

Education And Agriculture Estimates Are Discussed

During consideration of the estimates for the Department of Education R.R. Bell, leader of the Opposition, suggested the salary paid the principal of Prince of Wales College was too low and thought because of it the possibility of losing him to another institution existed. Hon. Keir Clark, Minister of Education, said the salary of $4,975 was low but the "fringe benefits" such as living quarters provided by the Government brought the total to a worthwhile figure.

A humorous exchange resulted when Mr. Bell said that at least the Government should paint the educationist's house. Hon. Mr. Clark suggested that he and the leader of the Opposition go together and do the job. Mr. Bell was agreeable but remarked that he would probably have to do all the work.

It was noted by Members that teachers' salaries estimates were higher than last year and Hon. Mr. Clark said this was so as the Department was allowing for an increase based on an expected higher academic standing of teachers.

The total budget for education for the coming year is $1,535,490 of which the estimate for teacher's salaries is $860,000 with an additional $10,000 for supplements and $64,990 for salaries for teachers at Prince of Wales College.

AGRICULTURE

The difficulty of obtaining and keeping in the province qualified veterinarians arose again in the Legislature yesterday during a discussion of the estimates of the Department of Agriculture.

Dr. Dewar said that frequently the veterinarians were blamed for the high cost of their services, but he maintained the cost was due in great measure to the necessary use of expensive medicines.

that, but I think the Federal Government is shirking its responsibilities in failing to provide for mental illness.

Dr. Bonnell said the therapy being applied at Riversdale and Hillsboro General Hospitals was as advanced as anywhere in Canada. "But we don't want any false notions that everyone who comes for treatment will go home cured. We have the highest percentage of qualified physicians of any province in Canada," he said.

HEALTH DEPT

Dr. Eric Found, senior doctor on the staff of the Division of Tuberculosis Control in the Department of Health, is presently acting in administration director following the recent death of Dr. P. A. Creelman. Dr. M. L. Bonnell, Minister of Health, told the Legislature that Dr. Found was considering taking the post permanently.

In dealing with the Division of Vital Statistics during his Department's estimates for the coming year Dr. Bonnell told the Members that a new Reference Library was started last year in an endeavour to assist people to more easily obtain birth certificates.

He said it was difficult for those born before 1906 to get certificates and for this reason a Department representative had visited all the churches in the Province asking that they permit the Department to borrow their old records for the purpose of copying them into a Department file. All churches cooperated the Minister said and he felt that this would prove a real service to the people of the province.

WELFARE DEPT

In the discussion of the estimates of the Department of Welfare and Labor in the Legislature yesterday the matter of assistance to needy being gipped on the first day of May was stressed by several speakers.

Mr. George Saville said he felt it was just as necessary for those people to eat in May as it was in April. He agreed that some people did not need help in the winter but there were others who need it permanently. He thought there should be two relief lists, one for temporary aid and one for permanent help.

Russia Has Risen From 7th To 2nd Place As Naval Power

PARIS (Reuters)—Submarines, ships and aircraft of Russia's navy—now the second largest in the world—can threaten the Atlantic lifeline. NATO headquarters said in a statement Monday.

Admiral Jerauld Wright, supreme commander of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's Atlantic fleet, also agreed that the Russian submarine threat today is "certainly greater" than was the Nazi U-boat threat in 1939.

Wright told reporters: But we have greater and more highly-developed anti-submarine forces. We also have the capability of using atomic weapons against the sources of these Soviet submarines.

Wright said his fleet has ships and submarines capable of launching missiles.

He declined to say whether the missiles have atomic warheads, but said those launched from ships could be used against other ships and land targets.

He added that the U.S. Navy has the capability of launching aircraft carrying atomic weapons.

The NATO statement issued at a conference of the NATO members said in the last 10 years Russia's navy had risen from seventh to second place in the world's navies and still is expanding.

Russia is known to have in operation more than 250 long-range submarines and at least 200 more coastal submarines, equipped with the latest devices for undersea warfare.

LARGE SURFACE FLEET
This force is supported by a large surface fleet, including some 25 modern cruisers and about 200 destroyers and escort types, which continue to expand.

In addition some 3,500 shore-based aircraft, mainly fighters and light bombers, have specifically been allocated to the Russian navy.

The NATO statement added: "These large Soviet naval forces, which are greatly in excess of purely defensive needs, have been built with the primary aim of destroying the commerce and vital sea communications of the free world, in an attempt to cut off European NATO from outside help or supplies."

"The Atlantic lifeline is threatened under the sea by submarines, over the sea by the Soviet naval air arm and on the sea by strong surface forces."
