Agriculture.

A good receipt for keeping Boys on the Farm.

We have receipts innumerable for preserving all kinds of fruit for a long period. Here is a good one for preserving boys for a lifetime—on the farm. Let every farmer who has boys try it. It is warranted to do no harm.

Another thing the boys want an interest in the business, and the sooner you give them an investment in the farm or its stock, the more likely you will be to make farmers of them. It is true, the law gives you the right to the avails of their labors until they reach their majority. It may be true that these services are no more than a compensation for the expenses of their childhood. The intercourse of parents and children should not always be graduated by the legal scale. You do not want your son for a servant, but for a companion, and a support in your declining years. You want to attach him by affection and interest to the soil that he cultivates. Begin, then, early to identify his interest with your business, as if he was under no obligations to you. If he fancies stock, give him what he likes, and let the increases be his. Especially encourage him to plant orchards or vineyards of the finest variety of fruit. Teach him to bud, graft, prune ripen and market all the fruits of your climate. Furnish him with all the books and facilities that he needs to study and practice pomology and horticulture. If properly encouraged he will take an interest in these things very early, and before he is old enough to think of leaving your roof, his tastes will be formed, and his course in life will be determined. His heart will go down into the soil with the roots of every fruit tree that he plants, and the orchards and gardens of the old homestead, or of another close by, will be his paradise, from which nothing but necessity can drive him.—Agriculturist.

ANIMALS THAT CHEW THE CUD.—Ruminatiug animals gather their food rapidly, give it a few cuts with their teeth, and swallow it. It goes to an interior receptacle, where it is moistened; this is very essential if it be dry hay. When the animal has filled himself, he masticates the food thus stowed away in his stomach, raising it cud by cud. When a portion is completely masticated, it passes to another receptacle and the progress of digestion goes on. Thus an ox, if let to himself, will raise and masticate all the food thus stowed awaw in his stomach. If he be pushed and worked hard, and does not have much time to masticate he falls of in flesh, his health is poor, his digestion incomplete. The horse, on the contrary, however much in a hurry he may be, must masticate each mouthful before he swallows it. A hungry ox let into a meadow will fill himself in twenty minutes, while a horse would at least an hour and twenty minutes to take the same amount of grass.

DISEASE AMONG HORSES.—The Medford Monitor is informed that a disease, which in general proves fatal, has recently made its appearance among the horses in that township—nine having already within a few weeks died in the neighborhood. If discovered in time and bleeding resorted to, the horse will in general be saved. The lights of those that have died, when opened, have been found distended with clots of blood.

PLOUGHING IN RIDGES.—No one but those who have had experience in low lands can have an idea of how great is the loss to crops from stagnant water about the roots. Yet most of us have land which we must work, and yet cannot afford to underdrain, for want of sufficient capital, or from some motive than a want of faith in its profitableness, if we could only get at it. Now, if such ladd be ploughed up into narrow ridges, it serves very much the same purpose as an underdrain. To be sure it is but a temporary purpose, for in time the loss of land between the ridges would come to as much expense as the first cost of drain-tile. Still, it is better to have a full crop on only a portion of one's land, than risk a total failure on all; and in this way ridging will often be found to pay very well.

SAVE THE DEAD LEAVES.—If every horticulturist and farmer would think for a moment on the nature of fallen leaves,—which contain not only the vegetable matter, but the earthly salts, lime, potash, etc., needed for the next season's growth and fertility,—and that, too, exactly in the proportion required by the tree or plant from which they fall; nay, more, if they would consider that it is exactly in this way, by the decomposition of these very fallen leaves, that nature enriches the soil, year after year in her great forests, it would hardly be possible for such a reflecting horticulturist or farmer to allow these leaves to be swept away by every wind that blows and finally lost altogether. Nor would he give them away, as many now do. He would rather collect, from week to week, the leaves that fall under each tree, and by digging them under the soil about the roots, where they will decay, provide in the cheapest manner the best possible food for that tree. If this plan should be tried we should not see old orchards dying out for want of nourishment; but they would, in this simple manner, receive all the nourishment they required. Pear trees, and doubtless the peach, would be greatly benefitted by this procednre. In certain vineyards in France and Italy, the vines are kept in the highest condition by simply burying at their roots every leaf and branch that is pruned off, or falls from the vines at the close of the season. Will not some of our farmers of enquiring minds give this simple process a trial this season? It is a well known fact that no manure is more eagerly sought for by the florist than leaf manure. It enters largely into the compost prepared for potting. Leaves collected and mixed with barnyard manure, greatly enhance its value. Therefore gather up the leaves that nothing shall be lost.
