laughed off her husband's little faults and peculiarities instead of making tragedies out of them. It is a good policy to take what you can get, and like it, rather than waste your life in longings after the unattainable. Many a man who never saw the inside of a college has acquired the highest and broadest and most profound of all educations in the University of Hard Knocks. Many a man whose grammar is rickety is all there when it comes to love and tenderness and kindness to his wife. If no woman married until she found her ideal, the wedding bells would cease to ring.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am deeply in love with a young girl whose parents are divorced. Although her mother has legal custody of her, she loves her father the most and blames the mother for the separation. She has had a pretty hard road to go and hence is down on matrimony. Although she loves me, she is afraid that if we were married it would end unhappily. What can I say to her that will make her change her mind and realize that because her parents' marriage was a failure ours need not be?

ANSWER: You can tell her that marriage is like everything else in life - an individual experiment and because one person does not make a go of it is no sign that another will not do so. The world would stop still if we were all afraid to undertake any adventure because someone else had failed at it.

It is natural that a girl who has been the victim of an unhappy marriage should look upon marriage with apprehension, but for that very reason she is the more likely to make her own marriage a success. She has seen the bitter end to which family quarrels can come and that will make her the more careful to keep her own home peaceful. She has seen how a husband and wife can antagonize each other until they kill love and so she will take the more trouble to placate her husband and to do everything to retain his affections. Most of all, she has known the misery of a child uprooted from its home, torn between its parents, its little life blighted by their feuds, and so she will be very careful to shield her own children from such a fate.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: My husband and I have been married a year and a half. We have incurred debts. He earns a fair salary, but not enough for us to live in a halfway decent way, so I am working. My husband thinks that I should pool my salary with his and pay our debts. I am willing to do this, but after they have been paid should I put the money in a general fund or have my own bank account? I know if I want to keep my salary and keep mum about its use my husband would feel that he had the same privilege. What about it?

ANSWER: Why not compromise on a joint bank account? But I don't see how you can mingle business with marriage. If you don't trust your husband enough to believe he will deal fairly with you about money, you haven't much faith in him.

DOROTHY DIX cannot reply personally to readers, but will answer questions of general interest through her column.

Navy Downs Souris 7-2

The Charlottetown Navy hockey team last night downed a fighting Souris Army team by a score of 7 to 2 in an exhibition game at Souris.

The game was a thriller all the way with Judson scoring the first goal early in the first period. Connolly scored another for Navy within a few seconds to run the score to 2-0. C. McCormick, hard playing defenceman of the Army, scored the first goal for Souris on a pretty solo effort near the end of the period.

In the second period the Navy outscored the Army boys by a score of 3-1. Goal getters for Navy were Larter, MacDonald, and Caldwell. C. McCormick came through with another smart effort to notch the Army's only goal of the period. In this period Jimmy McIntyre of Souris was injured and was removed to hospital. He is believed to be suffering from chest injuries.

The third period was all Navy as they notched two goals to run their total to seven. The goal scorers were Nicole and Doyle. Outstanding for Navy were Judson with one goal and three assists, Larter with one goal and three assists, Doyle, Caldwell and Connolly also turned in good games. For Souris C. McCormick was outstanding as he scored both goals unassisted and also played a fine all-round game.

A feature of the game was the refereeing of LeVine who put on a fine show for the large turnout of fans. Everyone knew exactly why each penalty was handed out.

Pioneer Montana Cowboy & Rancher A Former P.E.I. Man

Allen James McDonald, 88, pioneer Montana bull freighter, cowboy and rancher, died at Great Falls, Montana, on Jan. 11th. He had been in ill health for some time. McDonald resided on a ranch near Geysler.

Funeral services were held from O'Connor's chapel and at St. Ann's cathedral when requiem mass was offered. Burial was in Mount Olivet cemetery. Rosary services were at O'Connor's.

McDonald was born in Mount Stewart, Prince Edward Island, Canada, Oct. 31, 1867. He had resided in Montana since a spring day in 1880 when he stepped off a river steamerboat at Fort Benton.

McDonald married Sarah Ferguson, one of Montana's first school-teachers, Nov. 28, 1888. She died here last October.

They made their first home on what is known as the Elk Run ranch on Upper Highwood creek. In 1895 he purchased land in the Judith Basin country and in 1897 they moved across the mountains to the Geysler side. McDonald organized the Merrimac Cattle Co. in 1910 on the Merrimac ranch north of Geysler. They had lived there since. They celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at the ranch in 1938.

Survivors include three daughters, Mrs. Ellen Harney, Geysler; Mrs. Bertha Chamberlain, Seattle, and Mrs. Etta Evans, Stanford; two sons, Lennie McDonald, Geysler, and Joseph McDonald, Browning; a sister, Etta McDonald, Prince Edward Island; 10 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

About 50 people from surrounding districts attended the meeting and agreed that the campaign should commence immediately and conclude on February 15. Funds and materials will be collected from seven or eight districts and from outside contributors.

It is hoped that Mr. Bonnell, Manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia in Montague will act as treasurer and accept contributions. Mr. Bonnell will be consulted on the matter immediately.

Mrs. Gordon Robbins and her 18-month-old son Haldane, lost their lives in the fire which started when the kitchen stove exploded. As the house burned in a matter of minutes, everything was destroyed.

Two children Allison and Wendy, escaped from the house. Other members of the family, Mr. Gordon Robbins and two sons, Garfield and Garnet were not home at the time.
