Redevelopment Plan Scheduled In Halifax

By CAL HOLLOWAY
HALIFAX (CP)—A bold new redevelopment scheme which will change the city's skyline to the tune of $35,000,000 is scheduled to begin in downtown Halifax in July.

An agreement for the 19-acre development was signed last week between the city and Provinces and Central Properties Limited of London, Eng. It is expected to be completed in 1968.

The area—known as the Cornwallis Centre—is northwest of the central business district and lies roughly between the historic Halifax Citadel and the waterfront.

Replacing a section of the city which a 1957 study found to be "generally in a deplorable condition," the centre will contain three 22-storey apartment towers—skyscrapers by comparison to existing buildings in the area, a 450-room hotel, a massive shopping complex and recreation and parking facilities.

Five years after the 1957 study recommended redevelopment, the city, in agreement with Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, invited proposals for redevelopment. Council appropriated the land and demolished the old buildings.

The only reply to the city's invitation came from Provinces and Central Properties who submitted plans for a $30,000,000 scheme. Council rejected this, reasoning that Halifax was not quite ready for it. It was felt most of the proposed buildings were out of scale with the city and would "overwhelm existing development."

The British company was given one year to revise the plan, and came up with the $35,000,000 scheme just before the deadline. The company will pay $5,000,000 for the cleared land.

The semi-luxurious towers, the first phase of the project, will contain 490 one- and two-room apartments. They will have underground parking, swimming pools and other recreational facilities.

Pedestrians will use walk ways which will lead from the towers to the shopping area, avoiding traffic.

A 26-storey office tower will rise 300 feet into the air. Each floor will contain 11,000 square feet of office space. The building will be served by eight high speed elevators.

The ultra-modern shopping area, which will cover more than 550,000 square feet, will include two major department stores, a supermarket, car showroom and dozens of other shops. Parking will be beneath the warehouse space serving the shops will be both below and above the shopping area. The customer will drive his car beneath the centre, take an escalator to the mall and visit the entire shopping area without going out of doors.

The 11-storey 490-room hotel will be constructed during the final stages of the development.

A new system of streets is also planned to carry the heavy volume of traffic to and from the centre. This will include a "flyover" or raised street and a four-lane access drive.
