

SOME DAY.

Some day I shall be dead,
Some day this tired head,
With all the anxious thoughts it now doth know,

This body, pain-racked, ill,
Shall lie at length, and still,
Under the clover and the wind-swept grass,

That were indeed, strange sleep,
When even you might weep,
And come and go—even you—unheard of me

Nay, sweetheart, nay I believe Here is no cause to grieve
One so wayward, of trouble so oppress,

Perchance, when that relate Hath wrought his spell of peace,
O'er this unquiet heart, long vexed with woe,

Who loves me will not weep
When that I lie asleep,
But rather joy to think such sorrow may

A Ghostly Purchase.

Mrs. JONES was down town making some purchases one day recently, and among other things bought a luminous match-safe, which could be seen in the gloom of the darkest night,

Never did two people make such a time getting out of any place as they did in vacating that room. Then they sat down on the top of the stairs to consult on the next course of procedure.

"It was the ghost of my father," said Jones, shaking like a leaf. "I recognized the features instantly. Oh, Maria, what can it mean? It must be some awful warning. I—I don't feel

At this moment Bridget the valiant appeared.
"Did I ever hear the likes of this schramm?"
she exclaimed, as she groped her way with a ker-

"Women are such fools," he exclaimed savagely;
"bought the thing herself and hung it up,
and then took it for a ghost; I'm thankful I'm not

To Callers on the Sick.

Only call at the door unless you are sure your friend is able to see you.
Enter and leave the house and move about the room quietly.

If your friend is very sick do not fall into gay and careless talk in the attempt to be cheerful.
Do not ask questions, and thus oblige your friend to talk.

Talk about something outside and not about the disease and circumstance of the patient.
Tell the news, but not the list of the sick and dying.

If possible, carry something with you to please the eye and relieve the monotony of the sick room; a flower or a picture, which you can loan for a few days.

If desirable, some little delicacy to tempt the appetite will be best welcomed; but nothing could be a more complete illustration of mistaken kindness than the common custom of tempting sick persons to eat rich cakes, preserves, sweetmeats, etc.

Stay only a moment, or a few minutes at the longest, unless you can be of help.

What an Old Man Noticed.

I have noticed that all the men are honest when they are watched.

I have noticed that purses will hold pennies as well as pounds.

I have noticed that in order to be a reasonable creature, it is necessary at times to be downright mad.

I have noticed that silks, broadcloths and jewels are often bought with other people's money.

I have noticed that some men are so honest that necessity compels them to be dishonest in the end.

I have noticed that what is right with a few exceptions—the left leg, the left eye and the left side of the plum-pudding.

I have noticed that the prayer of a selfish man is, "Forgive us our debts," while he makes everybody that owes him pay to the utmost farthing.

I have noticed that he who thinks every man a rogue is very certain to see one when he shaves himself, and he ought in mercy to his neighbour to surrender the razor to justice.

I have noticed that money is the fool's wisdom, the knave's reputation, the poor man's desire, the covetous man's ambition, and the idol of all.

A Bad Cold.

Mrs. Colonel Percy Yerger a fashionable Austin lady, is afflicted with partial deafness, and just now she is also struggling with the prevailing influenza, so called, because the sufferer cannot prevail upon it to leave. Mrs. Colonel Percy Yerger also wrestles with an infant about six-months-old.

There was a social gathering at the Yerger mansion not long ago, on which occasion Colonel Highlyer asked how the baby was coming on.
The partially deaf lady must have had the baby running in her head, as well as the cold, for when Colonel Highlyer asked her how the cherub was coming on, she replied with animation, evidently having the cold in her head.

"I usually have them every winter, colonel, but I must say this is the worst one I ever had. I managed to get rid of all the rest in less than three days, but this one sticks to me like a tick."

"Madam," exclaimed the horrified colonel.
"I just worried me nearly to death. It keeps me awake all night. I expect I shall have it on hand all winter, and I can tell you by your looks that you are going to have one just like it."
