Annual Indicates Active Year For Basilia Parish CWL

Conveners reports for the year were presented in detail at the recent annual meeting of St. Dunstan's Basilia Parish Council of the Catholic Women's League held April 2 in the Assembly Hall.

A short monthly meeting preceded the annual meeting. At this time members were reminded of the Provincial Convention on June 16 and 17 and arrangements were made for the annual convention of Our Lady of Good Council on April 26 with mass and a dinner meeting at the Queen Hotel.

The meeting was chaired by the president, Mrs. Fred Coyne and opened with prayer by the Very Rev. P.P. MacDonald.

Mrs. Fred MacMillan, recording secretary, read a comprehensive report on the activities of the different conveners. The correspondence report was read by the secretary, Mrs. George MacDonald, and the treasurer, Miss Gertrude Coody, reported that the main sources of revenue were from pantry sales, tag day, membership dues, etc., and disbursements consisted of national and provincial obligations, donations to catholic girls school, Girl Guides, Music Festival Association, school and catechism prizes, Sacred Heart Radio Program, treats for patients at Riverside and the Infirmary, Christmas dinners, etc.

Institutions convener, Mrs. Gerald Mitchell, along with other members, visited Riverside and Infirmary and the Sacred Heart Home, bringing gifts, treats and entertainment.

Mrs. Amos Clarkin, radio and television convener, sent thank you letters to television station and radio stations. "Shake them, Shake them, Shake them" was the theme of the "Bells of St. Mary's," "Keys of the Kingdom" and the "Hour of France." In the absence of Mrs. J.E. Flemming, convener of social action, the report was read by Mrs. George MacDonald, which outlined in detail the accomplishment of her work on a committee for social welfare.

Education convener, Miss A. Dunne McCarthy, attended all Home and School meetings, St. Dunstan's University closing, and regional conference in Moncton and organized a public speaking course.

Other reports were presented by convener of report forms, Mrs. J.L. McGuigan; citizenship convener, Mrs. Ella Connolly; membership convener, Mrs. Thomas McGinn; Girl Guides convener, Mrs. Robert Coffin.

MARY HAWORTH Specialists Must Have Faith To Solve Problems

Dear Mary Haworth: So often in your column you advise the petitioner to consult this person or that agency. You seem to believe that a clergyman or professional counsellor or legal specialist can meet the need, no matter what the particular difficulty.

Why don't you try thinking positively for a change? Mind, the human mind, is a synonym for God. Mind rules over all. Mind is perfect.

What makes you think that people with problems should consult others for help, when they already have the power to start thinking for themselves?

Before nominating sources of help, you should know, first of all, whether the clergyman or legal specialist or the family relations counsellor has the faith that solves problems.

The positive impetus comes from the very Royal Church recently. Six Bibles for use in the pews were given by the United Church of Canada to the late Mrs. Harry Smith. Three hymnaries with music were given to the family in memory of the late Mrs. William Sennier for use of pulpit choirs.

The memorials were presented by Mrs. Murray MacKinnon and received for the congregation by Elder David Murphy.

that transforms, and put it to use. For example, in healing the man with the withered arm, Our Lord Jesus Himself required some cooperation from the client — an exertion that was also an act of faith — when He commanded: "Stretch forth thine hand."

So it is with all persons who aspire to be helped. They must test their own sincerity, establish the strength and integrity of their desire to be made whole, and their faith that it can be done, by willingly reaching out on their own behalf.

It isn't enough to just sit and wait upon another's awareness of truth to do your work for you.

Dear Mary Haworth: I am 27, and Don is 35. We have been going steady for eight months and planned to be married. But on the night we were to become engaged he said I must choose between him and my pet fox terrier which I've had for eight years.

Don complains that she sheds hairs, barks too much and other dogs, is disobedient and sometimes puts her forepaws on the sofa (wanted to be patted) or on the TV, if any there.

I admit she is spoiled, but she does obey where she has been taught, and has improved in the last two months.

I feel we could compromise and keep her in the kitchen, or I would even the living room daily. Also my mother would keep her on Don's days off, so he wouldn't be bothered. But he just says he can't live with her; she must go.

He pays fairly large weekly alimony and I will have to continue wage earning to help with expenses. I am buying my home and the loan (in terms of years) is one - third paid off. But we will be moving to another town in a year or two because of his work. Please advise me.

C.S.

Dear C.S.: Don is taking over in your domain with a low heavy hand. It bodies I'll harem in double harness. He is grossly inconsiderate blawsh "cause - why" he is already paying heavy alimony for a past marital failure.

My advice is, stay single rather than marry him. The venture can't succeed. Sooner or later you'll have to face it; and it had better be now than later.

ELLEN'S DIARY Bicycles and Catchers' Mitts Show Appearance

A tractor joined in our springing today. After a period of farming in which the horse and sleigh was the only means of conveyance on our wintry fields, at the findings and carrying of each day, once more it is sound was heard.

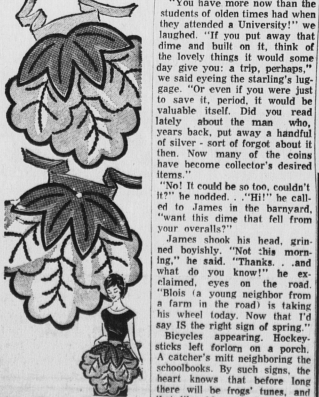

"That does!" we smiled to James.

"We never know, Ellen," he said. "We could get into a snowfall yet. Yes, in April, one that would stop everything. I've seen it so before this. But if we do, it wouldn't be like a winter-sport. April - snow soon disappears."

So we had the tractor on the fields at the haulings of today. And above, writing their strange magic in the sunny blue sky, cutting through the billows of the white cloud - drift, mounting higher than ever birds could soar, let planes tell those silvery trails that tell earthbound folks of their passing.

"Ah," Mack grinned coming by on his way to his classes, where we spread our pieces of wash, "look what's come! Your starlings!"

They were, landed on the flat of the garage - roof,
