

Gen. Charles Foulkes Writes Defence Book

OTTAWA (CP)—Gen. Charles Foulkes, chairman of the Canadian chiefs of staff committee from 1951 to 1959, says in a new book that neither the Liberal St. Laurent nor Conservative Diefenbaker governments would allow the United States to store nuclear weapons on American leased bases in Newfoundland and Labrador.

with a press release issued by Mr. Diefenbaker's office Sept. 23, 1958, which said the Bomarc could be used either with a conventional or nuclear warhead.

"This statement was only valid when referring to the Bomarc-AA; it was not applicable to the Bomarc-B missile, the type that was to be installed in Canada."

In 1960, the Conservative government had taken the stand that acquisition of nuclear weapons was inconsistent with its efforts to negotiate a nuclear disarmament agreement.

On the question of the North American Air Defence (NORAD) agreement, Gen. Foulkes said the Diefenbaker government as soon as it took office in 1957 was urged by the military to approve it.

LACKED KNOWLEDGE
"The rough passage of this legislation in the House of Commons can be attributed in the main to the lack of knowledge and understanding of the project by the responsible ministers."

"The Liberal opposition, which was originally responsible for the measure, might have been expected to strongly support the project. Instead, while giving some tacit support to the concept of joint air defence, its members appeared to be more interested in their new role as critics of the government."

Gen. Foulkes also says the Canadian chiefs of staff were under some political pressure, he doesn't say from whom, to bring NORAD under NATO command.

However, the U.S. chiefs feared that any NATO control of NORAD might lead to attempts for NATO control of the U.S. Air Force Strategic Air Command.

Gen. Foulkes says at another point that the U.S. had to take unilateral action to increase NORAD's state of readiness during the 1962 Cuban crisis because "Canada's authorities dragged their feet for such an inordinate time."

This was a "breakdown in the agreed procedure."
"Any sign of uncertainty or hesitation could have been misconstrued by the Soviet Union as weakness or timidity and could have encouraged a more aggressive Soviet attitude."

Gen. Foulkes suggests that neither Canada nor the U.S. will want to renew the NORAD agreement when it expires in 1968.

NO ATOMIC BOMBS
Canada acquired the CF-104 nuclear jet bomber but not the atomic bombs for them until the Pearson government took office in 1963.

Gen. Foulkes said that when the Diefenbaker government in 1958 decided to construct two Bomarc-B missile sites in Canada a misunderstanding arose immediately about the type of warhead.

The confusion had started

Weiss bid two clubs to show a good hand, and followed this with four spades after West had bid four hearts. When North bid five spades, Weiss went to six, singleton heart and the ace of judging that his partner had a

BURGLAR TOOLS SOLD BY POLICE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Sets of burglary tools were among the items up for grabs at an auction held by the Vancouver police department.

A crowd of about 300 policemen, crammed an auction hall here to bid on unclaimed items ranging from burglary tools to bicycles.

One kit bag containing pry bar, sledge hammer, crow bar and other tools familiar to the break and enter trade went for $4.50 to a conservatively dressed, middle-aged man.

"You're not a cop are you?" he asked when approached by a reporter. "I don't want my name in the paper and I don't want any pictures."

The man said he was from out of town and lived on welfare payments.

Other items sold included a doctor's bag containing a

War Widow Second Time

MEADVILLE, Pa. (AP)—Widowed twice by the Viet Nam war, her family fatherless for the second time, Mrs. Bernard Kistler lay in unbelieving shock in a hospital.

Mrs. Kistler, 26, lapsed into what doctors described as severe shock after being told that her husband, a 26-year-old army lieutenant, was killed Tuesday in a Viet Cong attack.

The tragic news came to Mrs. Kistler Thursday—one hour after she had given birth to the couple's first child, a son.

Twenty-two months ago Mrs. Kistler's first husband, army Lieut. William T. Reach, was killed in Viet Nam. They were the parents of a son, William Jr.
