

BRITISH ENVOY TO WASHINGTON RETIRES SOON

(By Andree Herding, Associated Press Staff Writer)

WASHINGTON, July 5—Veteran of 40 years of diplomacy, British Ambassador Sir Ronald Lindsay, will soon depart from Washington for good, leaving Anglo-American relations on as cordial a footing as at any time since the Great War.

In his 10 years as Ambassador here, the dean of the Washington diplomatic corps has seen some controversies arise between the two countries, but when he reports to the Foreign Office in London within a few weeks he can tell his superiors that few clouds now mar the sky of their friendship.

The six-foot four envoy can tell his Foreign Office that—

State Secretary Hull has repeatedly expressed the United States Government's intention of pursuing a parallel policy with the nations desiring peace—referring to Great Britain and France;

In the Far East

Recently Mr. Hull stated Washington's concern over the "broader aspects" of the differences between Britain and Japan at Tientsin, virtually asserting America's sympathies for Britain in the Far East;

The United States gave King King and Queen Elizabeth one of the most enthusiastic receptions it has ever accorded a visitor, and President Roosevelt pronounced a toast at the White House dinner that aroused the comment of diplomats because of its theme of fellowship with Great Britain;

The momentary dispute over the sovereignty of the Pacific Islands Canton and Enderbury has been settled, and contested sovereignty over more Pacific Islands will be negotiated;

The Anglo-American Trade Agreement is operating to the satisfaction of both Governments though there have been attacks upon it.

The best deal in history for the exchange of war reserves (United States cotton for British rubber) has been negotiated.

Sir Ronald can point to the fact that in many parts of the world the United States and Britain recently have been taking simultaneous or parallel action. Both landed bluejackets at the international settlement at Kulangsu; both extended broad credits to China; both refused to recognize Germany's coup in Czechoslovakia; both condemned Italy's invasion of Albania; both rejected Japan's claims to increased influence at Shanghai.

Sir Ronald will leave behind him a memory of a towering man with loose-flying coat and baggy trousers of a different color, who was never at loss for a witty word but disliked being interviewed.

His successor is the Marquess of Lothian.

South Africa Seeks Transfer Of Territories

By COLIN LEGUM
Canadian Press Correspondent

CAPE TOWN, July 5—The South African Government is considering schemes for transfer of territories which would double the area of the country.

Negotiations are proceeding between the British Dominion Office and the Union Department of External Affairs for transfer of three protectorates, Bechuanaland, Basutoland and Swaziland, at present governed by British commissioners.

The three territories which lie on the borders of the Union have a total population of 1,000,000, of which 90 per cent is black.

The Duke of Devonshire, British under-secretary for dominions, is at present touring the areas in question and will report to the British cabinet. If his report is favorable the territories will come under control of South Africa.

Following an intensive campaign by the residents of south-west Africa, the Union Government is considering the feasibility of incorporating as a fifth province of South Africa the mandate which has an area of 362,450 square miles.

An active political party whose main objective is incorporation of south-west Africa in a union has been launched in the mandate.

Increased Nazi activity and discontent among sections of the community have led to incorporation of the South-West African Police Force with the South African Police, a measure which has been ratified by parliament.

THE BEAVER

The beaver is among the most valued wild life citizens in the national parks throughout Canada, where it has made notable contributions as a conservation agent.

"Canada's Weekly,"

A master forester, the beaver constructs dams which store water, preventing droughts, floods and soil erosion. Through his work of creating ponds and meadows the beaver provides food, moisture and shelter for countless forms of plant and animal life. Water stored side the growth of vegetation, and the ponds serve as breeding places not only for fish but for fish food. Waterfowl find excellent nesting conditions around beaver ponds, while many other birds take advantage of

MORE UNIVERSITY GRADUATES

Nearly every degree-granting university or college in Canada reports more graduations than in any years since 1925, the total number being 5,875 men and women, says "Canada's Weekly." The steady increases in graduation in the past five years may be taken as proof of Canada's widening outlook and growing optimism. The prestige won by Canada in medicine and dentistry is reflected in the fact that these faculties have expanded considerably and in some cases differ entrance examinations are being insisted upon. The opportunities that Canada's mining fields have to offer have led to greater enrollments in the engineering schools, Commercial or industrial chemistry students. But scientific farming shows a decline, which may be attributed to the unsatisfactory conditions that have prevailed in recent years in regard to agriculture.
