The Conscience of a Dog.

"I don't see how you can talk about a dog's conscience," said the Small Boy. "A conscience is what we feel sorry or glad for our actions with. It reproaches us when we are wicked, and makes us feel happy if we are good. If we listen to it, it tells us when what we are going to do is right or wrong."

That was a very wise definition of a conscience for a small boy.

And doesn't a dog's conscience do those things?" asked the Big Woman. Doesn't a dog look ashamed when he has disobeyed you, and wag his tail when he has done something praiseworthy? Doesn't he slink off to do what is forbidden, because he knows he is going to do something wrong? Doesn't he sometimes act as if he repented, and wanted to atone for a sin?"

"Yes, Dash does all those things," said the Small Boy, thoughtfully.

"Occasionally a dog's conscience acts in a funny way," continued the Big Woman. "I heard lately of a little dog which was fond of chewing his master's clothes-broom. He was punished for it several times, but kept up his naughtiness wherever he wasn't observed. At last he reduced the broom to a stump. Then they took the stump and gave him a severe beating with it. Being much mortified, he ran off, and did not come home all day. The next day he walked in with a brand-new clothes-broom, which he laid at his master's feet. He wagged his tail, jumped about joyfully, and looked as proud as if he said, plainly: 'Here's your clothes-broom. I have made amends for my mischief. Am I not a splendid fellow?' I suppose he thought he had gained the right to chew up unlimited clothes-brooms."

The Small Boy laughed. That was a smart little dog.

"Oh yes, he was smart. But after all, he was not honest as he wanted his master to think. An honest little dog would have tried to earn money to buy his master a new clothes-broom. This dog went down to the village store watched his chance and stole one."

The Small Boy laughed harder than ever.

"And then," went on the Big Woman, "they had to whip him for the theft. That dog's conscience must have been terribly mixed up. It never could have been clear to his mind why it was wicked to tear up a broom, and then wicked to replace it."

"How could you teach a dog the difference between right and wrong without teaching him each thing separately?" asked the Small Boy.

"You couldn't. You could not teach a dog abstract right and wrong. The master trains the dog's conscience, teaching him what he must do and what he must not. His master's orders and wishes make the dog's conscience, and a bright dog knows when he disregards them. The dog I told you of had been taught that it was wrong to take a broom out of some one else's house to replace it. No one thought he would do such a thing."

"Then a dog hasn't got a conscience of his own after all?"

"Well, he has, and he hasn't. He has a good sized conscience for an animal, but it wouldn't be very big for you."

"I mean to try to teach Dash that he must never steal anything anywhere or at any time," said the Small Boy.

"Well perhaps you can do it," replied the Big Woman.—Harper's.

Teddy.

My little Teddy strayed one day into the meadow sweet with hay. "I dust till hide from Untle Fed," And on, and on, he briskly sped— When lo! a hornet's nest he spied. The same, awhile, he gravely eyed. "Oh, ho!" he said, "here's a honey-tome Dust like the one papa tooked home," He shook his little curls so sunny, Rejoicing at the feast of honey; His little hand reached for the treasure, But at the very slightest pressure. The inmates came, oh, such a swarm! Bent now to do the youngster harm. "Ou-ou, it hurts!" screamed tittle Ted, As towards home he quickly fled. "Ou-ou, Mamma, I'se naughty, and— Ou-ou, ou-ou, I'tung my hand." "On what, my little darling Ted?" "I'tung it on a bee," he said.

Pasture Farm Wanted.

His Worship the Mayor is in receipt of a letter from Mr. T. M. Kirkwood, of Sudbury, Ontario, who desires to obtain a thousand acres of land between Summerside and Charlottetown for pasturage. He is willing to take them in farms of 100 or 200 acres each, "as close to each other as possible". Application may be made to the Mayor or to Mr. Kirkwood himself. Mr. Kirkwood will come to see the farms when he hears from those who have places to offer. The opportunity to sell or lease seems to be a good one for land owners; and Mr. Kirkwood is evidently a man to cultivate.
