Governor - General Greatest General

NEW YORK, April 10—(CP)—Viscount Alexander, Canada's Governor-General, is described as "the outstanding general's general of the European War" in a new book by Gen. Omar N. Bradley of the United States Army.

The first instalment of a condensed version of Bradley's book, "The War America Fought", appeared today in Life magazine. Bradley, now chairman of the U. S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, served under Gen. Dwight Eisenhower in North Africa and in Europe during the Second World War.

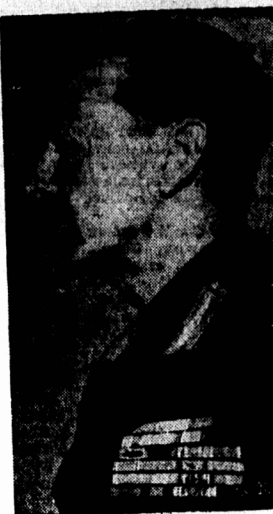

Field Marshal Alexander was transferred in 1943 from command of British forces in the Middle East to command all Allied ground forces in North Africa.

"There," writes Bradley, "he not only showed the shrewd tactical judgment that was to make him the outstanding general's general of the European War, but he was easily able to comport the national-minded and jealous Allied personalities of his command."

By the fall of 1943, with Tunisia, Sicily, and Salerno behind him, Alexander occupied a unique position in the Allied High Command. He was our only army group commander and therefore our only experienced one. At the same time he had demonstrated an incomparable ability to fuse the efforts of two Allied armies into a single cohesive campaign."

Bradley writes that Eisenhower, as supreme commander of the Allied force that was about to invade Europe, wanted Alexander to command the British 21st Army group in that operation. But the British asked instead that Alexander be retained in Italy "to spark that peninsula campaign."

Eisenhower settled on the then Lt.-Gen. Bernard Montgomery. Viscount Montgomery is, now Gen. Eisenhower's deputy commander of the Atlantic Pact army.

VISCOUNT ALEXANDER ... campaigned in a jeep

"Had Alexander commanded the 21st army group in Europe, we could have avoided the petulance that later was to becloud our relationships with Montgomery. For in contrast to the rigid self-assurance of Gen. Montgomery, Alexander brought to his command the reasonableness, patience and modesty of a great soldier."

Bradley refers to Montgomery as "a good, if sometimes perverse soldier."

"Monty's incomparable talent for the 'set' battle—the meticulously-planned offensive—made him invaluable in the Overlord assault (invasion of Europe.) For the Channel crossing was patterned to a rigid plan..."

Abbott Puts Huge Bite On Big Business

OTTAWA, April 12—(CP)—Finance Minister Abbott put a $175,000,000-a-year bite on big business in his budget last Wednesday.

Little business — the under $10,000-a-year class—escaped any new corporation taxation.

For the big companies, Mr. Abbott's new "defence surcharge" stiffened their tax rate on the over-$10,000 profits up to 45.6 per cent from the current 38 per cent. The surcharge is 20 per cent of the former rate.

This jump, effective on income earned since Jan. last, was estimated by the minister to provide the biggest single chunk of the $778,000,000 a year he expects his new tax structure to earn.

Its application will be tempered to the extent that the surcharge will not be allowed to cut down corporate income to less than five per cent on their employed capital, before provincial income tax. For businesses earning less than $10,000 a year, the tax will stay at 15 per cent.

A major departure launched by Mr. Abbott in the field of corporate taxation was an anti-inflationary move withholding for four years depreciation write-offs for tax purposes on non-essential capital assets acquired after today. This means that companies buying property or goods considered non-essential will not be allowed, until 1955, to chalk up its annual wear-and-tear against taxable income. After that, they may do so.

The aim is to discourage fast-profit seekers jumping into projects for a quick dollar, and also to deter established businesses from going in for frills that might be charged against potential taxation.

It will tend to deter new businesses in the amusement and similar lines, and also shun new store fronts and the like for businesses now operating.

Specifically exempt from the new provision are assets used in public utilities, telegraph and telephone service, pipelines, gas and oil-well equipment, lumbering equipment.

Besides these, defence production minister. Howe can exempt others, notably those for defence purposes or for use in farming, fishing, mining, transportation and communication.

The budget extends two concessions to industry given in previous budgets:

1. A three-year tax exemption for new mines. It is extended to mines coming into production in 1953 and 1954.
2. Special deductions granted to oil, natural gas and mining companies on the expenses of new exploration is extended for another year.
