the great danger you were placing yourself in?" To this the rescuee replied briefly: "There wasn't any. I am a champion swimmer and I am already married."

DOROTHY DIX SAYS -

Avoiding Loneliness

Learning To Enjoy Own Company Important Aid To Happiness

I know a woman who has a small child whom she puts in a room alone every day for several hours with only two or three simple toys with which to occupy himself. He is thrown absolutely upon himself for diversion. "I am trying to teach him how to develop his own resources," says the mother. "I am trying to teach him how to find companionship and entertainment in his own society. I am trying to save him from the curse of loneliness that blights so many lives. I don't want him to grow up to be one of those who always have to live in a crowd and be going places and doing things in order to be happy. I want to try to help him make his life as self-contained as possible."

"Of course, I don't want my child to be a hermit or to be anti-social in any way. I want him to grow up to be companionable and what we call a good mixer and to enjoy the society of his fellow creatures, but I don't want him to be simply sunk if he has to be by himself."

PITIFUL GROUP

"It has always seemed to me that no people are so much to be pitied as those who are such poor company for themselves that they are bored to death when left alone. Yet the world is full of these unfortunate. You see them crowding places of amusement, going to see dull and stupid plays and pictures; sitting around poolrooms and hotel lounges, listening to tedious tales that they have heard a hundred times before, recounting their symptoms and describing their major operations and repeating the inane things their children said. They are not entertained or amused or even interested, but it passes the time and saves them from the thing they dread more than any calamity on earth, and that is being alone."

"No men and women are so poverty stricken as those who have no resources within themselves, and none are so rich as those who can say with the poet 'my mind to me a kingdom is.' For those who are dependent upon the outside world for entertainment, who must run with the gang and be in the midst of the bright lights, inevitably end in spiritual bankruptcy. For there comes a time of grief or misfortune or old age when the crowd melts away and the lights go out and one is of all men the most miserable if he has not learned to live alone."

"But this misfortune can never happen to those who have within themselves the ability to make their own happiness. They are never bored because their minds are filled with the wisdom of the ages that they have garnered from books, and with the memories of the thrilling things that they have seen and done. No companion could be more entertaining and amusing than their thoughts. They can chum with themselves and, in reality, are never less alone than when alone."

"And think of the tragedies that are caused by loneliness! The lives that are wrecked by it! The chief of police of a great city once told me that loneliness was responsible for more boys and girls going astray than any other cause. He said a boy would come to the city from farm or a village where all of his life he had lived in close association with his neighbors and had his part in their activities."

WRONG SORT OF FRIENDS

"In the city he would know no one, have no companionship, no one to run around with, nobody to talk to, no chance to make any social contacts. It would be easier to get in with hoodlums than with criminals. The girl would have the same experience. She would be young and pretty and craving good times and missing her old boy friends and the parties at home. She would be so dead lonely with
