Obituary.

Mr. John Dorsey, of this city, passed away in his prime—universally regretted—at noon yesterday. Mr. Dorsey was widely known as the head of the firm of Dorsey, Goff & Co., and the founder of the Charlottetown Boot and Shoe Factory; and he will be remembered by those who knew him best as an active, enterprising, kindly, and honest man. For many years he was foreman in the establishment of Mr. James Evans, conducting the business of that gentleman until he left the Island. He then commenced business for himself, and failing, left the Island, to return in the course of a few years, and pay every dollar that he owed—both principal and interest! In the meantime he re-commenced business in this city, and afterwards entered into partnership with Mr. R. K. Jost. After some years this partnership was dissolved; and Mr. Dorsey set about the establishment of the Charlottetown Boot and Shoe Factory. Aided by his energetic partner, Mr. Goff, he was eminently successful in this great effort; and the factory is now one of the largest (if not the largest) and most flourishing in the Province. Mr. Dorsey has been unwell during the past two years. A few months ago he went to London and became a patient in Guy's Hospital, of the celebrated Dr. Smith; but, obtaining no relief, he came home to die. The community has sustained a great loss; and Mrs. Dorsey and her children, with other near relatives, will have many sympathising friends to mourn with them;—yet not as those without hope. The memory of the just is blessed; and in Mr. Dorsey the virtue of justness was combined with that of brotherly love.

Editorial Notes.

—The latest fraud reported is that of an attempt to induce English capitalists to invest in bonds of the Newcastle & Middlesex Railroad—which has no existence.

—The Winnipeg Sun criticises Sir Hector Langevin in the following words:—"Sir Hector, the most painstaking and industrious of ministers, will be welcomed to the Northwest by all classes of the population. He is not coming here on a political crusade but on a tour of inspection, and his visit cannot fail to benefit both him and us."

—The Grits have evidently decided not to have a recount of the votes cast at the late election. The time for making an application expired on Saturday but no application was made. The Grits evidently know, as the public know, that a recount would only have the effect of increasing the Liberal-Conservative majority.

—London advices state that "Mr. Gladstone started for Edinburgh on the 27th ult. He was greeted by large crowds along the line. At Warrington Mr. Gladstone addressed the people who who had assembled to greet him. He said the Government would do their duty, but in consideration of the national crisis the issue depended upon the action of the country. At Edinburgh preparations have been made for a grand welcome to the Prime Minister. The windows and balconies of business places and residences throughout the city are decorated, and visitors in large numbers are arriving. Mr. Gladstone has accepted an invitation to attend a meeting of workingmen in the Waverly Market on Tuesday next. Ten thousand tickets are already sold."

—The St. John Sun remarks:—West Ontario was a safe constituency for the Opposition. Mr. Wheler was its representative in the Dominion Parliament, elected in 1882. Mr. Edgar, a gentleman from Toronto, who had been some half dozen times defeated in his attempts to enter the political arena, wanted to be an M. P. Mr. Blake wanted him to be an M. P. Mr. Mowatt was appealed to. Mr. Wheler shortly after resigned. Mr. Edgar was elected by acclamation and this is how it now stands:—Mr. Edgar has the seat in Parliament at the rate of $1,000 per year and travelling expenses. Mr. Wheler has been made burser of the central prison, Toronto, with a salary of $1,200, and incidentals equivalent to about $1,000 extra per year. Yet there is no such thing as bargain and sale in the party which Mr. Blake leads.

J. G. J. Weldon calls a meeting of St. John's Lodge, No. 1, A. F. & A. M, tomorrow, at one o'clock, for the purpose of attending the funeral of their late brother, John Dorsey.

ANOTHER religious riot occurred in Newfoundland on the 27th instant:—"A mob attacked the Roman Catholic missionary yacht at Henley Harbor, threatened the missionary, Father Lynch, with death, tore down the appal flag and tarred the yacht."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The Scott Act.

SIR,—The last number of the Presbyterian contains an editorial paragraph on the working of the Canada Temperance Act in this city, and calls the attention of the Board of License Commissioners to the fact that the law with regard to second and third offences has not, in any instance, been enforced by the Inspectors. I have had an opportunity to carefully examine the wording of the Act in this connection, and I certainly fail to see what is to be gained, either on legal or moral grounds, by refusing to try second or third offences. I have no desire at this time to find fault with the Act or the working of the Act in this city, but I do think the law should be carried out as it is laid down on the statutes, or not at all.

A RATEPAYER.

She Has Two Husbands.

ONE IS LOCKED UP IN STATION FOUR AND THE OTHER IS IN THE PROVINCES.

(Boston Globe, 28th.)

In one of the cells at Station 4, yesterday, sat a young and well-developed lady who was charged with bigamy. Her maiden name was Catherine Dunn, and she was born at Charlottetown, P. E. I. When she was quite young her parents moved to Halifax. She was about fourteen years old when she became acquainted with George C. McDonald, of Summerside, P. E. I. Their courtship was short, and they were married. For some reason or another they did not live happily together, and after five months of married life he left her. Soon after his departure she began keeping company with a young man named Maynard, a corporal in the English army. After three months he was transferred to England. In looking around for another suitor she became acquinted with a young man named Wm. Bannister. About two years ago she and her mother moved to Framingham, Mass. The two lovers, however, kept up a correspondence, and she finally induced Bannister to leave Halifax and come to Boston that he might be near her. He took her advice, and five weeks after her departure he was working in a stable on Ellot street, in this city. They finally agreed to marry. A day or two after they were engaged, Bonnister heard that his intended had kept company with other parties besides Maynard and himself, and, in order to satisfy his mind, he wrote to her and asked if there was any truth in the story. In reply she said the story was false. This was satisfactory to him, and about a week ago he procured the marriage license, and Saturday were married by Rev. Mr. Gunning. The groom not having enough money at present to buy furniture, they lived in furnished rooms at 30 Lagrange Street. The bride's mother, in looking over one of the daily papers a few days ago, saw their names under the head of marriage intentions. She came to Boston and went to Station 4. She told the officer in charge the facts of the case. Yesterday officer Burnett went to where the young couple were living and arrested them, he for adultry and she for bigamy. Her mother claims that she told Bannister that he better not marry her, as she was a married woman. That statement Bannister says is false, as he has never spoken five words to her in his life.

Abdominal Surgery.

Dr. Tait, in a sketch of the history of abdominal surgery (recently given at Montreal) stated that the first operation was performed in 1701, in a village near Edinburgh, Scotland, by Houston, but that it was not until 1809 that his example was followed, and even then it was in Canada that the operation first gained ground. The speaker said that he had always declared and always would continue to do so, that it was Thomas Keith, of Edinburgh, to whom the profession owed their present position as regarded abdominal surgery. He went on to speak of the Listerian methods in abdominal surgery, declaring that he strongly disapproved of them and that after discontinuing the details one by one, he had since January, 1881, given up Listerian altogether. Since that time his example had been followed by all the prominent surgeons, save Dr. Thornton. In a record of 12 operations performed by the latter by Listerian methods, there had been five deaths, as against 25 operations by Dr. Bonta, without Listerianism, where there had only been two deaths. The speaker then alluded to his own success in performing abdominal surgery, and stated that many physicians had thought that he used some secret antiseptic agent. He did not know exactly to what to attribute his success—it was not to fresh air, for many of the operations had been performed in atmosphere that was anything but pure. He could say this much, however, for himself, that he had given up his life to the work and had engaged in no other, that he always paid the most careful attention to details and ruled his nurses and attendants with a rod of iron; that he never operated in a private house if he could help it, in order to keep his patients from foolish friends, then he always insisted upon his patients going to bed at once before seeing him at all; this was a test of their obedience and faith in him, without which they never could get on together. He never engaged a nurse who had ever served anywhere else, and insisted upon their paying the greatest attention to cleanliness. In this way he had collected a large staff of good servants. He had no other reasons than these for his success, and they would doubtless recommend themselves to the meeting. The speaker then endeavored to point out the cause of the great mortality that had marked this operation, whether it was the clamp or the dressing of the wound by chloride of iron that caused it. He also stated incidentally that the percentage of deaths in his cases was only three per cent. The speaker then went on to contrast the old method of not operating unless to save life, with the idea of operating to relieve suffering, and stronly advocated the latter system.

A Curious Case.

Considerable excitement has been caused in Toronto through the elopement of Jonathan Madell, a builder and contractor, and Mrs. Josie Martin, wife of Jacob L. Martin, cabinet maker. Madell leaves a wife and two young children, and Mrs. Martin a husband and two grown-up daughters. The runaway pair were both members of the choir of the College-street Baptist Church, Mrs. Martin being the organist. On Friday Mrs. Martin told her husband she was going to Hamilton to visit some friends. Mrs. Madell had been sent to the country with her children about a fortnight ago, and Madell left on Friday, telling his partner that he was going to see his wife. A letter from Mrs. Madell, addressed to her husband, first aroused suspicion, and then it was ascertained beyond a doubt, that the pair had left together for New York. Madell, who is a good musician, took his harp with him. Mrs. Madell returned from the country with her children, and is almost heartbroken. Mrs. Martin was also a pianist and choir conductor to the West End Christian Association, and Madell was a member of the association choir.
