The Retort Coartoons. The noted French writer Piron was a wit whose reputation for brilliancy of speech was unrivalled. He was famous for his flashing retorts, but even the best of us sometimes have to bow to superiority, though it be only temporarily. A lady once thoughtlessly asked Piron in company whether he could tell her the difference between a woman and a mirror. "It is, madam," said Piron instantly, "that a mirror reflects without speaking and a woman speaks without reflecting."

Why She Knew. Willy—I bet you're going what isn't good for us. Mally—Why? Willy—'Cause we likes it.—New York Journal.

His Revenge. "Why don't you buy a ticket instead of paying me the money every time?" said a conductor on the Connecticut Western to a daily passenger, who always made it a point to pay in cash. "You'd save money."

Drawing Up the Treaty. "There is one thing that I want to understand about this matter," said the president, as he looked hard at the secretary of state. "I can grasp all the minor details, but I'm not quite sure as to one especially important section. In framing these conditions do you or do you not intend to embrace Queen Lil?"

Absurd All Round. "Isn't it absurd what ideas people in small towns have of large cities?" "Yes; there's just one thing more absurd."

An Indorsement. "Do you regard that politician as a reliable man?" inquired Senator Sorghum's friend. "Reliable!" echoed the senator. "I should say so. If that man were to give me a tip on the market, I'd back it with my last dollar."—Washington Star.

No Use For One. Little Knut—Mamma, didn't the missionary say that the people in Tamba-Tamba don't wear any clothes? Mother—Yes, that's what he said. Knut—Then why did papa drop a button in the plate?—Christiania Vikiingen.

Merit Rewarded. Jasper—I hear that Jones has married his late wife's sister. Jumpupe—Yes. He was very good to his wife, and her folks feel that they can't afford to let a good husband pass out of the family.—New York Truth.

Willing to Negotiate. "Then, proud beauty, you refuse my love?" said he. "Well," said the summer girl thoughtfully, "I don't know but that I might be willing to take an option on it."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A Dissenting Opinion. "Prince Constantine didn't show much ability." "Well, I don't know. When he had to retreat, he knew enough to start early and avoid the rush."—New York Truth. One Case Where It Does. Optimus—I don't think that the world is always willing to believe the worst about a man. Pessimus—Get a black eye and see.—New York Journal.

When a Man's In Love. Life's a jolly jag of joy When a man's in love. He's as happy and as coy As a turtle dove. All the world is fair and nice And as sweet as paradise. Nothing else cuts any ice When a man's in love. Life's a big bouquet of bliss When a man's in love. Earth is yearning just to kiss With the stars above. Then her smile is all there is In the world, excepting his. Say! It's something great—goe whiz— When a man's in love! Life's a mellow mess of mirth When a man's in love. Heaven comes to dwell with earth, Walking hand and glove. Then all creatures, low and high, Putting off their duties by, Just lay off to watch the guy When a man's in love. —Sixon Waterman in L. A. W. Bulletin.

True to Life. The early patroness of Burns, Mrs. Dunlop of Dunlop, had an old housekeeper, an especially privileged person, who had certain aristocratic notions of the family dignity which made the admiration of her mistress for the rustic poet incomprehensible to her. In order to overcome this prejudice, Mrs. Dunlop gave her a copy of "The Cotter's Saturday Night," which the poet had just written.

The old housekeeper read the poem, but when her mistress inquired her opinion of it, she replied with indifference, "Aweel, madam, that's vera weel." "Is that all you have to say in its favor?" asked Mrs. Dunlop in amazement. "Indeed, madam," returned the old woman, "the like o' your quality may see a vast deal in 't. But I was aye used to the like o' all that the poet has written about in my ain father's house, and I dinna ken how he could ha' described it any other way."

It is said that Burns counted the old housekeeper's criticism one of the highest compliments he had ever received. He probably valued it as greatly as a writer of New England stories values a remark once made to her by an old man. "I should think when you're writin' stories you'd like to kind o' make up things more," said this aged critic in a tone of kindly reproof. "Now my wife and I were talkin' about your last book the other day, and my wife says to me, 'Why, John, there's just such folks and such things happenin' right in this very town as she's written down in this book, and most likely been well paid for,' and I couldn't stand up for ye against her, for I knew 'twas the truth."—Youth's Companion.
