terms of a contract under which the Government guaranteed certain reimbursements for operating losses, the company claiming that the amount received was insufficient to pay wages.

An agreement was reached today that normal operation should be resumed tonight and continue until June 12.

By that time the Government hopes to work out a permanent settlement of the difficulty. The Government will advance the company $75,000 and the company will return this loan by paying various items of revenue into a special account with the Bank of Montreal.

A PADRE IN THE GREAT WAR

Being the Reminiscences and Recollections of the Veteran Chaplain, Canon F. G. Scott (Copyright in Canada by F. G. Scott; Book rights reserved).

A BARGAIN IN PRISONERS

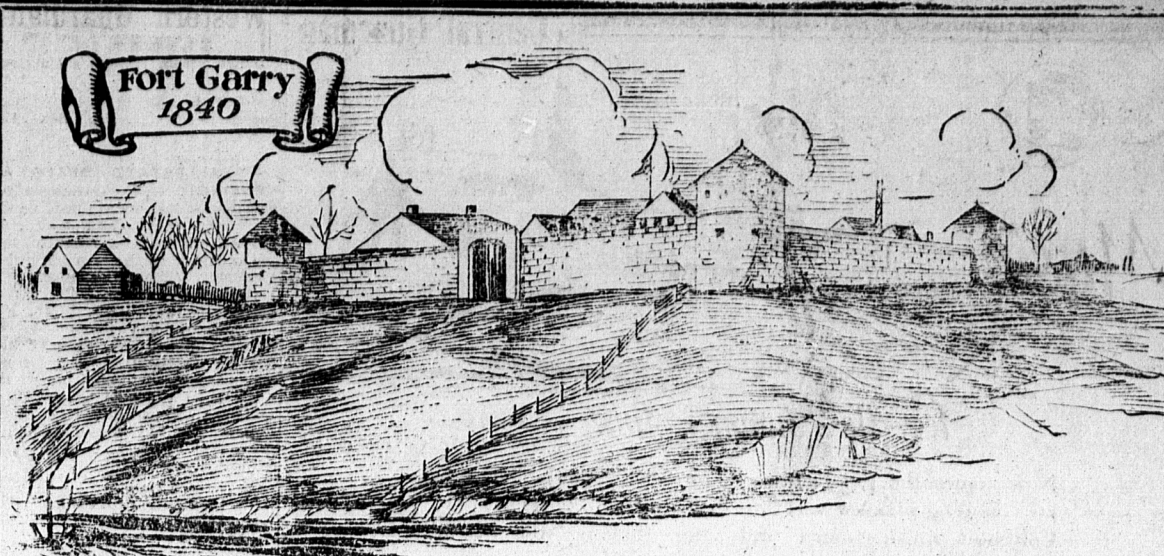

I was going on ahead when I came to a large shell hole that had been made in some previous battle. At the bottom of it lay three apparently dead Huns. I was looking down at them wondering how they had been killed, as they were not messed about. I thought that they must have died of shellshock, until one of them moved his hand. At once I shouted, "Kamarad", and to my intense amusement the three men lying on their backs put up their hands and said, "Kamarad! merci! merci!" It was most humorous to think that three human beings should appeal to me to spare their lives. I told them in my best French to get up and follow me, and called out to the sergeant, "Sergeant, I have got three prisoners." My desire to take a prisoner had been a standing joke among our men. Whenever they were going into action I used to offer them $25.00 to bring out a little German that I might capture all by myself. I used to tell them not to bring out a big one as it might look boastful for a chaplain. Here were three ready to hand for which I had to pay nothing. We moved on through the smoke, a most comical procession. The sergeant went ahead and I brought up the rear. Between us went the three terror-stricken prisoners, crouching every now and then when shells fell near us. At last we stumbled on a company of the 2nd Battalion coming forward, and I called out to them, "Boys, I got seventy five dollars worth of Hens in one shell hole." Our gallant Canadians at once took the three unfortunate men, who looked as if they expected to have their throats cut and having relieved them of the contents of their pockets and removed their buttons and shoulder straps, gave me one of the latter as a souvenir.

INTO ENEMY TERRITORY

The sun was now high in the heavens and it became very hot, but the autumn fields looked beautiful and as there were no hedgerows or fences the low rolling hills gave one the sense of great expanse, and were an ideal ground for a battle on a large scale. While I was looking after the wounded I heard the cheering of the 16th Battalion who had reached their objective and were settling down to rest and to have some food. I made my way then and found the Colonel in high glee over what his men had done. It had been a splendid routing of the enemy. The battalions of the 1st, and 2nd, Brigades followed up the attack and were now moving forward, so I followed after them. It was a delightful feeling to be walking through the golden harvest fields with the blue sky overhead and to know that we were advancing into the enemy's land. It seemed as if by our own labours we had suddenly become possessed of a vast property and that everything we found was lawfully ours. It is no doubt that them of the contents of their pockets and removed their buttons and shoulder straps, gave me one of the latter as a souvenir.

TO-DAY it costs less

TO-DAY it costs less to paint than it did. The cost of materials has led in the downward economic trend of manufactured products. But no matter what it costs, the fact remains that it always costs more not to paint than to paint. Rust and rot go on till you check them. The logical time to paint and varnish is NOW.

The Building of Fort Garry in 1821 marked the end of the strife among the fur traders and the first firm beginning of the great agricultural development of the West. For 101 years the prairie provinces have drawn more and more on the other portions of the Dominion for timber and lumber.

It took nature from 75 to 300 years to provide the lumber to house the settlers on the western plains. Unless these homes are properly protected by paint and varnish they will require what would otherwise be needless repair and replacement within 25 years from the date of construction.

The opening of new grain-growing areas and the growing population of our present agricultural districts will cause a further drain on our forest resources. Saving surfaces both new and old is becoming a greater necessity every day.

The life of buildings, fences, implements, bridges and furniture may be trebled and quadrupled by the judicious use of paint and varnish. Saving the surface should go hand in hand with the re-forestation policies of our governments.
